MEANING OF TERMS

USED IN CLASSIFYING ANNOTATING CASES.

THE different expressions used to describe the effect of the annotating cases have the following meanings, and the classification of the annotating cases has been done strictly in accordance with these meanings. The annotating cases, except such as are classified as "Mentioned," are grouped according to the points in the case which they annotate: within these groups they are listed chronologically, except such as are classified as "Referred to," which come at the end of the group and are arranged inter se in chronological order. Cases which annotate the annotated case generally are grouped together after cases which annotate specific points, similarly arranged, and are followed by cases classified as "Mentioned" arranged chronologically inter se. The terms used in classifying the annotating cases are as follows:—

- "APPLIED" (Apld.).—This expression is used to denote the fact that the principle of law enunciated in the annotated case has been applied to a new set of facts and circumstances in the annotating case.
- "APPROVED" (Apprvd.).—This expression is used to denote the fact that the annotated case has been considered to be good law in the annotating case where the latter is in a higher court than the former.
- "CONSIDERED" (Consd.).—This expression is used where the remarks in the annotating case are devoid of adverse criticism and merely denote the giving of more or less careful consideration to the annotated case.
- "DISTINGUISHED" (Distd.).—This expression is used where the earlier case is not necessarily doubted, but where some essential difference (either on the facts or in law) between it and the annotated case is pointed out.
- "DOUBTED" (Dbtd.).—This expression is used where the court in the annotating case without definitely going to the length of saying that the annotated case is wrong, adduces reasons which seem to show that it is not accurate.
- "EXPLAINED" (Expld.).—This expression is used where the earlier case is not necessarily doubted, but the decision arrived at is justified or accounted for by calling attention to some point of fact or of law which is usually, but not necessarily, one not obvious on the face of the report.
- "EXTENDED" (Extd.).—Compare "APPLIED," supra.
- "FOLLOWED" (Folld.).—This expression is used to denote that the same principles of law are applied in the two cases. It does not necessarily imply that the facts are substantially identical in the two cases.
- "NOT FOLLOWED" (N.F.).—Compare "FOLLOWED," supra, to which it is the adverse.
- "OVERRULED" (Overd.).—This expression is used where the annotating case is on substantially identical facts with the annotated case and in a higher court and the rule in the latter case is held to be wrong.
- "REFERRED" (Refd.).—This expression is used only where the annotating case deals with the point of the Digest paragraph and is without comment of any definite character on the case annotated; and where there is no delicate shade of approval or disapproval which would justify the use of any of the foregoing words.
- "MENTIONED" (Mentd.).—This expression is used only where none of the foregoing terms apply. In other words, it is used only where the case annotated is cited on a point having nothing to do with the point in the Digest paragraph.

NOTE.—This title deals with Local Authorities & their administration. For the law dealing with their rights & liabilities in connection with particular undertakings reference should be made to the appropriate titles, cross-references to which are given at the end of the Table of Contents ; the law relating to corporate bodies generally is dealt with in the title Corporations, Vol. XIII., pp. 263 et seq. Cases to which Local Authorities were parties but in which the principles specially affecting them were not involved are as a general rule excluded.

In this title Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (c. 50), & Local Government Acts, 1888 (c. 41), & 1894 (c. 73), are referred to as P. H. Act, 1875, 1882 Act, 1888 Act, & 1894 Act respectively.

On the trial of a quo warranto information against one of the successful candidates, it appeared that the chairman had by mistake (a) put down votes to one candidate which the voting papers showed had been given for another; (b) had omitted to reckon votes; & also (c) had received as valid votes which were invalid, but as to which he had made no examination:—Held: as to the first & second class of votes, the duty of the chairman was merely ministerial, viz. that of casting up the votes, & as to this his certificate could be impeached; but that as to the third class he had to exercise a judicial duty & as to this therefore his certificate was conclusive.—*R. v. A candidate for election as member of a local board of health had assigned all his property by deed to a trustee for the benefit of those of his creditors who should sign the deed, no sum being mentioned in it as a composition to be paid on the debts therein scheduled as due to them, & the creditors signing the deed thereby discharged him from all debts due to them by him:—Held: he was not disqualified under P. H. Act, 1875, Sched. II., r. 5, which provides that a person "who has entered into any composition with his creditors," shall be ineligible "so long as any proceedings in relation to such composition are pending," even though at the time of his election some of his creditors had signed the deed, while others did not sign it till after the election, for that the deed was not a "composition with creditors." The time specified by P. H. Act, 1875, Sched. II., r. 65, which provides that any casual vacancy on the board occurring "by failure duly to elect," shall be filled up by the board within six weeks, is to be computed from the day on which the retiring member goes out of office, & not from the day on which the election of a member to fill his place is held.—*R. v. 11. — Member of arranging firm.]—Within five years before an election of parish councillors, the firm of which one of the candidates at the election was then a member executed a deed of arrangement for the benefit of their creditors, which deed was duly registered under Deeds of Arrangement Act, 1887 (c. 57). By the deed the members of the firm assigned all their property, real & personal, to a trustee for the benefit of their creditors ratably in proportion to their respective debts. The candidate who had been a member of this firm was, with other candidates, returned as duly elected by a majority of lawful votes. No notice of disqualification was given before the poll was taken. After being returned & after a petition presented against his return, he did not oppose the petition, but affected to retire:—Held: the person in question was disqualified from being elected or from being a parish councillor, on the ground that he had made an arrangement with his creditors within five years before the election.—*WARD v. Act, 1883 (c. 52), s. 122, for the payment of his debts to the extent of 10s. in the pound by instalments, the debtor has made a "composition" with his creditors within 1894 Act, s. 46 (1) (c), & is disqualified.—*BRADFELD v. There was no express agreement as to any fee or commission to be paid to the member for so doing. He collected the rent until the house was sold & then paid to the board the amount of the rent received by him less a sum which he claimed to be entitled to retain as commission, but he subsequently paid to the board the sum which he had retained. After receiving it the board declared the member's office of guardian to be vacant on the ground that by reason of charging commission for the collection of the rent he had become disqualified under 1894 Act, s. 46 (1) (e), for being a member of the board:—Held: the fact that before the declaration of vacancy the employment had terminated & the amount of commission had been paid by the member to the board did not prevent him from being disqualified & the office was, therefore, vacant.—*R. v. By sect. 9 of the general Act, any person who after his “appointment as a comr.” shall “be concerned or participate in any manner in any contract shall thenceforth “cease to be a comr.” By sect. 15, every person who shall act as a comr. “after having become disqualified” shall be liable to a penalty of £50. In an action against deft. for the penalty for having acted as a comr. after he was disqualified, an invoice was produced in the handwriting of deft. addressed “to the Comrs. of St. Ives,” & charging them for lime supplied on several occasions during four months. Deft. became a comr. by reason of possessing the qualification required by the second sect. of the local Act:—Held: (1) deft. was “appointed” a comr. within Commissioners Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 16), s. 9; (2) deft., by being concerned in a contract, became “disqualified” to act as a commissioner within Commissioners Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 16), s. 15; (3) the invoice was evidence from which the jury might find that deft. was concerned or participated in a contract within Commissioners Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 16), s. 9.—*NICHOLSON v. Pltf., who was an alderman of a metropolitan borough, was absent from a meeting of the council on June 6, 1905, & from each subsequent meeting until Nov. 21, when he was again present:—Held: the absence must begin to be reckoned from the first meeting at which pltf. was absent, viz., June 6, & as the six months from that date had not expired on Nov. 21, his office had not become vacant.—*KERSHAW v. One of the comrs., being personally interested in the construction of a footpath opposite his own house, attended a meeting of the comrs., & spoke upon the question of the mode of constructing such footpath:—Held: this was evidence to go to the jury of an acting as a comr.

The jury, not being satisfied that he had voted, found a verdict for deft. We think that there was other evidence of deft.'s acting as a comr. besides the voting; & that his having taken a part in the discussion respecting the mode of executing the work, should have been left to the jury as evidence of acting within sect. 13 of the local Act. If deft. had appeared on that occasion merely in his private capacity, for the purpose of making representations to the comrs. upon the matter in question, as it regarded his own interest, he would not have incurred the penalty; but, if he attended as a comr., & gave his reasons to his brother comrs., & used his influence with them for the purpose of governing their decision, then it would have been otherwise, & the question ought to have been submitted to the jury in which of these capacities deft. did appear (PARKE, B.).—CHARLESWORTH v. 28. — "Voting" on prohibited matter—Presence when unanimous resolution passed—Though votes not expressly recorded.]—An action was brought by an inhabitant of a parish, who was not a ratepayer, against the chairman of a board of guardians claiming a declaration that he was disqualified under 1894 Act, s. 46 (1) because being a servant of a co. which had a contract to supply the guardians with milk he was concerned in or participated in the profit of the contract. It was also alleged that deft. was disqualified under 1894 Act, s. 46 (2) (c), because he had voted on the question of the giving of the contract to the co. in which he was an employee, & pltf. further claimed to recover penalties:—Held: (1) the action was not maintainable, as the proper procedure was by an information in the nature of a quo warranto; (2) the penalties could not be recovered by action, as the statute provided that the penalties should be recovered in a ct. of summary jurisdiction, & that remedy alone could be followed; (3) where a resolution was passed unanimously by a board every member present must be taken to have voted for the resolution, even although the votes were not expressly recorded.—EVERETT v. In Mar. 1897, by deed approved by the Board of Trade, the powers, etc., under the Provisional Order were transferred to a co. By an agreement of even date, after reciting that in part consideration for the local authority assenting to the transfer the agreement was entered into, the co. undertook to erect & maintain a refuse destructor & to create or dispose thereby of the whole of the refuse to be supplied to them by the local authority. This agreement was not approved by the Board of Trade, they having intimated that they were not concerned with that matter. After the co. had begun to work the dust destructor, serious complaints were made by the inhabitants of the district to the local authority on account of the noxious smells thereby occasioned, with the result that the co. declined to perform their agreement to maintain a destructor & dispose of the refuse :—Held : the agreement was not ultra vires of the local authority, but was enforceable by them, their power to enter into it not having been taken away because the terms thereof were not contained in the deed of transfer, which had to be made with the approval of the Board of Trade.—

37. Claim to compensation & right of action distinguished.—By 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 45, local boards of health are authorised to make & maintain sewers, subject to the conditions in sect. 145 that they shall not use, injure, or interfere with any watercourse, stream, river, etc., in which the owner or occupier of any lands, mills, etc., was interested without consent in writing first had & obtained. 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, having by sect. 68 repealed sect. 145 of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, by sect. 73 prohibits the local board from doing any act injuriously affecting any reservoir, river or stream, etc., or the supply, quality, or fall of water contained in any reservoir, river or stream “in cases where any co. or individuals would, if this Act had not been passed, have been entitled by law to prevent or be relieved against the injuriously affecting such reservoir, river, stream, etc.,” without their consent in writing. The local board of D. made certain sewers in execution of the power of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, & 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, & in doing so injuriously affected the stream S. without having obtained the consent of T., who was the occupier of a mill on the S., & entitled to the flow of the S. to his mill. T. obtained a mandamus to the local board for compensation & made a claim (a) for damage sustained in consequence of the board opening the main sewer so as to allow the water of the S. to flow through it for forty-six hours ; (b) for a drain or trap-door being made out of the S., & water allowed to flow out of the S. into the trap-door :—Held : (1) 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 73, was not confined to cases in which a ct. of equity would grant an injunction against the local board & T. was in the position of a person who would, if the Act had not passed, have been entitled by law to prevent the injuriously affecting the S. ; (2) the works of the local board were not authorised by sect. 73, & therefore the claim of T. was not the subject of compensation, but ground of action.—*R. v. Proceedings having been taken under P. H. Act, 1875, ss. 94–96, by resps., a local authority, against applt. in respect of a nuisance, an order to abate the nuisance was made against applt. by the justices. He appealed against the order to quarter sessions, who dismissed the appeal subject to a case. On the hearing of the case a Div. Ct. ordered that the order of quarter sessions should be quashed with costs, & that resps. should pay to applt. his costs of the appeal to the High Ct. to be taxed. The costs of the two appeals were taxed & paid to applt. In prosecuting the appeals applt. reasonably incurred costs to a greater amount than the taxed costs which he received & he claimed from resps. the difference between the taxed costs & the amount so expended by him, as compensation under P. 46. Definition—Whether solicitor remunerated by professional charges included.]—A local Act, by which a poor law union & rural district were dissolved, provided that any officer of the guardians or rural district council who should be in office at the commencement of the Act, & who by virtue thereof should sustain direct pecuniary loss, should be deemed to be an officer entitled to compensation within 1888 Act, s. 120, & that sect. should apply accordingly. By 1888 Act, s. 100, the expression "office" includes "any place, situation, or employment," & the expression "officer" is to be construed accordingly.

Solrs. were during a period of about twenty-six years next before the commencement of the Act from time to time employed by the board of guardians of the union & the rural district council to do such legal work as those bodies required to have done, receiving by way of remuneration for that work the usual professional costs & charges payable to solrs.; & during that period no other solr. was employed by the board of guardians or council:—Held: the solrs. so employed could not be considered as officers of or as holding any "place, situation or employment" under the board of guardians or rural district council within 1888 Act, ss. 100, 120.—Re CARPENTER & BRISTOL CORPN., [1907] 2 K. 47. Nature of office—Treasurer of district council—Whether a "public" office.]—The office of treasurer to a district council is not one with respect to which the remedy of quo warranto will apply.

The duties of the treasurer to the district council are not of that "public & substantial" character which are required to support a quo warranto (WRIGHT, J.).—R. v. WELLS (1895), 43 W. R. 576; 11 T. L. R. 458; 39 Sol. Jo. 585, D. C.

The salary was £50 a year as surveyor, & £100 for the duties connected with the waterworks. A. was employed in enlarging & improving certain old waterworks which were transferred to the corpn., & in laying down mains into the city, & he performed duties therein requiring the skill of an able engineer. For these services the corpn., acting as the local board of health, passed a resolution & order to pay him an extra sum of £100:—Held: such order was legal.—R. v. GLOUCESTER CORPN. (1859), 33 L. Board to a loan for the erection of municipal buildings. They spent, over & above the amount of the loan, a further sum of £18,350, which was borrowed from their bankers, by way of overdraft. In 1907 defts. applied to the Local Govt. Board for leave to borrow the amount thus overspent, but as to £4,910, a portion thereof, sanction was refused. In Oct. 1908, defts. proposed to levy a general district rate to enable them to pay the £4,910, but were restrained by the ct. from doing so until the trial of this action. Before action brought, defts. had paid a sum of £855 for interest on their bank overdraft, & they proposed to pay a further sum of £900 for interest. The most recent of the items composing the £4,910 had been expended more than a year before the date of the proposed rate:—Held: the loan of the sum of £4,910 to defts. from the bank by way of overdraft, without the sanction of the Local Govt. Board, was illegal; defts. must be restrained from applying any part of the general district fund or rate or any other public fund or rate under their control in repayment of the loan or any part thereof; defts. were not entitled to make any payment of interest upon money borrowed without the sanction of the Local Govt. Board, whether such borrowing was by means of overdraft or otherwise; the payment by defts. of the £855 was unlawful & ought to be disallowed by the auditor on auditing defts.' accounts, but this declaration was in no way to affect the power of the Local Govt. Board to remit such disallowed payment, though unlawfully made, under any statute enabling them so to do; defts. must be perpetually restrained from making any further payments of interest upon money borrowed without the sanction of the Local Govt. Board or other statutory sanction, whether such borrowing be by way of overdraft or otherwise.—A.-G. v. TOTTENHAM URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL (1909), 73 J. P. 437; 8 L. G. R. 95.

71. Issue of loan capital — What amounts to issue.]—By Finance Act, 1899 (c. 9), s. 8 (1), (2), where any corpn. propose to issue any loan capital, they shall, before the issue thereof, deliver to the Comrs. a statement of the amount proposed to be secured by the issue, charged with an ad valorem stamp duty.

A corpn. proposing to issue loan capital by the creation of corpn. stock invited tenders on the terms that the stock was to be paid for by the allottees by instalments, the last of which became due on June 21, 1899, after which date the stock was to be inscribed. The stock was applied for & allotted, & prior to June 20, 1899, scrip certificates were delivered to the allottees which entitled the holders, on payment of the remaining instalments to have stock inscribed in their names. Finance Act, 1899 (c. 9), came into force on June 20, 1899:—Held: there had been an "issue" of the loan capital at the latest by the date when the scrip certificates were delivered, & that date being prior to the coming into force of the Act, the duty imposed by s. 8 was not payable.—A.-G. v. LIVERPOOL CORPN., [1902] 1 K. B. 411; 71 L. J. K. B. 195; 86 L. T. 300; 66 J. P. 391; 50 W. R. 328; 46 Sol. Jo. 215.

73. Whether security must be given.]—The Local Govt. Board, in Apr. 1900, sanctioned the borrowing by the Bournemouth Corpn. of the sum of £600 on the credit of the rates, which the corpn. were entitled to mortgage, the amount to be repaid with interest within ten years. The corpn. borrowed this amount from the Wilts & Dorset Bank, & mortgaged a proportion of the rates as security. The corpn. afterwards transferred their account, in pursuance of an arrangement, to the National Provincial Bank, which repaid to the Wilts & Dorset Bank the principal & interest. The mtge. was not transferred to the National Provincial Bank, but a receipt was indorsed thereon. The arrangement provided that the corpn. should pay interest to the National Provincial Bank, that as soon as advances made by the bank reached £250,000 the corpn. should issue stock through the bank, that the banking account of the corpn. should be transferred to the National Provincial Bank, & that the bank should only charge interest on the excess of sums borrowed over balances standing to the credit of the corpn., £1,500 being allowed as a free balance. The auditor surcharged a payment of £2 12s. 6d. to the National Provincial Bank for interest upon the sum of £600 on the ground that a proper security for the sum advanced had not been executed:—Held: on the facts, it being the intention of the parties that there should be a transfer of the loan & of the mortgage securing it from the Wilts & Dorset Bank to the National Provincial Bank, there had, in fact, been no new borrowing on the part of the corpn., & there having been a sanction for the old loan & a security for the same there was no reason for the surcharge. Qu.: whether under P. 76. — Appointment of solicitor as auditor—Whether allowed.]—(1) One of the partners in a firm, acting as attorneys for a parish, was duly appointed auditor of the union comprising that parish, & acted as such until, on the passing of Poor Law Amendment Act, 1844 (c. 101), he became auditor of the district comprising that parish. It was known that he was a partner in the firm; & for some time no objection was made to his acting as auditor, though in doing so he had to allow or disallow bills of costs of his own firm. The objection was at last taken. The auditor, after an unsuccessful attempt to have the audit, as to these bills, conducted by a stranger, which the Poor Law Comrs. would not sanction, held an audit himself, though with the assistance of a disinterested party: that party, however, not acting formally as assessor. The auditor, during such audit, allowed several bills of costs belonging to his own firm. The accounts & allowances being brought up by certiorari; on a motion to quash them:—Held: the auditor, being duly appointed & having accepted the office, was bound to fulfil its duties, & therefore the audit was not void, though the auditor had a direct interest in the accounts.

The appointment, however, of such a person to the office of auditor, is not looked upon by the ct. with approbation.

(2) Amongst the items allowed were the costs of a litigation, in support of rates irregularly made, which in the opinion of the ct., was unnecessary & improper, though the litigation was bonâ fide, carried on under the advice of counsel & sanctioned by the vestry:—Held: these items ought not to have been allowed: & the auditor's allowance of them was quashed.—*R. v. 80. — As unnecessary expenditure of public money—Whether for taxing master or auditor.]—An action was brought against an urban district council, who passed a resolution that prints of the speeches, evidence, & judgment be obtained & supplied to each member, & instructed their solrs. to carry out the resolution. The council lost the action, & besides paying pltf.'s taxed costs, had to pay the costs of their own solrs. The bill delivered to the council by their solrs. contained the usual & proper charges of obtaining prints of the speeches, evidence, & judgment which they had obtained in accordance with the council's instructions: but these charges were disallowed by the taxing master on taxation of the bill as between solr. & client under Solicitors Act, 1843 (c. 75), s. 37, on the ground that they were an unnecessary expenditure of public money. The council admitted that they gave the instructions, & that the charges were usual & proper, & were willing to pay them:—Held: the taxing master on taxation of the bill as between solicitor & client under Solicitors Act, 1843 (c. 73), s. 37, was not entitled to disallow usual & proper charges incurred by the instructions of the client, when there was no question of quantum, on the ground that they constituted an unnecessary expenditure of public money; but the question of unnecessary expenditure of public money was a matter for the auditor under P. H. Act, 1875, ss. 247, 249.—Re PORTER, AMPHLETT & JONES, [1912] 2 Ch. 98; 81 L. J. Ch. 544; 107 L. T. 40; 56 Sol. Jo. 521.

The ct. granted an injunction to restrain the Comrs. from applying any moneys produced by rates towards the promotion of a bill in Parliament the object of which was to obtain an extension of their district.—*A.-G. v. made a general order sanctioning any reasonable expenses to be incurred by a local authority in connection with the public local celebration of the Coronation of King George V. In May, 1911, defts. resolved to expend a sum not exceeding a certain amount upon the Coronation festivities in their district. On June 20, 1911, an action was commenced by the A.-G. on the relation of two ratepayers seeking to restrain defts. from making any order for payment out of the general district rates of this or any other sum towards the local Coronation festivities. On motion for an interim injunction in similar terms, it was contended that the only effect of the general order of the Local Govt. Board was to prevent the district auditor disallowing these expenses, & that notwithstanding that order the expenditure was illegal as being for purposes not authorised by statute:—Held: it was not a case in which the ct. would interfere by injunction before the trial of the action.

A.-G. v. EAST BARNET VALLEY URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL (1911), 75 J. P. 484; 9 L. G. R. 913.

[ 83. — Excessive expenditure on authorised object.]—By Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 62, a metropolitan borough council, as the successors of the Board of Works, "shall . . . employ . . . such . . . servants as may be necessary, & may allow to such . . . servants . . . such . . . wages as (the Council) may think fit." By P. H. Act, 1875, s. 247 (1), as applied to the accounts of metropolitan borough councils, the district auditor "shall disallow any items of account contrary to law, & surcharge the same on the person making or authorising the making of the illegal payment."

In the year ending Mar. 31, 1922, a metropolitan borough council, as in the previous year, paid to its lowest grade of workers, whether men or women, a minimum wage of £4 per week, notwithstanding that the cost of living had fallen during that year from 176 per cent. to 82 per cent. above the pre-war level, the borough council being of opinion that £4 was the least wage which a local authority ought as a model employer to pay for adult labour. The district auditor found that these payments were not wages but gratuities to the employees, & were contrary to law, & starting with the pre-war rate of wages paid by the council, added on a bonus proportionate to the increase in the cost of living & a further £1 by way of margin, & disallowed the excess over that sum & surcharged the same upon the councillors responsible for the payments:—Held: an expenditure upon a lawful object might be so excessive as to be unlawful, & to the extent by which the amount exceeded legality the auditor was bound to disallow it & surcharge the excess upon the persons responsible, therefore the disallowance & surcharge were rightly made.—ROBERTS v. HOPWOOD, [1925] A. C. 578; 94 L. J. K. B. 542; 133 L. T. 289; 89 J. P. 105; 41 T. L. R. 436; 69 Sol. Jo. 475; 23 L. G. R. 337, H. L.; revsg. S. C. sub nom. R. v. ROBERTS, Ex p. SCURR, [1924] 2 K. 84. — — —.]—Early in 1920 a conference was held which had been called by the borough council of Fulham for the purpose of considering the standardisation of wages of municipal employees other than those covered by trade union rates of wages, & was attended by twenty-two out of the twenty-eight metropolitan boroughs. As the result of the inquiries made from all the borough councils, a scheme known as the Fulham Scheme was recommended, providing for the grading of the different classes of manual workers employed by councils of metropolitan boroughs, & suggesting that the minimum wage should not be less than £3 10s. 6d. per week. The scheme also provided that: "Nothing contained in the above scheme to operate to reduce the present wages of any employee in a borough where better conditions prevail." The Fulham Scheme was adopted by the borough council of Woolwich on May 12, 1920. In the same year there was also established a body known as "The Joint Industrial Council for Local Authorities' Non-Trading Services (Manual Workers)," which suggested in regard to the payment of the lowest grade of workers the fixing as a basic wage a sum of 30s. per week of forty-seven hours, to which should be added a bonus in accordance with a certain scheme then formulated to meet the cost of living. It also reproduced the saving clause in the Fulham Scheme under the heading: "Existing privileges to continue." The Woolwich borough council continued to pay wages based upon the Fulham Scheme, although the standard of living had fallen, & they said that such payments were reasonable & proper & within the discretion granted to the borough council by Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 62, & also that they were in accordance with the recommendations of the Fulham conference. At the audit of the accounts of the council for the year ending Mar. 31, 1924, the district auditor found that the council were continuing to pay the rates of wages which they adopted in 1920, although the extra cost of living had fallen to almost half of what it was when these rates were adopted. He accordingly disallowed the payments of wages in excess & surcharged the same upon the councillors responsible for the payments:—Held: the Joint Industrial Scheme was intended to supersede the Fulham Scheme as a guide to local authorities. It was on a wider basis, & was intended to provide for fluctuations in wages according to the changes in the cost of living. As regards the "Existing Privileges" clause which had been copied from the Fulham Scheme, it was not intended to provide for an immutable state of wages which would remain fixed for all time without regard to fluctuations in the cost of living.—R. v. ROBERTS, Ex WOOLWICH BOROUGH COUNCIL (1926), 90 J. 197; 24 L. G. R. 517, C. A.

85. Whether individual members liable — Disallowance of rate to meet expenses.]—Pltf. was engaged in preparing statistics & giving evidence before a committee in Parliament, on behalf of the local board of W. in opposition to a Gas bill which the board had resolved to oppose. The board made a rate to defray the expenses of the opposition, but this ct. held that such expenses were not a legitimate object to be defrayed by the rate. Pltf. then sued four members of the board who were parties to the resolution, authorising the opposition by the clerk to the board:—Held: they were not liable individually.—BAILEY v. CUCKSON (1858), 32 L. T. O. S. 124; 7 W. R. 16, L. JJ.

86. — — — For costs of information on surcharge — Member opposing misapplication.]—Where a local board of health misapplied the rates toward defraying the expenses of a bill in Parliament, the ct. granted an injunction to restrain the further prosecution of the bill, which, however, had been abandoned before the hearing. The auditor had surcharged some of defts., members of the board, with the amount paid for such expenses, & no order was therefore made on that part of the prayer of the information which sought to make them personally liable; but costs were decreed against them.

A member of the board, who proved that he had opposed the scheme embodied in the bill, was held not to be personally liable, & the information was dismissed as against him, with costs against the relator.—A.-G. v. TOTTENHAM LOCAL BOARD OF HEALTH (1872), 27 L. T. 440.

SECT. 11.—LEGAL PROCEEDINGS.

SUB-SECT. 1.—AGAINST AUTHORITY.

A. In General.

88. Restraint of exercise of powers—Powers exercised for double purpose—One purpose ultra vires.]—The Brighton Corp. after a proposal had been made to them that the Automobile Club hold a meeting in the borough for the purpose of motor car trials, & they had been informed that, if the trials were to be held, it would be necessary that the road on which they were to take place should be paved with some suitable material such as tarmac, caused a public highway in the borough, which was at that time paved with macadam, & as a macadam road in good repair, to be paved at great expense with tarmac. The proposed meeting of the Automobile Club was held, & the motor car trials took place on the road in question, which for three days was closed to the public & devoted to that purpose:—Held: under the circumstances, though the corp. had admittedly been influenced in their action by the desire that the motor car trials should take place in the borough, there was nothing to show they had not, bonâ fide, exercised the discretion as to the repair & improvement of highways, vested in them by P. H. Act, 1875, s. 149, the ct. could not interfere with their discretion.

The principal upon which the ct. will restrain a colourable exercise of statutory powers, that is to say an exercise of such powers for purposes foreign to those with which they were conferred, does not enable the ct. to interfere when powers are exercised with two purposes, one of which is foreign to the purposes for which they were conferred, but the other of which is within those purposes. Therefore, even had the fitting of the road for motor trials been a purpose foreign to those for which the powers of the corp. under P. H. Act, 1875, s. 149, were conferred on them, the ct. could not, under the circumstances have interfered; further, that purpose was not foreign to the purposes of the sect., for the improvement of highways with the object of attracting a particular class of traffic to the locality is a matter within the discretion of the local authority under that sect. (BUCKLEY, L.J.).—R. v. BRIGHTON CORPN., Ex p. SHOOSMITH (1907), 96 L. T. 762; 71 J. P. 265; 23 T. L. R. 440; 51 Sol. Jo. 409; 5 L. G. R. 584, C. A.

Out of pocket expenses were to be paid for by them. In an action brought against them, judgment was entered for them with costs, to be taxed as between solr. & client. On taxation the registrar struck out all items, except out of pocket expenses paid by the solr., on the ground that all work done by him in the conduct of the action was covered by his salary:—Held: the taxation was wrong & ought to be reviewed.—*HENDERSON v. 100. — Matter actionable apart from statute.]—

—A local board, under P. H. Act, 1875, causing a nuisance by any act which, independently of the statute, would have given a cause of action to any person, may be made liable in damages, or be restrained by injunction, unless they can show a justification under the powers of the statute. But if a local board do no act themselves to cause a nuisance, but neglect to perform their duty of providing a satisfactory & healthy system of drainage, it is no ground of action by an individual for damages or an injunction, but the remedy is by prerogative writ of mandamus; & semble; this jurisdiction, notwithstanding Jud. 110. — —.]—An urban district council, by resolutions not under seal, retained pltfs., a firm of solrs., to represent them at a local inquiry as to the proposed inclusion of their district in adjoining areas, and to oppose in Parliament a bill for the confirmation of a Provisional Order made by the Local Government Board for carrying the proposed scheme into effect. Subsequently, after work had been done by pltfs. under the retainers, the seal of the council was affixed to the resolutions by which pltfs. were retained as solrs., & sealed copies of these resolutions were sent to pltfs.; the retainer was not accepted in writing by pltfs. The confirming Act having passed, pltfs. delivered their bill of costs to the urban district council & afterwards, upon the dissolution of the council, to defts., between whom the district had been divided:—Held: (1) the confirmation under seal of the original retainers was binding on the district council without a new consideration, & the requirements of P. H. Act, 1875, s. 174, & of the common law had been complied with; the costs were costs properly incurred under P. H. Act, 1875, ss. 297, 298, as being the reasonable costs of a local authority in respect of a Provisional Order made in pursuance of the Act & of the inquiry preliminary thereto; that they were not subject to the requirements of Borough Funds Act, 1872 (c. 91), but came within the exception contained in sect. 8 of that Act; & therefore the urban district council were before their dissolution under a liability, subject to taxation & to the sanction of the Local Government Board, to pay pltfs.' bill of costs; (2) upon the true construction of Torquay Order, 1900, Art. 18, confirmed by the Local Government Board's Provisional Orders Confirmation (No. 14) Act, 1900 (c. clxxxiii), the liability of the urban district council had been transferred to defts.—*BROOKS, JENKINS & CO. v. 114. — Within 1894 Act, s. 68—Severed area formed into new district.]—By an order made by a county council under 1888 Act, s. 57, a part of a rural district was severed from the district & constituted a new urban district, & all necessary adjustments were to be made in accordance with 1894 Act, s. 68. An adjustment of accounts was then made & an agreement entered into between the councils providing for the payment of certain sums in respect of matters therein specified, & these sums were paid. Subsequently, the rural council, finding that the severance was a pecuniary loss to them, requested the urban council to come to an agreement as to the amount to be paid for such loss, but the councils were unable to agree & an arbitrator was appointed to determine the question of adjustment of the financial loss sustained by the rural district by the severance of the urban district, in so far as such loss was not determined by the prior agreement. No claim for such loss was included in the prior agreement:—Held: (1) the adjustment claimed by the rural council was an adjustment within 1894 Act, s. 68, although the severed portion had been formed into an urban district of itself & had not been transferred to an existing district; (2) the claim to have such adjustment was not barred by the prior agreement between the councils.—*Re ST. 115. — On creation of county borough—Exchequer contributions.]—The borough of H. in the county of D. was constituted a county borough by a Provisional Order duly confirmed. The provided for an adjustment respecting financial relations between the county & the borough, & for that purpose applied 1888 Act, s. 32, with the substitution of the Local Government Board or an arbitrator appointed by them for the comrs. referred to in the sect.

In an arbitration held for the purpose of effecting such adjustment the county council made claims against the borough council on the ground that, as regards certain of the county council's expenses, the contributions from the area of the borough which had ceased to be payable exceeded the proportion, if any, of such expenses from which the county council had been relieved; & the borough council made claims against the county council on the ground that, as regards certain expenses, the burden cast on the borough exceeded the amount of contributions from which the borough had been relieved:—Held: on the construction of 1888 Act, s. 32, the claims were matters in respect of which the arbitrator had no jurisdiction to make an adjustment.—WEST HARTLEPOOL COUNTY BOROUGH CORPN. v. 117. — Readjustment—Original adjustment no longer equitable.]—Before 1888 Act, the borough of Hull & the city of York were counties of themselves. By 1888 Act, s. 31, each of the boroughs named in the third schedule, which either had a population of not less than 50,000 or was a county of itself, was made, for the purposes of the Act, an administrative county of itself, & was in the Act referred to as a county borough. Hull & York were among the boroughs named in the schedule, & Hull was therein stated to be deemed, for the purpose of the Act, to be situate in the East Riding, & York in the North, East & West Ridings. By sects. 20, 21 & 22, the proceeds of the local taxation licences & part of the probate duty grant were to be distributed among the counties in certain proportions. Sect. 32 (1), provided that an equitable adjustment respecting the distribution of the proceeds of the local taxation licences & probate duty grant & all other financial arrangements, if any, between each county & each county borough specified in the schedule as being deemed for the purposes of the Act to be situate in that county should be made, in default of agreement, by the comrs. appointed under the Act; & sect. 32 (6) provided that, if after the expiration of five years from the date of an award adjusting the financial relations of any county & borough the Local Govt. Board was satisfied that the adjustment had become inequitable, the Board was to appoint an arbitrator to make a new equitable adjustment. In 1891 the comrs. made an award adjusting the distribution of the proceeds of the local taxation licences & the probate duty grant as between the county of the East Riding & the county boroughs of Hull & York, the award reciting that there were no other financial relations between the county & the two county boroughs. In 1918 the Local Govt. Board, on the application of Hull & York, held a local inquiry, & as the result informed the East Riding county council that they were satisfied that the existing adjustment had become inequitable, & intended to appoint an arbitrator to make a new equitable adjustment. The county council contended that the Board had no jurisdiction to appoint an arbitrator to make a readjustment, as Hull & York had been, before the 1888 Act, counties of themselves & still remained so, & had never for administrative purposes formed part of the East Riding, & the financial relations ordinarily existing between a county & a county borough situate therein did not exist. They applied for a writ of prohibition to restrain the Minister of Health, the successor of the Local Govt. Board, from appointing an arbitrator:—Held: the Minister of Health had jurisdiction to appoint an arbitrator to make a new equitable adjustment upon being satisfied that the original adjustment had become inequitable.—*R. v. By his award he directed defts. to pay pltfs. a certain sum, & directed the costs of the award, viz. £10 10s., to be paid by both in equal shares. No mention was made of the costs of the reference. Subsequently he determined the costs of the reference to be £34 2s. 10d., and the costs of the taxation £4 4s. That sect. does not give compensation for any such loss of profit. The word "income" in s. 62 means existing income, & does not include income which may afterwards be derived from making rates.

 it is enacted that on any adjustment made otherwise than by agreement for the purposes of the Act under 1888 Act, s. 32 or s. 62, or under those sects. as modified or adapted by the particular provisional order, "provision shall be made for boundaries, the council of the district from which a portion of its area has been taken has to levy an extra rate in the pound upon its ratepayers in Southampton & the borough of Bournemouth consequent upon Bournemouth being constituted a county borough under the Borough of Bournemouth Order, 1899, & the Bournemouth (Extension) Order, 1901. The arbitrator awarded (a) that in making an adjustment between the parties of the Exchequer Contribution Account he ought, after making provision for the priority payments mentioned in 1888 Act, s. 23 (2) (i), (ii), & (iii), & before dividing the balance, to allocate to each area one-half of the actual cost year by year of its main roads, but excluding the cost of roads declared main roads since the appointed day &

 (b) that Bournemouth was not entitled to be allotted a share in the net value of the county offices at Winchester:—Held: (1) the arbitrator was entitled in making the adjustment to take into consideration the liability for the maintenance of main roads; (2) he was wrong in refusing to allot Bournemouth a share in the net value of the county offices at Winchester.—Re SOUTHAMPTON

130. Main road expenditure — Whether a priority payment.]—An arbitrator appointed under 1888 Act, to make a new equitable adjustment of the financial relations of the county of Glamorgan
 & the county boroughs of Cardiff & Swansea, by his award apportioning the aggregate proceeds of the local taxation licences & the estate duty grant between these authorities directed that out of such proceeds priority payments should be made to the authorities representing the payments which they were required to make under 1888 Act, ss. 23, (2), (i), (ii), (iii), 34, & the remainder of such proceeds should be divided among them in the proportion of their respective ratable values.
 There were many main roads in the county, few in the county borough of Swansea, & none in the county borough of Cardiff, & on appeal by case stated it was contended on behalf of the county that the arbitrator should have taken into account among the priority payments the annual sums expended by the authorities in respect of maintenance of their main roads. The Comrs. under the Act in making the original adjustment had taken into account as priority payments these last-mentioned sums. There was no evidence that if these sums were not taken into account the county would be placed in a worse financial position within 1888 Act, s. 32 (3):—Held: the duty of the arbitrator was to make what he himself considered to be an equitable adjustment, & he was not bound to follow the original adjustment of the Comrs.; it could not be said that the adjustment made by the arbitrator was not an equitable adjustment because it did not take the main road expenditure into account as a priority payment,
 & the appeal should be dismissed.—GLAMORGAN

135. Demand for poll—What amounts to.]—By P. H. Act, 1875, sched. III., r. 6, which schedule contains the rules as to resolutions of owners & ratepayers under the Act, it is provided that the chairman shall propose the resolution, & the meeting shall decide for or against its adoption, "provided that if any owner or ratepayer demands that such question be decided by a poll of owners & ratepayers," the poll is to be taken in the manner therein provided. A resolution having been declared carried at a meeting of owners & ratepayers, one of the ratepayers present demanded a poll, & another rose & seconded it, "if necessary"; the latter was told by the town clerk that it was unnecessary to second the demand, which had been acceded to; the meeting then separated. Subsequently the original demand for a poll was withdrawn by its proposer, & the mayor refused to treat the action of the seconder as a demand of a poll by him. Upon an application by the second ratepayer for a mandamus to the mayor:—Held: the action of appct. was in substance a demand of a poll by him within sched. III., r. 6.

Part III.—The Parish.

SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

137. "Parish" — Meaning.]—The primary meaning of the word "parish" is the ancient ecclesiastical parish.—Re SANDBACH SCHOOL & ALMSHOUSE FOUNDATION, A.-G. v. CREWE (EARL), [1901] 2 Ch. 317; 70 L. J. Ch. 604; 84 L. T. 815; 49 W. R. 647.

SECT. 2.—BOUNDARIES.

What is included—Parish bounded by water.]—See WATERS & WATERCOURSES.

138. Evidence — Award of Inclosure Commissioners—How far conclusive.]—The determination of the Comrs. under an Inclosure Act, as to the boundaries of a parish to be inclosed, is not conclusive of the fact as to what were the boundaries antecedently to such determination.—R. v. ST. MARY, BURY ST. EDMUNDS (INHABITANTS) (1821), 4 B. & Ald. 462; 106 E. R. 1006.

Annotation:—Reid. R. v. Madeley (1850), 15 Q. B. 43.

139. — Acquiescence by parish.]—When a parish has for several hundred years acquiesced in the notion, that a particular place is not within it, a very strong case should be made out, before a jury can be called upon to find that such place is within the parish (BEST, C.J.).—KING v. BUTTERWORTH (1826), 2 C. & P. 391, N. P.

140. — Perambulations — How far conclusive — Necessity for notice to adjoining parish.]—There was a common on which the inhabitants of the parishes of A. & B. had, from time immemorial, intercommoned & those of B. had always repaired part of a road across it. Under an Act of Parliament to inclose the lands in A. a part F. of the common was set off for the inhabitants of B. which under an Act to enclose the lands in B. was allotted amongst them. The church rates, poor rates, land tax for the part F., after the inclosure, were paid by the inhabitants of B. A question arose, whether the part F. was not within the parish of A.; because by reputation the whole of the common had been considered as being in A., & its inhabitants had in their perambulations, taken it in as belonging to them, & it was also described in old terriers as being in A. The jury found that the part F. was in the parish B. & the ct. refused to grant a new trial; observing that perambulations were no evidence, unless the adjoining parish had notice of them.—WARREN v. SHUTTLEWORTH (1823), 1 L. J. O. S. K. B. 214.

141. — — — Parish bounded by navigable river.]—A wet dock had been made in the bed of a tidal navigable river, partly including what was above low water mark. The perambulations of the parish went along the high water mark; but a part of the same ooze or shore between high & low water mark had been reclaimed, built upon, & rated to the poor for the last fifty years without opposition:—Held: the evidence of acts of ownership outweighed that derived from perambulations, & the parish boundary extended to the medium filum of the tidal channel.—IPSWICH DOCK COMRS. v. ST. PETER, IPSWICH, OVERSEERS (1866), 7 B. & S. 310; 30 J. P. 820.

—See, generally, BOUNDARIES, Vol. VII., p. 321.

142. — Long user.]—The S. Co. were occupiers of a harbour which had been rated for one hundred & fifty years as in parish of P. Along the quay the S. co. had made a tramway which was rented from them by a railway co. Disputes arose as to whether the harbour was within the parish:—Held: the fact of long user was sufficient evidence that the harbour was within the parish.—SUTTON HARBOUR IMPROVEMENT CO. v. PLYMOUTH TOWN GUARDIANS (1890), 63 L. T. 772; 55 J. P. 232; 6 T. L. R. 400, D. C.

145. — Order providing for adjustment of claims under 1894 Act, sect. 68—Whether claim in respect of transferred school included.]—An order by the Local Govt. Board for the transfer to another parish of part of the parish of L., on which part was situate the board school, provided that the powers, duties, & liabilities of the school board of L. in respect of the part transferred should cease, & that the school should vest in the school board of the other parish, & all contracts & liabilities attaching to the L. school board in respect of such school should vest in & attach to the school board of the other parish. The order further provided that any question between the two school boards with regard to their interests in the school, or in any debts & liabilities, whether on account of capital or income incurred by the L. school board in respect of the school, & any other question between them, arising in consequence of the order, should be dealt with in an adjustment under above sect. The L. school board claimed compensation for the cost of having enlarged the school out of income in several years. 147. — Consent of parish meeting—When presumed.]—An action was brought by the parish council in which they were unsuccessful, & they incurred costs to the successful deft. amounting to £92 14s. 10d. A rate of 3d. would realise £54 12s. 0d. & since Mar. 1899, when the financial year began, precepts had been issued for £52, £25 of which went to defray the council's costs, & the balance in parish expenses. After a rule nisi for a mandamus to the council to issue their precept to the overseers to pay the sum due to defts. for costs, two parish meetings were called, but the necessary resolutions were not passed to raise the extra 3d. owing to the small attendances:—Held: as no information was forthcoming as to the proceedings before the action was commenced, it must be assumed consent was given, & the rule must be made absolute.—*R. v. ###### Necessary parties.]

(1) Comrs. were authorised, by Act of Parliament, to raise a sum of money for parish purposes, & to secure it by debenture or assignment of the rates. The comrs. gave a debenture for £1,000 to A., who was treasurer & also comr. A. advanced nothing at the time, but he subsequently advanced the amount, & from that time only he received interest. By subsequent receipts of rates the balance was turned, & A. had funds in hand:—Held: the transaction was not invalid, & A. was entitled to charge full interest on his debenture until he had been formally paid off.

dren's Act.]—A parish council has no title to prosecute a complaint charging a contravention of Children Act, 1908, Part I.—GLASGOW PARISH COUNCIL v. EDWARD, [1914] S. C. (J.) 159. SCOT.

(2) In a suit against comrs. to enforce debentures on parish rates, it was insisted that the ratepayers were necessary parties; because the validity of pltf.'s security was contested; &, because they ought to be present at the taking of the accounts. The objection was overruled, on the ground that the validity of pltf.'s security had been determined in a former suit, in which the A.-G. was a party, & because the ratepayers would be sufficiently represented, in taking the accounts, by the comrs. who were defts. Some only of many comrs., appointed under an Act to raise money on the rates, for parish purposes, were made defts. to a suit by a bondholder to enforce payment. It was objected that all the comrs. ought to be parties. The objection was removed, by the ct. ordering the decree to be served on the absent comrs., with notice that they might attend the taking of the accounts.—*FLETCHER v. It was also agreed that a lease & counterpart of the premises should be prepared & executed on or before Jan. 1, then next, with covenants & agreements pursuant to that contract, & such other general clauses as are usually contained in leases; & there was a proviso, that in case the committee or their successors should think it a more eligible plan to purchase the premises in fee at the price of £420, that then he, the lessor, should convey them accordingly. No lease was ever executed, but the premises, from the date of the instrument, were used as a poorhouse for the parish of H., & the churchwardens & overseers for the time being of that parish paid the rent to E. & his representatives. 179. — — — — —.] — In ejectment by churchwardens & overseers, on demises laid after Poor Relief Act, 1819 (c. 12), it appeared that defts., before & since the statute, had paid rent to the successive churchwardens, & that the late churchwardens & overseers, appointed since the statute, had given a proper notice to quit. Defts. produced a lease, made before the statute, for fifty-nine years, to parties under whom they claimed, purporting to be made with the consent of the vicar, the majority of the aldermen and burgesses or the borough of R. & of others the inhabitants of the parish, whose names were subscribed to a memorandum on the back of the lease expressing such consent. The churchwardens were the demising parties, & the rent was made payable to them & their successors for the time being. The premises were described as belonging to the parish church. On a special case stating these facts:—Held: notwithstanding the consent expressed as above, the premises must be taken to have been parish property, demised by the churchwardens as such: & consequently the lease passed no legal interest in the term, & the present churchwardens & overseers might treat the lessees as tenants from year to year.—DOE d. 180. Acquisition of title—Under Statute of Limitations—Presumption of lawful origin.]—By an award made under an inclosure Act passed in the year 1774 certain lands were allotted & certain roads set out as public highways. From a short time after the passing of the Act the pasturage of one of the roads set out was let annually by the inhabitants of the parish in vestry assembled. The money received from the tenants was devoted to different parochial purposes, & there had been no interference or claim by the lords of the manor until the present action, in which pltf., as lord of the manor claimed damages from deft., who was tenant to the vestry, for trespass in pasturing his sheep in the road. There was no evidence in whom the soil of the road was vested before the passing of the inclosure Act. No grant of the road was produced, & there was no evidence of the enrolment of any such grant:—Held: a lawful origin must be presumed from the long usage, & the presumption was that the road was vested in some person or persons as trustees for the parishioners; the churchwardens & overseers, as trustees under Poor Relief Act, 1818 (c. 12), s. 17, of lands belonging to the parish, had gained a title to the road under the Statute of Limitations, subject to the public right of way.—

180. Acquisition of title—Under Statute of Limitations—Presumption of lawful origin.]—By an award made under an inclosure Act passed in the year 1774 certain lands were allotted & certain roads set out as public highways. From a short time after the passing of the Act the pasturage of one of the roads set out was let annually by the inhabitants of the parish in vestry assembled. The money received from the tenants was devoted to different parochial purposes, & there had been no interference or claim by the lords of the manor until the present action, in which pltf., as lord of the manor claimed damages from deft., who was tenant to the vestry, for trespass in pasturing his sheep in the road. There was no evidence in whom the soil of the road was vested before the passing of the inclosure Act. No grant of the road was produced, & there was no evidence of the enrolment of any such grant:—Held: a lawful origin must be presumed from the long usage, & the presumption was that the road was vested in some person or persons as trustees for the parishioners; the churchwardens & overseers, as trustees under Poor Relief Act, 1818 (c. 12), s. 17, of lands belonging to the parish, had gained a title to the road under the Statute of Limitations, subject to the public right of way.—

I. Legal Proceedings.

182. Right to sue—On behalf of inhabitants—Claiming right to use spring.]—The S. parish council alleged that a spring or well abutted on a high road in the parish of S., & that the inhabitants of S. were entitled under either a lost grant, enjoyment from time immemorial or by enjoyment for twenty years, to the free use of the spring or well, & that such user had been obstructed by deft. Deft. took the preliminary objection that the parish council was not entitled to sue, for either the right was public, in which case the action ought to be brought by the A.-G., or if the action was brought by the parish council as owner of the spring or well the action was misconceived as the effect of 1894 Act, s. 25, was to vest the spring or well in the district council:—Held: the objection was good & 1894 Act vested no right in a parish council to sue on behalf of a number of persons, & on pltf.'s own showing, the soil was vested in the district council.—*STOKE PARISH COUNCIL v. 192. What are contracts under Public Health Acts—Agreement restraining interference with highway.]—An agreement between a local board & a person against whom an action to restrain his interference with a public highway had been commenced by the local board, that the action should be settled by his paying the costs of the board, which exceeded £50, & undertaking not to build on the unbuilt land, the board agreeing not to proceed further as to pulling down the obstruction, is not a contract within the P. H. Act, 1875, s. 173, necessary for carrying the Act into execution so as to require to be sealed with the common seal of the local board under sect. 174; & therefore such agreement though not under seal, is capable of being enforced by the board.—A.-G. v. 193. —Agreement with contractor for compromise of claims.]—An agreement between an urban authority & a contractor employed to con- struct works for them, as a compromise & in full settlement of all claims by him against the urban authority, is not a contract within P. H. Act, 1875, s. 173, necessary for carrying that Act into execution, so as to require to be sealed with the common seal of the urban authority under sect. 174; & therefore, such agreement, though not under seal, is capable of being enforced against the urban authority.—WILLIAMS v. ERITH URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL, [1924] 1 K. B. 819; 93 L. J. K. B. 756; 131 L. T. 303; 88 J. P. 115; 40 T. L. R. 373; 68 Sol. Jo. 537; 22 L. G. R. 448, C. A.

The contract was entered into between H. & deft. borough & was under their seal. H. subsequently assigned the contract to pltfs. H., in entering into the contract, was labouring under a serious mistake. The evidence showed that there was not a common mistake:—Held: pltfs. had not shown that deft. borough was under any mistake when they entered into the contract, but even if there were a common mistake the contract of Mar. 17, 1921, could not be rectified because, having regard to P. 200. How far necessary—Whether directory or imperative.]—11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, which creates local boards of health for particular districts, by sect. 85, empowers the local board to enter into such contracts as are necessary for carrying the Act into execution; & the contract when exceeding £10 is to be under the common seal of the board, & to specify the work, price, etc.; & every contract so entered into is binding upon the board, provided, "that, before contracting for the execution of any works under the provisions of this Act, the said local board shall obtain from the surveyor an estimate in writing, as well as of the probable expense of executing the work in a substantial manner, as of the annual expense of repairing the same; also, a report as to the most advantageous mode of contracting, that is to say, whether by contracting only for the execution of the work or for executing & also maintaining the same in repair during a term of years, or otherwise." By sect. 37, the surveyor is to be appointed by the local board. By sect. 86, expenses incurred or to be incurred by the local board for works done under the Act, the board is to levy a rate in the district benefited or to be benefited thereby; & by sect. 87, a separate account is to be kept, to be called "the district fund account," to be applied to carrying the Act into execution. By sect. 140, persons acting in the execution of the Act are not to be personally liable:—Held: (1) the matters mentioned in the proviso to sect. 85 are directory only as respects contracts entered into by the board with third parties; (2) a contract under seal entered into between the board & a third party for the execution of certain works was valid, although no estimate or report by the surveyor had been previously obtained; (3) an action lay upon the deed itself for non-payment of the sum agreed thereby to be paid, & pltf. was not driven to see to his remedy by mandamus, or bill in equity, or by any such collateral proceeding.

(4) There is nothing in that sect. [sect. 140] to prevent a corp. being liable on this contract, as they would in any ordinary case. All that sect shows is, that the expense incurred by the corp. is to be repaid by a rate. . . . So in this case a corp. contracting under their common seal may be reimbursed out of the rates (PARKE, B.).—NOWELL v. WORCESTER CORPN. (1854), 9 Exch. 457; 2 C. L. R. 981; 23 L. J. Ex. 139; 22 L. 201. — Execution of works & maintenance distinguished.]—A local board of health required the owners of property adjoining a street, not being a highway, to level it; & they having made default, the local board caused the work to be done by contract. Before making the contract, no estimate was made of the annual expense of repairing the work when done; nor was any report obtained as to whether it would be more advantageous to contract only for the execution of the work, or for the execution & maintenance thereof. In other respects the directions of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 85, were followed. On a special case:—Held: as the work when complete would not be repaired & maintained under the Act, or out of the rates, no such estimate or report was required; & the local board might enforce payment of the expenses from the owners, notwithstanding the absence of the estimate & report.

The sect. begins by enabling the board to enter into all such contracts as may be necessary for carrying the Act into execution. If no repairs are authorised, no contract comprising repairs would be within the Act, as necessary for carrying it into execution; & the proviso for the estimate & report is confined to works under the provisions of the Act. If a work may be both executed & repaired under the provisions of the Act, there must be an estimate & report on the execution & the repair; but, if the work may be only executed or only repaired according to the provisions of the Act, the estimate & report need not extend to a work not within the provisions of the Act, & not necessary for carrying it into execution (LORD CAMPBELL, C.J.).—CUNNINGHAM v. works. One of the conditions was that the person tendering should undertake to execute a contract for the due performance of the works & enter into a bond with two responsible sureties for the due & satisfactory completion of the works. Pltf. tendered for the work, & on May 10, 1901, the council resolved that pltf.'s tender should be accepted, & they instructed their clerk to write to pltf. to that effect, & to affix the seal of the council to the letter. Such letter was duly sent:—Held: the acceptance of the tender did not conclude a contract between the parties.

In this case I think that the necessities of the contract imposed on both parties the obligation to agree as to the sureties & that the sureties themselves were to be parties to the contract in the sense that they were by the intended formal contract to be made parties to that contract for the performance of it. It seems to me that that was never done & that there never was any contract (LORD HALSBURY, C.).—BOZSON v. ALTRINCHAM URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL (1903), as reported in 67 J. P. 397, C. A.

205. ——— Contract part performed—Goods supplied not of value of one hundred pounds.]—Pltfs. tendered for the supply to defts. of coals which it was thought would exceed in value £100. The tender contained stipulations that if it was accepted a formal contract should be executed, & that a bond with two sureties should be entered into. The tender was accepted, subject to the formal contract & bond being duly executed. The contract & bond were forwarded to pltfs., but were never executed. Pltfs. afterwards, from time to time, supplied to defts. quantities of coal which were accepted, the value of the coal supplied not amounting, in any one instance, to £50, but amounting in the aggregate to over £50:—Held: defts. were bound to pay, under an implied contract, for the coal so supplied & accepted.—SPENCER, WHATLEY & UNDERHILL v. The indenture recited that the specification had been signed by five members of the local board as was required by the local Act. In point of fact the specification had never been signed, although it had been acted upon. In an action against the sureties:—Held: the mere fact of the specification not having been signed did not release the sureties from their liability.—RUSSELL v. TRICKETT (1865), 13 L. Compromise of claims on alteration of area—One claim unfounded in law—Whether compromise invalidated.]—It is no ground for setting aside a compromise that the claim, or one of the claims, made by one of the parties, was not well founded in law, provided that it was put forward bonâ fide.

On the formation in 1900 of an urban district out of a rural district an adjustment had to be made between the two councils under 1894 Act, of the property, income, debts, liabilities, & expenses affected by the formation of the urban district. A number of claims were put forward by the two councils against each other, including one by the rural council in respect of loss of income owing to the transfer of ratable area from the district of the rural council to that of the urban council. After considerable negotiations the two councils entered into an agreement of compromise by which the urban council covenanted to pay to the rural council a sum of £1,500 by thirty annual instalments of £50 each, in consideration of which the rural council released the urban council from certain specified claims, including the claim for compensation for loss of income owing to the transfer of ratable area, & all other claims, if any, which the rural council had or might have against the urban council in respect of any property, income, debts, liabilities, or expenses, & the urban council also released the rural council from all claims in a similar way. In 1906 the urban council brought an action for a declaration that the agreement was ultra vires the urban council & not binding on it:—Held: the agreement, having been entered into bonâ fide by both councils, was not rendered invalid by the fact that one of the claims included in the compromise subsequently proved to be unfounded in law.—HOLSWORTHY URBAN COUNCIL v. Scarlet fever having broken out, an urban sanitary authority appointed a committee under P. H. Act, 1875, s. 200. A medical man agreed verbally with the committee on behalf of the urban sanitary authority, to attend the patients at the rate of 5s. 3d. per tent per day, & attended until the amount due was nearly £100:—Held: (1) the committee men were not liable to pay the medical man; but (2) although more than £50 became due, it was not a contract "whereof the value or amount exceeds £50" within P. This particular contract was not in writing & sealed, but then the question is, whether in value or amount it exceeded £50, inasmuch as the contract was only for £1 a week, & was not for any defined period? 217. Jurisdiction of auditor—As to evidence.]—

(1) The High Ct. upon an application under P. H. Act, 1875, s. 247 (8), for a certiorari to bring up & quash a disallowance made by a district auditor in the accounts of a local authority to whom that sect. applies, have power to review the auditor's decision not only when it is erroneous in point of law or where it is unsupported by evidence, but also where the ct. is satisfied that the auditor's decision is erroneous in point of fact.

(2) An auditor is not justified in surcharging members of a committee of a local authority who have honestly recommended the acceptance of a tender for the supply of goods which was not in fact the lowest tender.

(3) Now it is plain that under the first limb of P. H. Act, 1875, sect. 247 (7), the auditor is bound to disallow every item of account contrary to law, & that he may "surcharge the person who authorises the making of the illegal payment," although he has not himself made it. Strictly speaking, such a person would not be a person bringing in an account subject to audit & therefore liable to be surcharged in such account. But I think "surcharge" is used in a less technical sense & is equivalent to "charge"; & this enables me to reach the conclusion that the words "any person accounting" in the second limb of the sub-sect. are wide enough to include any member of the local authority whose accounts are before the auditor. Sect. 250, which relates to accounts of officers or assistants of any local authority who are required to receive moneys or goods on behalf of the authority, supports this view. Now the power & the duty of the auditor must be recognised as of the utmost importance for the protection of the ratepayers, & I am not prepared to place a narrow construction upon this sub-sect. The statute has enabled an auditor, who, in my opinion, has no power to administer an oath or to subpoena witnesses, & who is not a judicial officer in the ordinary sense, to decide that a member of a local authority has been guilty of negligence or misconduct & to assess the amount of loss incurred thereby. The member whose conduct is thus attacked has, so far as I can ascertain, no power to require the attendance of persons whose statements, though not given under oath, might relieve him from the imputation. Happily, this extraordinary jurisdiction conferred upon the auditor is subject to review in the K. B. Div., where the merits will be dealt with upon legal evidence (COZENS-HARDY, M.R.).

(4) I will now pass on to consider the important question of the statutory duties & powers of the auditor. These are defined by P. H. Act, 1875, s. 247 (7). The first part of the sub-sect. deals only with illegal payments, i.e., such as are ultra vires. They are to be surcharged on the person making or authorising the making of the payment. It is clear that persons answering to either of these descriptions must necessarily be persons who are before the auditor in his capacity as such, & must be persons who either have had money of the corpn. for which they must properly account, or have had control of funds of the corpn. which they have had authority to pay away, & for the proper expenditure of which they have therefore to account. There is, therefore, no difficulty in construing the language of this part of the sect. The auditor must surcharge the illegal payment on the person offending either by disallowing it from the credits claimed by him or by increasing the debts admitted by him (MOULTON, L.J.).

(5) The auditor does not claim, nor could he, in my opinion, properly claim, to exercise any control over questions of policy; but he does claim the right to check & challenge all items of administration. It is not easy to draw the line between policy & administration, or to give a definition except by way of example, but in my opinion the establishment of a works committee would be a question of policy into which the auditor could not go, but the payment of abnormally high wages to the workmen employed by such committee would be a matter of administration (FARWELL, L.J.).—R. v. ROBERTS, [1908] 1 K. B. 407 ; 77 L. J. K. B. 281 ; 98 L. T. 154 ; 72 J. P. 81 ; 24 T. L. R. 226 ; 52 Sol. Jo. 171 ; 6 L. G. R. 268, C. A.

220. — Assessment of surcharge — Whether court will interfere.]—By resolutions passed in June & July, 1920, a metropolitan borough council resolved to adopt as a general principle the payment of a minimum rate of wages of £4 per week to full time male employees of the council over twenty-one years of age, & who were members of a trade union, & similarly of £3 10s. per week to full time female officers & employees of the council, & they continued to pay those wages without taking into account the decrease in the cost of living. In the audit for the year ended Mar. 31, 1922, the district auditor took the view that the council had not paid due regard to the interests of the ratepayers whose funds they administered, that they had made payments for wages which were far in excess of those which were necessary to obtain the services & to maintain a high standard of efficiency, & which were thus in reality gifts to their employees in addition to remuneration for their services, & that the persons responsible for such excessive payments had acted arbitrarily & contrary to law. In the result, he disallowed £2,000, & surcharged that sum upon the councillors, whom he considered to be responsible. In determining that figure he took as his starting-point the council's wages scale of 1914 increased by a bonus proportionate to the increase in the cost of living & further increased by 3d. per hour in each case as a further margin:—Held: (1) in disregarding the class of work to be done & the cost of living which the workman had to pay, the borough were not properly exercising the discretion conferred upon them as trustees of the ratepayers' money under Metropolitan Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 62 (2) once it had been determined that the wages had not been properly fixed, the rule which had been applied by the auditor in his discretion was one with which a ct. would not interfere.—ROBERTS v. CUNNINGHAM (1925), 134 L. T. 421; 90 J. P. 32; 42 T. L. R. 162; 24 L. G. R. 61, H. L.

221. Authorised expenditure—Repair of conveyance for use of council.—An urban district council, having purchased an omnibus for the purpose of conveying the members of the council about the district when performing their ordinary duties, expended certain moneys in repairing such omnibus. The district auditor having surcharged this amount:—Held: such surcharge was right.—R. v. DOLBY, Ex p. NORTHFIELD (1902), 87 L. T. 27; 66 J. P. 521; 18 T. L. R. 434; 46 Sol. Jo. 359.

222. — Opposition to local bill—Bill not affecting duties, rights or privileges of council—Necessity for consent of ratepayer.—An urban district council cannot apply the district rate towards payment of the expenses of opposing a local bill not affecting their own duties, rights, or privileges, without first obtaining the consent of the ratepayers under Borough Funds Act, 1872 (c. 91), s. 4, nor is 50 & 51 Vict. c. 72, s. 3, under which such expenses if incurred may be sanctioned by the Local Govt. Board, intended to prevent the ct. from intervening to restrain such expenses being thrown on the rate when the sanction of the Local Govt. Board has not been applied for.—*A.-G. v. 224. — Payments for goods supplied—Deliveries insufficiently checked.—(1) A rule for a certiorari was obtained under P. H. Act, 1875, s. 247, to quash certain surcharges made by a district auditor of the Govt. Board:—Held: the decision of the auditor was wrong on the evidence before him & there being jurisdiction to review his decision, both on matters of fact, & in law, the rule for the certiorari must be made absolute.

(2) The district auditor, under P. H. Act, 1875, s. 247, disallowed & surcharged certain payments made by the Finance Committee of a local authority for shingle & by the Highways Committee in respect of a contract for the supply of certain goods, upon the grounds that the shingle as delivered by the contractors must have been short in weight, the deliveries not having been, in his opinion, properly checked. Upon an application for a writ of certiorari to bring up & quash the disallowance:—Held: with regard to the shingle there was no evidence of short delivery or of anything beyond possibly a lax method of keeping a check upon the amount delivered, & there was no evidence that the payments were illegal.

(3) An auditor, if not satisfied, is entitled to investigate any item submitted to him, & if acting bonâ fide he comes to a fallacious decision, he is nevertheless entitled to receive his costs, in showing cause against a rule for a certiorari, out of the rates.—*R. v. The council of one district assessed it at its net annual value, but the Ct. of Appeal held that it should have been assessed as a railway at one-fourth of its net annual value. For the purpose of an appeal to the House of Lords the councils of the three districts agreed to pay the costs in the Ct. of Appeal & the House of Lords pro rata:—Held: in an action against one of the two councils who had thus agreed to contribute to the costs of the third council's appeal, the agreement was ultra vires, & an injunction was granted to restrain debts from carrying out the terms on their part & from any further expenditure of public money in respect thereof.—*A.-G. 233. What amounts to adjustment—Agreement for sharing expenses of joint hospital.]—Under the terms of a deed made in 1885 the predecessors in title of pltfs. & of defts., & the corpn. of B., were entitled to the joint use of a hospital, & the expenses of maintaining the hospital were yearly apportioned between & paid by the several authorities. In 1898 another deed was made between the same authorities or their successors by which the provisions of the deed of 1885 as to the management of the hospital were varied, & it was provided that that agreement might be determined by a six months' notice in writing.
 Under the terms of a third deed made in 1905 between pltfs. & defts. & the corporation, & stated to be supplemental to the two previous deeds, the corpn. withdrew & were released from all liability under the deeds of 1885 & 1898, & the provisions for the management of the hospital were again varied. In Apr. 1906, defts. gave notice under the deed of 1898 to determine the three deeds & ceased to use the hospital & to contribute to its maintenance. After long negotiations which was terminated in Nov. 1909, pltfs. in Dec. 1909, brought an action to recover from defts. their proportion of the management expenses of the hospital for the three years prior to Mar. 31, 1909:—Held:

 the notice was invalid & the deeds of 1885 & 1905
 were still subsisting, & constituted an agreement adjusting liabilities & expenses within 1888 Act, sect. 62, & defts. were not entitled to have the questions between themselves & pltfs. referred to arbitration under sub-sect. 2 of that sect.—

Part VII.—The Borough.

NOTE.—The principal Act now governing Municipal Corporations in England is Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (c. 50), which repealed Municipal Corporations Act, 1835 (c. 76), referred to in this Part as the 1882 Act & 1835 Act respectively. In considering the cases set out in this Part regard must be had to their date, the Act under which they were decided, & the effect of subsequent Acts.

SECT. 1.—THE MUNICIPAL CORPORATION.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

236. Evidence of existence—Before 1835 Act—Inclusion in Schedule of 1835 Act—Whether conclusive.]—The insertion of the name of a town in Schedule A. of above Act, is prima facie evidence of the existence of a municipal corpn. there; but if facts be adduced on affidavit to negative that presumption, a mandamus will not issue to compel the delivery of books, papers, moneys, etc., by the ancient officers of the town, to the council elected under the new Act.—R. v. GREENE (1837), 11 Ad. & El. 548; 1 Nev. & P. K. B. 631; Will. Woll. & Dav. 291; 1 J. P. 197; 112 E. R. 210.

Annotation:—Mentd. R. v. Haughton (1853), 17 Jur. 455.

237. — Production of charter.]—It is not necessary to produce the charter of a city to prove that it is a municipal corpn.; production of the minutes of the council at which the alderman was chosen for the ward is sufficient evidence, if it proves that the councillors of the ward were present on the occasion, & it is a sufficient compliance with 1835 Act, s. 43.—R. v. TURNER (1872), 12 Cox, C. C. 313.

238. Whether a person—Within 39 Eliz. c. 5.]—Above Act enables "all & every person & persons" to found hospitals for the poor & to incorporate them. A municipal corpn. is included in the words "every person & persons," & may exercise the powers given by the Act.—NEWCASTLE CORPN. v. A.-G. (1845), 12 Cl. & Fin. 402; 8 E. R. 1464, H. L.; *affg. S. ## SUB-SECT. 2.—STYLE OF CORPORATION.

See, generally, CORPORATIONS, Vol. XIII., pp. 279 et seq.

239. Before 1835 Act—Mayor, bailiffs & burgesses.]—The name of a corpn. is "the mayor, bailiffs, & burgesses," & the power of electing & removing the recorder is in the mayor & burgesses only; qu.: whether a mandamus to restore be well directed to the latter only.—HOLT'S CASE

240. Under 1835 Act—Corporation of city—"Mayor, alderman & citizens."—The proper appellation of the corpn. of a city, since above Act, is, "the mayor, aldermen, & citizens of the city."—A.-G. v. WORCESTER CORPN. (1846), 2 Ph. 3; 1 Coop. temp. Cott. 18; 15 L. J. Ch. 398; 8 L. T. O. S. 85; 47 E. R. 722, L. C.

241. — — — — —.]—Under above Act the corpn. of a city ought to be styled the aldermen & citizens of the city.—ROCHESTER CORPN. v. LEE (1846), 15 Sim. 376; 60 E. R. 665. See, now, 1882 Act, s. 8.

242. Style of corporation as party to contract party—"Acting as the local board"—Whether liability affected.]—21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 24, which enacts that in corporate boroughs the local boards "shall be the mayor, aldermen & burgesses acting by the council," does not make the local board a new & separate body, but in substance enacts that in corporate boroughs the corpn. shall be the local board; & if in making contracts the name & style of the corpn. "acting as the local board" is used, the corpn. is the essential body & contracting party & may be sued as such on the contracts.—ANDREWS v. RYDE CORPN. (1874), L. R. 9 Exch. 302; 43 L. J. Ex. 174; 23 W. R. 58.

SUB-SECT. 3.—CONTINUITY OF CORPORATION.

See, generally, CORPORATIONS, Vol. XIII., p. 278, Nos. 81–87.

243. Effect of 1835 Act—New corporations not created.]—Semble: above Act does not create new corpsns.—LUDLOW CORPN. v. TYLER (1836), 7 C. & P. 537.

244. — — — — —.]—(1) Above Act has not destroyed the individuality of the old corpsns., but has merely varied the mode in which the officers are to be chosen.

(2) If some of the members of a corpn. are instrumental in unlawfully dispossessing the corpn. of its property, they are personally liable.—A.-G. v. WILSON (1837), 9 Sim. 30; 7 L. J. Ch. 76; 1 Jur. 890; 59 E. R. 267; subsequent proceedings (1840), Cr. & Ph. 1, L. C.

PART VII. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 1.

d. Whether a person—Within Dominion Railway Act, 1888.]—"Person" in sect. 188 of above Act includes a municipality.—TORONTO CORPN. v. CANADIAN PACIFIC RY. CO., [1908] A. C. 54.—CAN.

e. Creation of new corporation—Powers conferred by legislature.]—On the creation of a municipal corpn. the legislature may confer on it the powers conferred upon municipal corpsns. generally by any particular law or body of laws in the province.—WETASKIWIN CITY v. C. & E. TOWNSITES, LTD. (Alta.), [1918] 3 W. W. R. 145.—CAN.

f. Municipal year.]—The municipal year, under 12 Vict. c. 81, begins on Jan. 1, & ends on Dec. 31, & is not to be reckoned from the day appointed for the municipal elections of one year to the same day of the next year.—

248. — — — — —.]—The effect of above Act is that it is not a new corp'n., but a newly constituted govt. of the old corp'n.; what is called the new corp'n. remains subject to all the liabilities of the old corp'n. The liabilities of the old corp'n. pass with their corporate property to the new corp'n., which is a continuation of the old corp'n., with a change of government (LORD LANGDALE, M.R.).—A.-G. v. 251. — — — — — Succession to property.]—A.-G. v. LEICESTER CORPN., No. 249, ante.

252. — — — — — Trust property.]—Testator, by his will, dated in 1586, devised the manor of C., & all his lands in C., to trustees for the founding, by the mayor & aldermen of Bristol, of an hospital for the education of poor infants & orphans, & that they should be for ever the governors, etc., of the same. Queen Elizabeth by charter ordained that the said mayor & common council, & their successors, should be called "the governors of the hospital of Queen Elizabeth of Bristol," & should have the government of all the said orphans, etc., & of all the lands, tenements, etc., & should be a body corporate & politic of itself, for ever, capable of holding lands, etc. The hospital & lands continued vested in the mayor & common council as governors of the hospital down to the passing of above Act. By above Act, s. 71, it was enacted, that, in every borough in which the body corporate shall stand seised of any hereditaments in trust for charitable uses or trusts, all the estate, right, interest, & title, & all the powers of such body corporate, in respect of the said uses & trusts, should continue in the persons who, at the time of the passing of the Act, were such trustees as aforesaid, until Aug. 1, 1836, or until Parliament should otherwise order, & should immediately thereupon utterly cease & determine; provided that if Parliament should not otherwise direct on or before Aug. 1, 1836, the Lord Chancellor should make such orders as he should see fit for the administration, subject to such charitable uses & trusts as aforesaid of such trust estates. Parliament having made no provision, the Lord Chancellor, by an order dated Oct. 19, appointed certain persons, being in fact the members of the new corp'n., to be trustees of the charity estate, lately vested in the corp'n. of Bristol. An action of ejectment having been brought on demises by the governors of the hospital, & also by the old & new corp'n. of Bristol, to recover possession of the charity estates:—Held: (1) notwithstanding sect. 71, the legal estate remained, & had always been vested in the corp'n. as governors of the hospital, & sect. 71, affected only the equitable interest in, or rather the right of administering the charitable funds; & therefore pltf. was entitled to judgment on the demises from the corp'n.; (2) the meaning of sect. 71 was, that the estate & interest, in respect of the uses & trusts only, & not the legal estate, was to continue in those in whom it was then vested.

(3) Qu.: whether above Act, sect. 71, applied to this case, because the parties seised of the land were not the municipal body corporate of Bristol, but a separate corp'n., viz. the governors of the hospital, though the natural members of both bodies corporate were the same.—*DOE d. On a case stated, it was found that such charter & grant had been made in fact, & such notice given, & that quarter sessions had in fact been held under the grants; but that there had been no petition for incorporation by a whole or a majority of the inhabitant householders; & that the grant of quarter sessions had been made on a representation to the Crown that there was a gaol in B., whereas in fact there was none:—Held: (1) the charter of incorporation was nevertheless valid; (2) in this proceeding, the allegation that there was no gaol could not be set up against the grant of quarter sessions, no objection being made on the part either of the Crown or any inhabitant of the borough; & the proper course for raising the objection was by a sci. fa. to repeal the grant; & this, although the expenses of the quarter sessions of the borough had in part been defrayed by the county rate.—*R. v. 260. Effect—On existing prescriptive right.—(1) A corp. in 1637, let the quay duties, profits, & advantages as anciently have been gotten, & at the expiration of the lease, continued letting them to various people down to 1730, when they let them annually, at a survey held by the town steward until 1782, from which time they were collected by the corp. The first lettings were evidenced by the town clerk producing old books containing memoranda of lettings. Of the annual lettings no lease was ever prepared or executed within the recollection of any one. This was held proof of a regular prescriptive usage, for the ct. would not presume that the tolls of which the leases were granted were of a different nature from the tolls collected.

(2) The acceptance of a charter containing only an affirmative grant, does not take away a pre-existent prescriptive right. Aliter, if it contains an express renunciation of former grants.

(3) A variation in modern times of a fixed ancient toll, will not affect the right to such toll.

(4) A grant, that “burgesses & inhabitants may be quit of toll, passage, pontage, murage, etc., throughout our whole realm of England except the city of London,” is no exemption from toll in their own town.—TRURO CORPN. v. REYNALDS, TRURO CORPN. v. BASTIAN (1832), 8 Bing.

Definition & qualification.—See, now, Representation of the People Act, 1918 (c. 64).

“Burgess” includes citizen.—See 1882 Act, s. 7 (1).

263. Claim to exercise franchise — Whether tested by quo warranto—As claim to exercise corporate office.—A burgess is not an “officer” within 6 & 7 Vict. c. 89, s. 5, & therefore cannot be called upon to show cause in the first instance why a quo warranto information should not issue against him for exercising the franchise.—Re MILNER (1844), 5 Q. 264. Burgess illegally upon roll—Whether quo warranto lies.—A quo warranto will not be granted against a burgess for being illegally upon the burgess roll, if it does not appear that he has in some way exercised his office.

A party was inserted by the overseers in the burgess list, & duly objected to by another burgess, but at the time of the revision, the mayor & assessors improperly, as it was alleged, retained his name, but it did not appear that he had since in any way used or exercised his office of burgess:—Held: a quo warranto would not lie against him.—

have been made to remove him from his office of alderman; & that, when the ct. gave judgment on this motion, there would barely have been time to obtain judgment of ouster before the year of the mayoralty would expire. The ct., in the exercise of their discretion, discharged the rule. Deft. was elected mayor Nov. 9, 1842, being then absent from the borough, to which he did not return until Nov. 23. He had in the meantime casual information of his election, but did not receive any official notice of it until his return. Within five days after his return he made the requisite declaration & took upon him the office:—Held: a sufficient acceptance of the office within five days after notice, under 1835 Act, s. 51.

Casual information is not sufficient. . . . At an election for two councillors of a borough on Nov. 1, 1851, A., B. & C. were candidates. A. & B. had the greatest number of votes, & were returned as elected; but B. was disqualified, & the voters had notice of his disqualification. In July, 1852, judgment of ouster was signed in a quo warranto filed against B. On Oct. 26, 1852, C., by a notice, required the council to admit him as a councillor, & to administer to him the declaration required by 1835 Act, s. 50. On Nov. 8, 1852, C. made the declaration, & on Nov. 9, voted at the election for mayor, when his vote was rejected:—Held: C. was elected on Nov. 1, 1851, & ought to have been then returned; & having made the declaration before Nov. 9, 1852, he was entitled to vote at the election of mayor.—*R. v. 281. Who may resign — Whether officer becoming disqualified.]—By 1835 Act, s. 52, it is enacted that a town councillor who becomes bkpt. or compounds with his creditors by deed, shall “thereupon immediately become disqualified & shall cease to hold the office of such councillor,” & “the council thereupon shall forthwith declare the office void, & shall signify the same by notice, etc., & the said office shall thereupon become void”; but that “every person so becoming disqualified & ceasing to hold such office on account of his being so declared bkpt. or having compounded with his creditors as aforesaid, shall, on obtaining his certificate, or on payment of his debts in full, be capable of being re-elected to such office.” By Debtors Act, 1869 (c. 62), s. 21, those provisions are extended to persons who have compounded with their creditors “whether by deed or otherwise.”

B., a town councillor of N., in July, 1872, made a composition with his creditors under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 71, s. 126, under which a resolution was come to for a composition of 3s. 6d. in the pound, secured, in satisfaction of B.’s debts, the first instalment of which was payable six months after registration of the confirming resolution. The registration took place on Sept. 23. Nov. 9, the above letter was read, & B.’s resignation was accepted by the council; & on Nov. 18, there having been no declaration by the council that the office was void, he was re-elected a town councillor. Upon a case stated for the opinion of the ct., pursuant to Ballot Act, 1872 (c. 33), s. 15:—Held: B. having by reason of his having compounded with his creditors ceased to hold the office of councillor, was incapable of resigning it, & the council not having pursued the course pointed out by 1835 Act, s. 52, the election was therefore void; & B. not having “paid his debts in full,” he was not qualified for re-election under that sect.—HARDWICK v. 288. Resignation by unqualified officer involuntarily elected—After application quo warranto—

Liability for costs.]—M., an unqualified person, was elected a town councillor of the borough of B., without having taken any part in the election; but on being informed by the town clerk, that if he did not accept the office he would be liable to a fine, he signed the usual declaration. Upon application for a quo warranto, he sent in a written resignation to the town clerk, which was accepted:—Held: the relator was not entitled to the costs of the application.—*R. v. 289. By composition with creditors — Necessity for declaration by council that office void.]—J., a town councillor of the borough of W., whose term of office would expire by lapse of time on Nov. 1, 1876, on June 29, in that year filed a petition for liquidation of his affairs by arrangement. On July 29, a statutory majority of his creditors by special resolution declared that his affairs should be liquidated by arrangement, & his discharge was granted to him on Sept. 29. No declaration was made by the council under 1835 Act, s. 52, that the office held by him was void under that sect., but he did not, in fact, act as town councillor after the institution of these proceedings with his creditors until after Nov. 1. On Nov. 1, the offices of three other councillors besides that of J. would become vacant by lapse of time, & for these four vacancies seven candidates presented themselves for election. In consequence of all the candidates being nominated by one & the same person, contrary to the provisions of the Act regulating the elections, the mayor declared no one to be duly nominated. Thereupon the returning officer, under 22 Vict. c. 35, s. 8, sub-sect. 4, declared that the retiring councillors, among whom he included J., had been re-elected to their offices. Upon a rule for a mandamus calling upon the mayor, etc., of W. to declare the office of councillor lately held by J. void, as required by 1835 Act, s. 52, & to proceed to the election of another person to supply such vacancy:—Held: (1) the office “lately held by J.” was in fact filled up, & the time had, therefore, passed when it could be declared void; (2) the mandamus would not lie for a fresh election, for inasmuch as the council had not declared J.’s office void under 1835 Act, s. 52, the office was still full on Nov. 1; & J. was, therefore, a retiring councillor within 22 Vict. c. 35, s. 8 (4), & under that sect. was properly declared to be re-elected to his office.—R. v. WELCHPOOL CORPN. (1876), 35 L. T. 594; 41 J. P. 424; R. v. Beer, [1903] 2 K. B. 693.

290. — Composition “by deed” — What is included.]—Pltf., an alderman of a borough, made a composition with his creditors, but executed no composition deed; nor were any composition proceedings taken under Debtors Act, 1869 (c. 62). He had, however, executed a bill of sale, duly registered, to a person not a creditor, to secure a sum of money advanced by him to meet the amount of the composition. 291. — Resignation tendered before petition filed—No action taken on resignation.]—S. served as town councillor for the T. ward from 1877 to July 21, 1880, when he left at the office of the town clerk a notice of resignation addressed to the mayor & council. No action was taken thereon by the council, & no fine paid or tendered by S. S. did not sit in council or vote after the date of the notice. On the following day S. filed a petition for liquidation. In Aug. a composition was accepted by the creditors of S. S. did not pay his debts in full. At an election of town councillors for the T. ward in Nov. 1884, S. was returned. The objection was then taken that S. was disqualified, he having been in liquidation when he was a member of the council, & not having paid 20s. in the pound:—Held: (1) the objection was valid; (2) where a statute provided that in a given event persons should be re-eligible for election, that was tantamount to saying that they should be disqualified until they complied with the conditions of requalification.—*FUTCHER v. The council had not declared the office of C. to be void, or given any notice thereof. At the election two hundred & fifty burgesses voted for two candidates jointly, & one hundred & twenty voted for a third singly:—Held: the votes given for the two candidates were thrown away, & the third candidate to whom the one hundred & twenty votes were given was duly elected.—*R. v. They were much injured by the populace, & repaired by the candidates. The mayor brought an action under Seditious Meetings Act, 1817 (c. 19), against two of the inhabitants to recover the amount of the damages:—Held: the property in the hustings was not in the mayor, who, therefore, could not maintain an action, even if it had been a building.—ALLEN v. 302. Whether property held as trustees — Common vested in corporation—Subject to common rights of freemen.]—The municipal corp. of L. as lords of the manor, had the soil of a common vested in them, while the freemen had a right of common only. The corp. repaired the fences, appointed wardens, & managed the common, but they derived no profit from it, the expenses being paid out of the corporate funds, & there being no return:—Held: the corp., & not the freemen, were ratable, but inasmuch as they derived no profit the rate must be reduced to nothing.

304. Alienation of property before incorporation — Right of corporation to question.]—A Royal Charter must be assumed to be valid, unless proceedings are taken to set it aside; & the Ct. of Ch. is not the proper ct. in which to try the validity of the charter.

The 1835 Act enables the town council of boroughs mentioned in the schedule to call in question any collusive alienation of the corporate property prior to June 5, 1835. Municipal Corporations Act, 1837 (c. 78), s. 49, enables the Crown to grant charters to other towns, extending to them "all the powers & provisions" of 1835 Act. The Crown having granted such a charter in 1861:—Held: all the clauses of the first Act were applicable & the right of questioning collusive alienation could be carried back to the date of the charter, but not further.—A.-G. v. 305. — Information brought before grant of charter.]—If there be no title to sue at the time of filing an original bill or information, a decree cannot be founded upon a subsequently acquired right brought forward by supplemental bill, for there must be a right of suit when the litigation commenced; & a supplemental bill is merely the continuance of a suit already instituted.

The portreeve, etc., of A. were a corp'n. from time immemorial, owning freehold estates & a town hall, & were not made subject to the provisions of 1835 Act. By a local Act, the portreeve, etc., were empowered to construct a market, market-place, etc., & to levy & receive rents & tolls, which were to be applied, (a) in defraying the costs of obtaining the act; (b) in making & maintaining the buildings & in paying off borrowed moneys; & (c) to such objects as the portreeve, etc., should think fit. In 1860, pending an application by the inhabitants for a charter of incorporation, the portreeve, etc., sold all their property, except the town hall & the market, etc., constructed under the above-mentioned Act, & early in 1861, after an intimation that the Lord President would recommend the Queen to grant the charter, they sold the town hall, & agreed to let the rents & tolls of the market to J. for fifty years, at an annual rent of £5 in consideration of a fine of £600.

On Mar. 15, 1861, the original information was filed, praying a declaration that the portreeve, etc., were not authorised so to demise or lease the rents & tolls, & that any such demise or lease would be a breach of trust; & praying an injunction accordingly. On July 2, 1861, a new charter was granted to the inhabitants under Municipal Corporations Amendment Act, & on Feb. 6, 1862, the information was amended by making the mayor, aldermen & burgesses under the new charter defendants, & praying a declaration that the markets, market-place, etc., & the lands belonging thereto, & all rights to levy rents & tolls, & all other the property & rights of the portreeve, etc., had become vested in the mayor, etc., under 1835 Act, etc.; that the portreeve, etc., might be decreed to deliver up possession thereof, & that inquiries & accounts might be directed to ascertain what property belonged to the portreeve, etc., at the date of the new charter. The portreeve, etc., insisted that there was no trust, for the benefit of the inhabitants, & the ct. having come to the conclusion that this was so except as to the property under the local A. Act:—Held: (1) a decree in conformity with the prayer of the amended information, must be discharged; (2) no relief to enforce rights arising under the new charter could be given upon an information filed before the grant of that charter; & the only decree that could be made upon the information was to restrain leases of the market property upon fine.—A.-G. v. AVON (OTHERWISE ABERAVON) CORPN. (1863), 3 De G. J. & Sm. 637; 2 New Rep. 564; 33 L. J. Ch. 172; 9 L. T. 187; 27 J. P. 757, 758; 11 W. R. 1050; 46 E. R. 783, L. J. J.

At the auction none of the lots were sold. In June, 1888, pltf. entered into a contract to purchase two of the lots, subject to the conditions. The proper steps were taken to obtain the approval of the Treasury, which is required by 1882 Act, ss. 108, 109, to enable a municipal corp'n. to sell their corporate land; & that approval was given in the ordinary way by two Lords of the Treasury joining in the conveyance to pltf. The conveyance contained a covenant by pltf. in the terms of the restrictive conditions, but there was no reference to those conditions, or to the previous abortive sale. There was no covenant by the corp'n. binding them by the conditions as regarded the unsold lots. & the Treasury were not, before they gave their approval, informed that the corp'n. would be liable to any such restriction. The corp'n. afterwards contracted with the trustees of a church to sell to them two others of the lots, & authorised them to build on those lots in a manner inconsistent with the conditions:—Held: (1) if the corp'n. had been ordinary individuals, they would have been bound by the original building scheme, & they, & the trustees, who had purchased with notice of the scheme, must have been restrained from building or permitting building on the lots purchased by the trustees, in a manner inconsistent with the conditions; but (2) the Treasury had only given their approval to what was to be found in the conveyance, & they had not sanctioned the disposition by the corp'n. in favour of pltf. of any right over other land than that which was con-

(3) Leases were granted by a municipal corp. of the same property in 1778, 1798 & 1824, to the same lessee & his assigns, for twenty-one years, at a rent of 5s. 324. Surrender of old lease in consideration of grant of new—New lease invalid for want of statutory approval—Whether surrender operative.]—In 1892 deft. occupied certain premises under a lease granted in 1599 for the term of three hundred years, which would expire in ordinary course in 1899. The lease was granted at a rent of 8*d.* per annum, but for more than a hundred years the tenant had paid no rent. An action was brought against deft. for rent, but a compromise was arrived at by which deft. agreed to surrender the lease for three hundred years if she were given a new lease for her life free of rent. Accordingly she handed the old lease to pltf. & received from them in 1892 what purported to be a lease of the premises to her, free of rent, but containing a covenant to repair. The approval of the Local Govt. Board to the lease of 1892 was not obtained, & that lease was, therefore, admittedly either void or voidable by reason of sect. 108 of 1882 Act, as amended by sect. 72 of 1888 Act. In an action to recover possession of the premises, deft. contended that the lease of 1892 was invalid, that the old lease had been surrendered in 1892, that Stat. Limitations began to run in 1892, & that, therefore, she was entitled to the freehold:—Held: (1) as the lease granted in 1892 was invalid there was no surrender of the old lease, & therefore, Stat. Limitations did not begin to run until the expiration of the old lease in 1899, & pltf. were entitled to recover possession of the premises; (2) pltf. were not estopped from setting up the invalidity of the lease of 1892 or from denying that the old lease had been surrendered.—*CANTERBURY CORPN. v. 325. Power to mortgage land—Whether surplus lands included—Lands acquired compulsorily for special purpose—Construction of local Act.]—(1) Where an Act of Parliament authorises a corpn. to mortgage its tolls, etc., this ct. had jurisdiction to appoint a receiver of them, though no such express power is given by the Act. But the receiver over such property ought not to have committed to him any powers of management which ought properly to be exercised by the corpn. itself.

(2) Where one clause of an Act of Parliament directs specific acts to be done, but which acts would be included in the general terms of a subsequent prohibitory clause, the former clause is not controlled by the latter.

An Act of Parliament gave a corpn. compulsory powers of purchasing land to make a market. Sect. 29 required it to sell the surplus not wanted, & to give certain parties a right of pre-emption, the produce to be applied "to the purposes of the Act." Sect. 30 gave the corpn. power to borrow on debenture, sect. 32 power to mortgage or sell any of its land "for the purposes of the Act," & sect. 83 provided that the Act should not empower the corpn. to sell without the approbation of the Lords of the Treasury:—Held: (3) sect. 32 did not authorise a mtge. of the surplus land for the purposes of the Act, but it must be sold as directed by sect. 29; (4) a mtge. only of the lands of the corpn. required the assent of the Lords of the Treasury.

(5) Debenture-holders under the Act were to be entitled pari passu. 340. — Provision of promenade & carriage drive—No power to use as motor race-track.]—By a local Act, passed in 1865, the corpn. of B. were authorised to make & maintain a carriage drive & a promenade, called "the parade," by the sea. It was provided by s. 13 of the Act that the carriage drive should be a public highway, by s. 17 that the parade should not be a public highway, & by s. 18 that the parade should be "kept & used exclusively for the purposes of recreation by persons on foot, & with or without carriages, in respect of which toll is authorised to be taken." Sect. 19 authorised a toll of twopence for every bath-chair, etc., or like carriage driven by human power. By a later Act, passed in 1899, additional works were authorised, including a new carriage way, absorbing the original parade, a new road with a tramway thereon alongside the said carriage way, & a new parade alongside the tramroad. By s. 7 it was provided that the corpn. might appropriate the whole or such part of the new parade as they might think fit for the exclusive use of foot passengers, & by s. 8 it was provided that the new road should be for the exclusive purpose of the tramways laid thereon. The parade was, in fact, used exclusively for foot passengers & bathchairs, etc. The corpn., in 1906, gave their approval to motor car races being held on the parade, & gave permission for part of the tramway road to be used for the purpose of cars returning to the starting point. They also undertook to keep the portion of the parade over which the races were to be run clear of traffic, & to erect a barrier & provide the necessary police control. This action was brought by the A.-G., at the relation of a ratepayer, for an injunction to restrain the corpn. from organising or promoting motor races on the sea front:—Held: the corpn. were in the position of trustees of the parade for limited public purposes, namely, for the purpose of use by foot passengers, perambulators, invalid carriages, & similar vehicles, & it was an abuse of the parade to allow it to be used for either horses or motor cars, & a fortiori motor races.—A.-G. v. By 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 105, s. 8, it is enacted, "that everything provided in any local Act of Parliament, to be done by the justices, or by some particular class or description of members of such body corporate, being justices at some ct. of general or quarter sessions assembled, & which does not relate to the business of a ct. of criminal or civil judicature, shall & may be done by the council at some quarterly meeting of the council." The town council of B., acting under 1835 Act, s. 124, & 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 105, s. 8, by an order of council, reduced the fees payable to the assessor & clerk of the ct.:—Held: the regulation of the fees of the Ct. of Requests was a matter relating to the business of a ct. of civil judicature, & the town council had no authority to interfere with it.—PALMER v. Meanwhile E. became a borough, & then the town council resolved that F. be not registered. public if licences were granted to a competing co. The watch committee of the council recommended that of eight charabanc licences, which they thought desirable, four should be granted to appcts. The council, however, refused the application for the charabanc licences, & granted the eight licences to the existing co. A rule having been obtained for a mandamus, directed to the council, requiring them to hear & determine the application according to law upon the ground that the council had not properly exercised its discretion under Town Police Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 89):—Held: as to the omnibus licences, there being nothing in the evidence to show that the council had not exercised a judicial discretion, the rule must be discharged; but, as to the charabanc licences, the evidence showed that the council had been influenced by extra-judicial & extraneous considerations which had no bearing upon the application, or by reasons not appearing at all, & the rule must be made absolute.—*R. v. 350. — — —.]—The A. co. had for some years past run omnibuses in various directions from their headquarters at A., & one of their routes ran through a district under the control of the F. urban district council. The council had granted licences to run the omnibuses in previous years, as they were empowered to do under Town Police Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 89), & 52 & 53 Vict. c. 14, but in 1919 they refused to meet for the purpose of considering the grant of the renewal of the licences to the A. co. on various grounds, but more especially on the ground that the A. co. had raised their fares; that they had refused to adopt 1d. fares; & that in this scale of fares the co. had made an unfair discrimination between the military population on the one hand & civilians on the other. The A. co. thereupon applied for & were granted a rule nisi calling upon the F. urban district council to show cause why a writ of mandamus should not issue against them to compel them to meet to consider the grant of a renewal of the licences:—Held: the rule nisi must be made absolute; the council had no power to deal with the question of fares & charges, & in declining to grant a renewal of the licences to the A. co., they had failed to exercise a judicial discretion & had taken into consideration extraneous matters with which they had no concern.—*R. v. On Nov. 2, the ct. discharged A. on habeas corpus, on the ground that the arrest on the Sunday had been illegal, & that the two warrants were one proceeding of the same party. The order for discharge was received on Nov. 3, but the gaoler still detained A. under the third warrant; & on Nov. 4, a ca. sa. was bond fide lodged by a creditor, not colluding with the corpn., against him. On Nov. 24, the ct. refused another application on habeas corpus to discharge A., on the ground that, notwithstanding the third warrant was bad, the ca. sa. was a lawful ground of detention. On Mar. 2, 1854, A. settled with his detaining creditor, & was set at liberty, but he was again arrested when he had got but a few yards from the gaol, under a fourth warrant, similar to the second, & executed at the express instance of S. A. was shortly afterwards discharged by a judge, on the ground that the recapture was illegal, as A. had not been completely at liberty, & brought actions against all parties. The writs were issued on Sept. 1, 1854:—Held: there were three distinct imprisonments, the first from Oct. 16 to Nov. 2; the second from Nov. 2 to Mar. 2; & the third from Mar. 2 till the final discharge; the action for the first imprisonment was barred by lapse of time, as it had been commenced contrary to 1835 Act, s. 133, which was the limitation clause applicable after the expiration of six months from the fact committed; the second action was in like manner barred, as the inference from the facts was, that the third warrant was abandoned when the ca. sa. was put in; & for the third imprisonment, an action might be maintained, as the fourth warrant was bad, against S. who had instigated the proceedings & taken a personal part in the execution of that warrant, but not against the constables, nor against the corpn. which had not interfered, & had only authorised A. to do lawful acts.—*EGGINGTON v. Therefore, where orders for payment of money out of borough funds were so brought up & quashed with costs to be paid by prosecutors, the rule not further stating by whom the costs were to be paid, & no cause having been shown, the ct. refused to grant an attachment against individuals, A., B. & C., for non-payment, though the rule for an attachment was drawn up on reading affidavits of A., B. & C., used in opposing the motion for a certiorari, & which showed, as the parties applying for an attachment contended, that A., B. & C. were the persons who prosecuted the orders since quashed, by supporting them in this ct.—*R. v. Proceedings having been instituted against the surveyor to recover penalties under P. H. Act, 1875, s. 193, on the ground that he was interested in the contracts within the meaning of that sect., the corpn. resolved to contribute the sum of £300 towards his legal expenses. Certain penalties having been recovered against the surveyor, a rule was obtained for a writ of certiorari to bring up the order of the corpn. settling the remuneration of the surveyor & the order for the payment of the sum of £300 in order that they might be quashed, on the ground that they were illegal & ultra vires, & that the corpn. had no power to make them. This rule was made absolute, & the ct. further ordered that "prosecutors (the mayor, aldermen, & burgesses) do pay the costs of & occasioned by the application." The ct. was now asked to make an order that certain members of the corpn. should personally pay the costs of & occasioned by the application for the writ of certiorari, the issuing thereof & consequent thereon:—Held: the members of the corpn. who voted in favour of the resolutions for carrying on the legal proceedings were personally liable for the costs occasioned thereby.—*R. v. A general quarterly meeting was held on Nov. 9, when a mayor was elected, & other general business transacted, & the meeting was, by a resolution then passed, adjourned

The minutes were never entered by the town clerk, & a resolution passed in the council, that the meeting was illegal. Semble: the same principle applies to the meetings of a district council or of a county council.

By r. 13 of the second part of the First Schedule to that Act [1894 Act] it is expressly provided that a parish council shall be open to the public unless the council shall otherwise direct. The sanitary committee afterwards passed, without discussion, a resolution in accordance with the recommendation of the sub-committee; & the minutes of the sanitary committee embodying this resolution were, without discussion, approved at a meeting of the city council, whereupon the order issued:—Held: there had been no infringement of the principle that a committee to which powers are delegated cannot, in turn, delegate those powers to a sub-committee.—AGNEW v. HANCOCK (1839), 3 J. P. 723.

380. — Effect of.]—On an election of councillors for a ward in a borough, the presiding alderman, & two assessors, before two in the afternoon of the next day but one after the election, published, under 1835 Act, s. 35, a declaration containing a list of the councillors elected, which declaration included the name of P. After two o'clock, the alderman & assessors, on the discovery of a supposed error in counting the legal votes, signed & published a second list, omitting the name of P. & substituting that of R. P. afterwards made the declarations required by 9 Geo. 4, c. 17, s. 2, & 1835 Act, s. 50; & R. subsequently did the same. Afterwards, upon P. claiming to act, the mayor & town council refused to permit him to do so, & allowed R. to act.

On application by P. for a mandamus to receive & count his vote:—Held: the office was not full of R.; & the proper remedy was by mandamus;

W. was elected councillor. On quo warranto:—Held: (1) he was not, as mayor, disqualified from being a candidate, but could not act as returning officer; (2) he was "incapable of acting" within 1835 Act, s. 36, & therefore the election was properly conducted, & he was duly elected.—*R. v. 394. Alderman.]—At an election for the office of a councillor of one of the wards of a borough, R. & P. were the only candidates. At the close of the poll P. objected that R. was disqualified for election by reason of his being an alderman of the borough whose term of office had not expired, & P. claimed himself to be elected whatever might be the result of the poll. The returning officer counted the votes, & then stated to those present the number given to each candidate, the result of the poll being that R. had a majority. Having taken time to consider the objection, the returning officer on the following day issued a public notice stating the number of votes given to each candidate, & the objection, & declaring that P. was duly elected. P. thereupon made & subscribed the declaration of acceptance of the office required by 1882 Act, s. 35, & attended meetings of the council. R. subsequently made & subscribed a similar declaration & attended meetings of the council:—Held: (1) R. was not by reason of his being an alderman disqualified for election to the office of councillor, & by accepting the latter office he vacated the former; (2) the returning officer had no power to decide whether R. was disqualified or not; (3) the office of councillor was not de facto filled by P. so as to entitle him to hold it until dispossessed by an election petition or by quo warranto.—*R. v. 399. ——— Pecuniary or material interest—Distinguished from pecuniary advantage.]—An "interest" in a contract within the meaning of 1882 Act, s. 12 (1), must be a pecuniary, or, at least, a material interest, but it need not be a pecuniary advantage.

Deft., who was a member of a municipal corp., carried on business as a jeweller & optician. The optical department was managed by his son, who was not a partner but a paid employee. A contract was made between the son, in his own name, & the municipal corp. for the supply of spectacles to the children of the schools controlled by the corp.'s education committee. The contract was carried out by the son, the spectacles were paid for by him with his own cheque, & he received payment in his own name from the corp. & paid the amounts so received into his own banking account. The spectacles were supplied in cases bearing the son's name but deft.'s business address, some of the cases being taken at the expense of deft. out of his stock. The son alone derived direct pecuniary benefit from the contract, but the shop was provided, & the establishment expenses paid, by deft., & the fact that the spectacle cases bore his address helped to advertise his business with the consequent probability of increasing his custom:—Held: on these facts the county ct. judge was warranted in finding that deft. had an "interest" in the contract within s. 12 (1) of the Act.—ENGLAND v. INGLIS, [1920] 2 K. B. 636; 89 L. J. K. B. 1062; 123 L. T. 576; 84 J. P. 198; 36 T. L. R. 558; 18 L. G. R. 407, D. C.

(2) Deft., & three other persons had contracted with the comrs. under a local Act to sink an artesian well for the purpose of supplying the town with water. This contract & the works were afterwards assigned over to the comrs. by deed, who thereby released the contractors, & covenanted to pay them a certain sum which had been already incurred, & a further sum of £850 in case the comrs. should either abandon the works or complete them, & obtain a specified supply of water from the well. The contractors also covenanted with the comrs. for quiet enjoyment, & not to molest them in the completion of the works. All the powers & contracts of the comrs. were transferred to the council, acting as local board of health, by Public Health Act:—Held: this contract was “a security for the payment of money only” within the meaning of 5 & 6 Vict. c. 104, s. 1, & did not, therefore, disqualify deft. from holding a corporate office under 1835 Act, s. 28.—LE FEUVRE v. The corpn. was not a party to the assignment & gave no assent thereto nor did they release resp. from the contracts. Resp.'s connection with the said contracts & the fact that his candidature was objected to on that ground were matters of notoriety in the ward for which he was a candidate. 402. ——— Appointment as chemist.—Though value of contract small.]—(1) Where by the resolution of a town council under 1882 Act, s. 15 (4), a salary is attached to the office of mayor, a candidate for that office is disqualified under s. 22 (3), from voting for himself, as he has a pecuniary interest in the matter.

(2) 1882 Act, s. 12 (2) (a), which provides that a person shall not be disqualified from being a councillor by reason only of his having an interest in any lease in which the council is also interested, refers as much to a letting for one day as to a lease for a longer period.

(3) 1882 Act, s. 61 (4), which provides that in case of equality of votes at the election of mayor “the chairman, although not entitled to vote in the first instance, shall have the casting vote,” does not prevent the chairman from voting in the first instance, unless he is otherwise disqualified.

(4) Resp. contended that one of the votes given, that of G., was bad, inasmuch as at the time of his election as councillor he held an office or place of profit in the gift of the council & also had a share or interest in a contract or employment, with, by, or on behalf of the council, contrary to 1882 Act, s. 12 (1) (c). It appears that the appointment of chemist to the council entitles the person appointed to supply goods, in the way of his business as a chemist & druggist, to the police & to the fire brigade, & that G., who held this office, had not resigned the appointment before his election, & had after his election supplied a member of the fire brigade on behalf of the council with fourpence worth of oil. The first answer made to this was that the contract was a very small one. That, however, is a matter into which we cannot enter, as the legislature has not entrusted us with any dispensing power, & probably considered the maxim of obsta principiis should apply to cases of this class (CAVE, J.).—NELL v. He was then nominated. After his nomination the council approved the resolution of the committee releasing him. 406. ——— In employment—Sale of business in consideration of annual payments—Payable out of official salaries.]—L. owned a private business as accountant, & also held certain appointments under the corp'n. of a borough. As he was disqualified while he held these appointments from being elected mayor of the borough, he made an arrangement with those who had control of the appointments, in pursuance of which he resigned them in favour of his son & another as joint holders thereof, & he became a candidate for the office of mayor. He was shortly afterwards elected mayor & held that office for a year, continuing thereafter to be a councillor for upwards of five years. He had taken no part in the appointment of his successors to, or their continuance in, the aforesaid appointments. Subsequently by deed L., whilst mayor, sold to the joint holders of these appointments his private business as accountant in consideration of their paying him (inter alia) an annual sum for five years out of their official salaries. They accordingly paid him that annual sum for the stipulated period. The corp'n. of the borough brought an action against the exors. of L. to recover the sums so paid to him, as money had & received by him to the use of the corp'n.:—Held: there was no foundation for the claim. Under the deed L. had an interest in an employment with the corp'n., & was therefore disqualified for being mayor or councillor by 1882 Act, s. 12 (1) (c) (per CUR.).—*PONTEFRAC T CORPN. v. A non-provided school was attached to the chapel; but the school building was also used for other purposes than those of the non-provided school. Fuel for warming the building was supplied by the trustees under an arrangement with the town council by which the latter paid the trustees for such of the fuel as was used for the purpose of warming the building during the times when it was used as a non-provided school. It was the habit of the trustees to procure from deft. the fuel required by small orders given from time to time. An order of this kind had been given on Jan. 4, 1904, & fulfilled on Jan. 11; another on Jan. 23, & fulfilled on Jan. 25; another on Feb. 2, & fulfilled on Feb. 3. The votes complained of were given on Feb. 1 & 5. On these dates the fuel ordered had not been paid for:—Held: there was a contract between the town council & the trustees; deft. had at times an interest in that contract, but he had not such an interest at the time when the votes complained of were given, & therefore he was not disqualified from voting on the dates alleged.—*COX v. 422. Power to remove—At common law.]—The imputation, it was said, is a charge of corrupt & dishonest conduct in a public office, & that was always & still is a cause of amotion from the office. That this was the case before the passing of the Municipal Corporations Acts is beyond question; but deft. contends that the power of amotion no longer exists now that municipal officers are elected under statutory provisions & hold their offices not for life, as theretofore, but for limited periods, namely six years in the case of aldermen & three years in the case of councillors. 1882 Act, s. 39, provides for the avoidance of the office of mayor, alderman, or councillor in the case of bkpcy., insolvency, compounding with creditors, or temporary absence from the borough. These causes of loss of office are expressly provided for; but none of them, it is to be observed would have afforded the corpn. at common law ground for the removal of any of its members. The power of amotion for reasonable cause is incident to every corpn., unless it has been taken away by statute. I can find nothing in any statute taking it away, nor anything in any statute inconsistent with its existence (LOPES, L.J.).—BOOTH v. ARNOLD, [1895] 1 Q. B. 571; 64 L. J. Q. B. 443; 72 L. 462. Officer & servant distinguished.—A declaration stated, that the corpn. of L. from time immemorial until Jan. 1, 1836, when 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 63, s. 9, came into operation, had, by persons by them in that behalf appointed, the sole & exclusive privilege of measuring, &, from Jan. 1, 1836, of weighing, all coals imported into the port of L.; & also the right & privilege of appointing to perform such work a sufficient number of fit & proper persons, & from time to time of fixing a reasonable rate of payment for such work, to be proportioned, previous to Jan. 1, 1836, to the measured quantity, & subsequently to that day to the weight of the coals; such payments to be made to the persons who should do the work, & to be for their own use & benefit. The declaration then alleged a right & privilege of the corpn. that every owner of a vessel arriving in the port of L. with coals, should give notice to the corpn., in order that the work might be done by the said meters. It then averred that the corpn. had fixed a rate of payment for every score of tons weight, & had appointed a reasonable number of coal meters, of whom pltf. was one; that deft. imported several tons of coal into the port of L., & that, although it was his duty, on the arrival of a vessel, & before landing the coals, to give notice, he did not do so, whereby pltf. was prevented from weighing the coals, & of earning the amount payable in respect thereof. The pleas traversed the right of the corpn. to weigh the coals, & also the appointment of pltf. as coal meter. Evidence was given of a custom to measure all coals imported into the port of L. before Jan. 1, 1836, & after that date to weigh them; & that the corpn. had ordered that the meters should be paid at a rate per ton on coals weighed instead of per chaldron as before. In proof of pltf.'s appointment as a meter, he gave in evidence an entry, not under seal, in the corpn. books, stating that he was so appointed. Pltf. had ever since acted as a coal meter:—Held: (1) the right of the corpn. by custom to measure coals imported was not converted by 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 63, into a right to

B. The Town Clerk.

(a) In General.

Appointment.—See 1882 Act, s. 17.

469. — Qualification of one candidate questioned—Right to have name submitted.—There being a vacancy in the office of town clerk, in the borough of B., L., one of the councillors before the passing of 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 104, tendered his resignation of his office of councillor to the council, who refused to accept it, on the ground that he could not, under 1835 Act, resign. At a subsequent meeting of the council, held for the purpose of electing a town clerk, L. & S. were nominated as candidates; but the mayor, considering that L. was incapable of being elected, refused to submit his name to the council, & declared that S. was elected to the office:—Held: he was bound to submit both names to the council; & therefore, S. was not duly elected.—R. v. SHEBBEARE (1837), 6 L. J. K. B. 105; 1 J. P. 102; 1 Jur. 7.

470. — Presumption that meeting appointing duly summoned.—(1) On a rule for an information in the nature of a quo warranto, for exercising the office of town clerk under an election at a meeting of the council, it will be presumed proper notices of the meeting had been given, according to 1835 Act, s. 69, unless the contrary appears on the affidavits.

(2) Rescinding a resolution for the appointment of a town clerk, is a valid displacing of him from the office.

(3) The meeting at which the new town clerk was appointed & the old one displaced, having been an adjournment of the [quarterly] meeting at which the old town clerk had been appointed, qu.: whether it was necessary that notice should have been given to the old town clerk, or to the members of the town council.—*R. v. As vacation of incompatible office—Alderman.—See Nos. 439–441, ante.

471. Title to office—Who may question.—Any burgess is a competent relator in quo warranto against a party exercising the office of town clerk, though the right of electing to that office be in a select body.

The town clerk, as soon as he is chosen, is a ministerial officer, in whom all the burgesses have an interest (LORD TENTERDEN, C.J.).—R. v. DAVIES (1828), 1 Man. & Ry. K. B. 538; 1 Man. & Ry. M. C. 205; 6 L. J. O. S. K. B. 170.

472. Authority to bind corporation.—In pursuance of a resolution of the town council of K., passed on July 17, 1872, & entered in the corp'n. books, & sealed with the corporate seal, a market, & the tolls thereof, belonging to the corp'n. were, on July 18, 1872, put up to lease by auction for the term of one year, with an option to the lessee to extend the term to three years. By the conditions of auction a lease was to be granted on or before Aug. 17, 1872, the rent to be paid by equal monthly payments, the first payment to be made to the clerk of the lessors, "immediately on the fall of the hammer," & the lessee to be always one month's rent in advance; & in case of failure by the lessee to perform any of the conditions, the rent then already paid was to be absolutely forfeited, & the lease to be null & void. The lessee was also, "at the fall of the hammer," to produce two sureties, to be approved of by the lessors or their clerk, for the payment of rent & performance of covenants, & who were also forthwith to sign the conditions & lease. Deft., as the highest bidder, became the purchaser or renter of the said market & tolls for one year, & thereupon the contract at the foot of the conditions was signed by him, & also by the town clerk, although the latter was not authorised by the corp'n. under seal so to do. Deft. also paid one month's rent in advance to the town clerk; but, not being prepared with the required sureties, a week's time was given to him by the town clerk to produce them, which period was subsequently further extended. A report of the above lettings to deft., & his payment of the month's rent, was made to the corp'n., & was adopted by them by a resolution of Aug. 7, 1872, entered in the corp'n. books, & sealed with the corp'n. seal. By some mistake the keys of the market buildings were without the authority of the corp'n., & contrary to the instructions of the town clerk, handed by the market keeper to deft., who retained them for some days, but who never otherwise obtained possession of the market, & never received any tolls. Deft. finally failed to produce his sureties, the corp'n. relet the premises to another person, & brought an action against deft. to recover damages for his breach of contract:—Held: as the contract was not under the corp'n. seal, or signed by an agent of the corp'n. duly & expressly authorised by them under seal for that purpose, & as the resolution of Aug. 7 was after the breach, & so too late to operate as a ratification, & there was no such part performance as to entitle deft. in equity to a specific performance on the part of pl'ts., the contract was void for want of mutuality, & pl'ts.' action thereon was not sustainable.—KIDDERMINSTER CORPN. v. HARDWICK (1873), L. R. 0 Exch. 13; 43 L. J. Ex. 9; 29 L. T. 611; 22 W. R. 160.

473. ——A lessee of buildings belonging to a municipal corp'n. wrote letters on May 10 & 13, 1892, to the mayor & the chairman of the public improvements committee of the corp'n., which had not been appointed under seal, offering to surrender his lease, pull down the existing buildings, & erect new buildings, provided the corp'n. would grant him a new lease on specified terms. On May 13, 1892, the town clerk wrote to the lessee that the committee accepted his proposals, subject to the council's approval. On May 27, 1892, the lessee wrote to the town clerk modifying the terms of his original proposals. On June 1, 1892, the council approved, but not under seal,

474. Town clerk also clerk of the peace—Agreement to procure share of duties for another—Whether valid.—An attorney, town clerk, & clerk of the peace for the borough of L. in the county of L., upon the dissolution of a partnership which had existed between him & two other persons, entered into an agreement to pay to one of them, D., a certain sum of money, & to use his endeavours to procure for him one fourth of the prosecutions arising in the town clerk's office. In an action by D. on this agreement, it appeared that the magistrates of the borough of L. commit some offenders to be tried at the borough sessions, others at the county sessions, & others at the county assizes:—Held: (1) the agreement extended to all prosecutions "arising in the town clerk's office," wherever they might be tried, & letters written before the agreement was signed could not be given in evidence to show that the parties intended the agreement to be applicable to the prosecutions of the borough sessions only; (2) deft., as clerk of the peace of the borough, could not legally enter into such an agreement as that set out in the declaration.

No salary was attached to the office of town clerk, who had always charged the corpn. for his services, & during three years had been remunerated by them for duties performed under the Municipal Act, of a similar kind with those in respect of which he now claimed to be remunerated by the corpn.:—Held: the duties were imposed by the legislature without remuneration, & therefore, the corpn. were not liable in respect thereof. 497. — Right to — Where none voted by council.]—A borough which was governed by 1882 Act, & was also an urban authority under 1875 Act, had in Mar. 1903, exhausted all its borrowing powers & had in addition a large fluctuating overdraft at its bankers in respect of expenses previously incurred. The borough kept its banking account in the name of its treasurer, & during 1903 & 1904 the bank charged interest quarterly on the overdraft, & the treasurer in his accounts with the borough debited the borough & credited himself with the charges for interest, & his accounts were audited under 1882 Act, ss. 25–28, by the borough auditors, who passed the charges for interest, & the audited accounts were submitted to & approved by the borough council. In an action against the treasurer by the A.-G., suing on relation of a burgess, impeaching his accounts in respect of the charges for interest on the overdraft & claiming an injunction to restrain him from making any further payments for such interest out of the borough funds:—Held: (1) the corpn. were not necessary parties to the action, as no relief was asked for against them; (2) the treasurer was not merely the servant of the council, but, as custodian of the borough funds, owed a duty & stood in a fiduciary position to the burgesses as a body, & could not plead the orders of the council for an unlawful act; (3) the overdraft & the payments of interest thereon were illegal, & plffs. were entitled to the injunction notwithstanding that the payments might be quashed by certiorari under 1882 Act, s. 141 (2), or by appeal to quarter sessions against the rates; (4) deft. could not retain the charges for interest by way of his remuneration under 1882 Act, s. 20, no remuneration in fact having been voted to him by the council; (5) the fact that defts. accounts had been audited under the Act was no bar to the action, there being nothing in the Act which made such audit finally binding & conclusive on the borough & the burgesses.

Deft.'s next contention is that the accounts have been audited under the Act [1882 Act], & that plff. cannot question such audit. My attention has not been called to any sect. making such audit finally binding & conclusive on the borough & the burgesses thereof, & it would be very unfortunate if there were any such, for the audit provided by 1882 Act is quite ineffective. Under 1875 Act, s. 247, the legislature provided a system of audit which gives auditors extensive powers, including powers to surcharge, but sect. 246 exempts urban authorities who are the council of a borough from this liability, & 1882 Act, s. 27, merely provides that the auditors shall audit the accounts, without more. They have no power to surcharge, & even if they ought, as LORD RUSSELL, C.J., says in Thomas v. Devonport Corpn., No. 597, post, to make public any illegal payments by report to the council & the burgesses, this is a duty of imperfect obligation; there is nothing to compel them to do so, & very little to induce them, & so far as I know they have not done anything of the sort in the present case. It is difficult to understand why the legislature in 1882 should have authorised a system of auditing which is quite illusory when they had seven years before created an efficient method (FARWELL, J.).—A.-G. v. DE WINTON, [1906] 2 Ch. 106; 75 L. J. Ch. 612; 70 J. P. 368; 54 W. R. 499; 22 T. L. R. 446; 50 Sol. Jo. 405; 4 L. G. R. 549.

508. Power to discontinue appointment.—The layer keeper of S. was an officer employed to keep the layers or beds for shipping in the port free from obstacles & in a proper state. He was appointed, by custom, at a leet & baron ct. held yearly in May & Oct. by the steward of the seignory of G., the lord of which, the Duke of Beaufort, was lord of the borough & manor of S. These were coextensive. The jury of the ct., composed of aldermen, burgesses & residents, presented two persons to the steward, one of whom he elected to be layer keeper. The portreeve, & the head officer of the borough before 1835 Act, sat with the steward, but took no part in the proceedings. The layer keeper was sworn to execute the office for the year ensuing, & until another should be chosen in his stead, or he should be lawfully discharged. By Act of Parliament, to the introduction of which the Duke & the corpn. were parties, trustees were appointed for managing & improving the harbour but the office & rights of the layer keeper were expressly reserved. Under the authority of this Act a harbour master was appointed, who performed all the actual duties formerly discharged by the layer keeper. Tolls, other than those received by the layer keeper, were paid by the shipping which used the port to the portreeve, who paid the corpn. a rent for moorage, etc., & to the water bailiff, an officer of the Duke.

Pltf. had, for some years before the passing of 1835 Act, been annually appointed layer keeper. In May, 1836, he was reappointed under protest from the mayor of the then corpn. In Oct. 1838, the corpn. prevented the holding of the ct. leet & ct. baron; & in consequence no ct.

was held till May, 1842, when they were resumed. No appointment of layer keeper took place from May, 1836, till May, 1842, when pltf. was re-appointed. In Oct. 1836, the town council resolved that the appointment of layer keeper should be vested in the corpn., & the revenue added to the corpn. fund. The corpn. accordingly received the layer keeper's dues from Jan. 1837, to June, 1842. Pltf. sued them for the amount in assumpsit for money had & received :—Held : (1) pltf. had not ceased to be layer keeper by the omission to appoint from 1836 to 1842; (2) the office had not been, & could not be, discontinued by the corporation under 1835 Act, s. 58; (3) the cessation or suspension of the layer keeper's services had not affected the right to receive the tolls; (4) the action, in point of form, was well brought.—*HALL v. ## PART VII. SECT. 5, SUB-SECT. 1.—B. (a) i.

515 i. General rule — Limited by statute.]—A city council is a trustee of funds belonging to the municipal corpsns. of boroughs named in Schedules A & B. of 1835 Act became, upon the passing of that Act, subject to certain public trusts, to be exercised by the new council, only in the manner & for the purposes prescribed by the Act.

An appropriation of such funds made by the old corpns., after the passing of the Act, but before the election of the new council, & having for its object to endow the churches & chapels of the Established Church within the borough with fixed stipends, for their several ministers, is not an appropriation warranted by the Act, & is, therefore, a breach of trust.

The ordinary jurisdiction of the ct. over such a transaction, by means of an information seeking to have the funds recalled, & the appropriation rescinded, as being a breach of trust, is not ousted by the special remedies provided in certain cases by 1835 Act, s. 97. Semble: those remedies would not be applicable in any case to a transaction of this description.

Where property is devoted to trusts which are to arise at a future time, & be exercised by trustees who are not yet in esse, any intermediate act done by the holders of such property, inconsistent with the security of the property, or the performance of the trusts when they shall arise, will be set aside; & if the trusts are of a public nature, the ct. will entertain this jurisdiction upon an information by the A.-G., notwithstanding that the trustees, after they have come into esse, themselves decline to interfere.

As it was thought right that the new council should have a power of calling in question acts relative to the corporate property, carried into effect before the period of their election, it was absolutely necessary to give them a distinct legislative authority for this purpose; because, the identity of the corpns. continuing, notwithstanding the alterations effected by the Act, any such attempt, on the part of the new council, would be an attempt by the corpns. to impeach its own act (LORD COTTENHAM, C.).—A.-G. v. ASPINALL (1837), 2 My. & Cr. 613; 1 J. P. 4; 1 Jur. 812; 40 E. R. 773; sub nom. A.-G. v. LIVERPOOL CORPN., A.-G. v. ASPINALL, 7 L. J. Ch. 51, L. C.

516. Enforcement—By mandamus.—The fees payable to the clerk of the justices, under 1835 Act, in cases where there is no specific provision as to the mode in which they are to be paid, as well as in cases where there are no means of obtaining payment from the parties in the first instance liable to pay them, are expenses chargeable on the borough fund by sect. 92, as being expenses necessarily incurred in carrying into effect the provisions of that Act; & a mandamus will lie to enforce payment of them.—R. v. GLOUCESTER CORPN. (1844), 5 Q. B. 862; Dav. & Mer. 677; 13 L. J. Q. B. 233; 3 L. T. O. S. 54; 8 J. P. 855; 8 Jur. 573; 114 E. R. 1474.

The attorney having been retained generally by a resolution of the town council, & having also been authorised & retained by resolution of the town council to take proceedings in opposition to the rule nisi for the mandamus:—Held: this was a sufficient retainer to warrant the payment to him of the costs of defending the issues, & it was no objection to the order for payment made in consequence, that it was an order for payment on account, the attorney not having delivered a bill, & it not appearing that the sum ordered to be paid exceeded the sum due to the attorney.—R. v. The justices directed their clerk to appear at the ct. of quarter sessions & oppose the appeal, & to incur the necessary expenses in so doing. The clerk accordingly appeared by counsel on behalf of the justices, but the decision of the justices was reversed. The ct., purporting to act under Alehouse Act, 1828 (c. 61), made an order in blank for the clerk's costs to be paid by the treasurer of B., & then continued the sessions by adjournment until after the taxation of the costs by the officer of the ct. The officer taxed the costs, but the treasurer of B. was not summoned to be present & was not present at such taxation, & the taxation was never expressly adopted by the ct.:—Held: the order of the ct. of quarter sessions was bad because that ct. had not exercised the jurisdiction given it to "order payment of such sum as should in the opinion of such ct. be sufficient to indemnify such justice from all costs . . . such justice may have been put to."

It was bad also as directing the justices clerk's costs & not the justices' costs to be paid (RIDLEY, J.).—R. v. WINDER, [1900] 2 Q. B. 666; 69 L. J. Q. B. 729; 64 J. P. 741; 48 W. R. 605; 44 Sol. Jo. 486; sub nom. R. v. WINDER, Ex p. BOLTON CORPN., 83 L. T. 171; 16 T. L. R. 400, D. C.

536. Allowances to constables — Whether costs of criminal libel action included.—A member of the constabulary force of the borough of Liverpool was made the subject of a libellous article in a newspaper, in reference to his conduct as inspector of public-houses, in giving a good character to an appct. for a license, at the meeting of the magistrates of the borough in Licensing Session, whom he knew to have been the keeper of a house of ill fame. Upon an intimation from, though without the official sanction of his superior authorities, he took criminal proceedings by way of summons before a magistrate against the publisher of the libel, & incurred expenses thereon. The watch committee, with the subsequent approbation of the town council, made an order on the borough treasurer for the payment of a sum of money on account of such expenses. The Liverpool Borough Fund had a surplus:—Held: such order was not in respect of an "allowance" nor a charge or expense for the purposes of the constabulary force within the meaning of 1835 Act, s. 82, nor an application of the fund for the public benefit of the inhabitants of the borough within s. 92, & a rule must go for a certiorari to bring up the order for the purpose of being quashed.—*R. v. 539. — Power of watch committee to make—Expense disallowed by predecessors.—On Aug. 13, the watch committee resolved to authorise the chief constable to obtain legal assistance at the licensing sessions. On Aug. 21 the council passed a like resolution. The chief constable successfully opposed some licensees, five of whom appealed to quarter sessions. On Oct. 10, the watch committee, having taken the opinion of counsel, refused to authorise the chief constable to act as resp. On Oct. 15 the council resolved to allow

This action was brought by plffs. as ratepayers to restrain this payment:—Held: in these circumstances, there was no right to use the borough funds for this purpose, for one watch committee has no power to apply to the council to pay certain moneys which a former watch committee has said ought not to be paid.—*A.-G. & NEWCASTLE BREWERIES, LTD. v. 542. Costs of settling dispute — Not included in town clerk's salary.]—The council of a borough passed a resolution prescribing the duties of the town clerk, & fixing his salary for the discharge of such duties at £250. Among other functions, he was "to act as the professional adviser of the mayor & council in the business of the council," & he was to "be paid the usual professional charges for conducting or opposing bills in Parliament, conducting action or suits at law or in equity, & preparing leases, conveyances of securities"; & to "be paid all travelling & other expenses out of pocket." A town clerk, being an attorney, was appointed after the passing of this resolution. Payment of a borough rate being resisted by a township within the borough, with an intimation that the overseers would not pay anything except under legal obligation, the council directed their finance committee to take such proceedings as they might deem expedient for enforcing payment & maintaining the validity of the rate; the committee were likewise authorised to give bonds of indemnity to overseers & others employed in the collection. The committee directed the town clerk to prepare a bond of indemnity to the overseers of the above township, under counsel's advice. The bond was prepared, & objected to by the overseers. The town clerk, under the direction of the committee, went to London & attended conferences between counsel for the overseers & for the corpn., with a view to an arrangement. Finally, the form of the rate was altered; proceedings were taken on behalf of the council to compel payment; & the rate was levied. The town clerk then delivered a bill to the corpn. including charges, for instructing & advising with counsel upon the bond of indemnity & upon the forms of rates; correspondence & conferences with the solr. for the overseers on the subject of the rate; expenses & loss of time in proceeding to London for the purpose of attending the conferences, in advising on several occasions with counsel, & in journeys to Wakefield & Manchester for the purpose of conferring with the clerks of the peace & town clerks of those boroughs upon the proper forms of rates. The services had been performed under the instructions of the finance committee. The committee ordered payment of the charges, & they were paid. On certiorari, bringing their order before this ct., under 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 78, s. 44:—Held: (1) the charges, so far as they regarded business done in the direct course of settling a dispute, might properly be allowed by the corpn., as not covered by the salary given for the performance of the ordinary duties of town clerk; (2) such charges were payable out of the borough fund; (3) no objection that the order was made not by the council generally, but by a finance committee having their sanction; (4) nor, at least after payment, that there was no retainer under seal for extra services.—*R. v. 544. Costs of street widening—Under local Act.]—By a local Act, passed in 1851, certain property before vested in Comrs., was vested in the corp., of Birmingham. Powers were given to the council of purchasing land for the purposes of the Act, & of executing certain improvement works specified in a schedule; the expenses of the works for making new approaches to the town hall, & for enlarging & altering the existing streets, to be defrayed by a "street" improvement rate," not exceeding 6*d.* in the pound, & mortgageable to the extent of £100,000; & all other expenses of carrying the Act into execution to be defrayed by a "borough improvement rate," not exceeding 2*s.* in the pound, & mortgageable to the extent of £150,000. From the street improvement rate certain classes of persons were wholly exempted, & canal & railway cos. were partly exempted. Nothing therein contained was to alter any of the powers, privileges, & authorities vested in the corp. by any past or future Acts in relation to municipal corps. By another local Act, passed in 1861, certain other specified improvements were provided for, & it was declared that the expense of, amongst other things, widening & improving certain specified streets was to be defrayed out of the "street improvement rate." Municipal Corporation Mortgage Act, 1860 (c. 16), empowers corps. generally, with the approbation of the Treasury, upon application made after due notice given, to make purchases of land for public purposes; but nothing therein contained is to "repeal, abridge, or affect," any power or authority of any body corporate or council, under any local Act. The Corp. of Birmingham having contracted for the purchase of land for the widening of a street, not comprised in the works specified in the local Acts of 1851, & 1861, & having, after due notice given, & after all parties interested in the scheme had been heard before a Comr. deputed by the Treasury, obtained the sanction of the Treasury to the purchase of the land, & the charging of the borough fund with the purchase-money:—Held: upon construction of the statutes, the corp. were lawfully empowered to raise the purchase-money out of the "borough fund."—A.-G. v. Upon a rule for certiorari to bring up & quash a resolution of the corp., ordering payment out of the borough fund of a pension to a master appointed by them:—Held: the pension did not come within any of the purposes specified in 1835 Act to which that fund was applicable, & could not be held to be for the public convenience of the inhabitants, & the resolution was, therefore, void.—R. v. BROWN (1875), 39 J. P. Jo. 388.

548. Extraordinary expenditure—Additional remuneration to mayor—For jubilee celebrations.]—A municipal corp. passed resolutions to the effect that, pursuant to 1882 Act, s. 15 (4), a certain sum should be paid to the mayor by way of remuneration, & the mayor should be requested to take such steps as he might deem proper for the due celebration of the jubilee of Her Majesty's reign. Some of the burgesses moved to restrain the corp. from applying any part of the borough fund in the celebration of the jubilee:—Held: the provisions of 1882 Act had not been contravened, & an interlocutory injunction would not be granted.

The local Act authorised rates for certain purposes not including such a bridge as the agreement referred to, & provided that the money accruing from the general rate should be applied to certain specified purposes " & subject thereto for the improvement or benefit of the borough in such manner as the corp. from time to time think fit in as full & ample a manner as any borough rate authorised by the Municipal Corporations Acts is made applicable." 544. Costs of street widening—Under local Act.]

—By a local Act, passed in 1851, certain property before vested in Comrs., was vested in the corpn. of Birmingham. Powers were given to the council of purchasing land for the purposes of the Act, & of executing certain improvement works specified in a schedule; the expenses of the works for making new approaches to the town hall, & for enlarging & altering the existing streets, to be defrayed by a "street" improvement rate," not exceeding 6*d.* in the pound, & mortgageable to the extent of £100,000; & all other expenses of carrying the Act into execution to be defrayed by a "borough improvement rate," not exceeding 2*s.* in the pound, & mortgageable to the extent of £150,000. From the street improvement rate certain classes of persons were wholly exempted, & canal & railway cos. were in part exempted. Nothing therein contained was to alter any of the powers, privileges, & authorities vested in the corpn. by any past or future Acts in relation to municipal corpns. By another local Act, passed in 1861, certain other specified improvements were provided for, & it was declared that the expense of, amongst other things, widening & improving certain specified streets was to be defrayed out of the "street improvement rate." Municipal Corporation Mortgages Act, 1860 (c. 16), empowers corpns. generally, with the approbation of the Treasury, upon application made after due notice given, to make purchases of land for public purposes; but nothing therein contained is to "repeal, abridge, or affect," any power or authority of any body corporate or council, under any local Act. The corpn. of Birmingham having contracted for the purchase of land for the widening of a street, not comprised in the works specified in the local Acts of 1851, & 1861, & having, after due notice given, & after all parties interested in the scheme had been heard before a Comr. deputed by the Treasury, obtained the sanction of the Treasury to the purchase of the land, & the charging of the borough fund with the purchase-money:—Held: upon construction of the statutes, the corpn. were lawfully empowered to raise the purchase-money out of the "borough fund."—A.-G. v. BIRMINGHAM CORPN. (1866), L. R. 3 Eq. 552.

546. Pension for charity schoolmaster.]—Under scheme approved by the High Ct. of Ch., a corpn. school was to be maintained out of the surplus income of a hospital & the appointment of headmaster was to be in the corpn., but no provision was made for the grant of any pension to the headmaster so appointed. Upon a rule for certiorari to bring up & quash a resolution of the corpn., ordering payment out of the borough fund of a pension to a master appointed by them:—Held: the pension did not come within any of the purposes specified in 1835 Act to which that fund was applicable, & could not be held to be for the public convenience of the inhabitants, & the resolution was, therefore, void.—R. v. BROWN (1875), 39 J. P. Jo. 388.

547. Dinners for jurors.]—The corpn. of B., as lords of the manor, entertained juries of the manor at dinner, etc., & charged the expense to the borough fund:—Held: the corpn. had no authority to defray the charge out of the borough fund.—R. v. BIDEFORD CORPN. (1883), 47 J. P. Jo. 756.

548. Extraordinary expenditure—Additional remuneration to mayor—For jubilee celebrations.]—A municipal corpn. passed resolutions to the effect that, pursuant to 1882 Act, s. 15 (4), a certain sum should be paid to the mayor by way of remuneration, & the mayor should be requested to take such steps as he might deem proper for the due celebration of the jubilee of Her Majesty's reign. Some of the burgesses moved to restrain the corpn. from applying any part of the borough fund in the celebration of the jubilee:—Held: the provisions of 1882 Act had not been contravened, & an interlocutory injunction would not be granted.

550. Payment to free bridge of tolls.]—A municipal corpn., which was subject to 1882 Act & a local improvement Act agreed with a railway co. to pay the co. a certain annual sum for fifteen years in consideration that the co. would throw open the roadway of a bridge belonging to them within the borough for the use of foot passengers free from toll. The local Act authorised rates for certain purposes not including such a bridge as the agreement referred to, & provided that the money accruing from the general rate should be applied to certain specified purposes " & subject thereto for the improvement or benefit of the borough in such manner as the corpn. from time to time think fit in as full & ample a manner as any borough rate authorised by the Municipal Corporations Acts is made applicable." against the corpn., claiming an injunction to restrain the corpn. from making the payments out of moneys derived from the rates & a declaration that the agreement was ultra vires & void:—Held: there must be a declaration that the corpn. were not entitled to pay any moneys, which might become payable under the agreement, out of the borough fund, nor to make any borough rate nor any general or improvement rate under 1882 Act or the local Act for the purpose of such payments; but the agreement was not ultra vires or void, & the foregoing declaration was not to prevent the corpn. from paying such moneys out of any surplus which there might be of the borough fund or of the rates after applying the same respectively to the purpose for which they might respectively be made under the provisions of those Acts, with liberty to pltf. to apply for an injunction if necessary.—NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE CORPN. v. Amongst other terms of arrangement he agreed that the corpn. should pay the expenses of the bill if they resolved to take the tramways according to their powers in the bill. The council consented to these terms, & after the Act was passed resolved to take the tramways; they afterwards resolved to pay the expenses agreed to. 580. — By overdraft from bank — As temporary loan.]—A borough council in their estimate for a general district rate for the borough included items which consisted of debts contracted in former years & which had from year to year been carried to a "suspense account" opened for that purpose, & a balance due for works executed in previous years. The council from time to time paid these old debts by money borrowed from their bank by overdrafts, but, so far as the ratepayers were concerned, the items remained unpaid so long as they appeared in the suspense account. Applt. appealed against the rate on the ground that it contained charges incurred more than six months before the making of the rate:—Held: the estimate could be looked at for the purpose of seeing what items were included in the rate; & there was sufficient ground for holding that the rate contained items which were more than six months old, & the council could not by borrowing money from the bank & paying these old debts, treat the debts as the debts of the bank, & so prevent the charges from being retrospective charges more than six months old within P. H. Act, 1875, s. 210; & the rate was bad in consequence.

It was said by the corpn. that they had borrowed from their bank, & that it was true their accounts were going from bad to worse & that they were owing their bank more & more, but they contended paid their tradesmen, & had paid their principal debts, & that the whole had become a debt due to the bank, & that therefore it must only be assumed at the end of the given financial year that they owed the bank so much money, & that it was to meet that debt that they made this rate. It seems to me that if that argument were allowed to prevail, a public body would only have to arrange with their bankers to borrow money to pay their debts & so defeat the provisions of sect. 210 altogether. I cannot think that argument is right (LORD ALVERSTONE, C.J.).

Nothing that I am saying, & nothing that my Lord has said, would in any way suggest that there would have been anything wrong in that which must as a matter of practice always be done, namely, in having temporary loans within the limits of their borrowing powers, in respect of matters which they have to pay quickly when they want to raise a loan & to raise their whole loan in one sum, as, for instance, by issuing stock, in which case they must incur some small expenditure before they raise their loan. In such a case obviously a temporary loan from the bankers within the limits of their borrowing powers would, of course, stand upon a totally different footing from such things as have been done here (CHANNELL, J.). —SMITH v. SOUTHAMPTON CORPN., [1902] 2 K. B. 244; 71 L. J. K. B. 639; 87 L. T. 171; 67 J. P. 5; 50 W. R. 651, D. C.

581. — What amounts to.]—A corpn. with statutory borrowing powers to be exercised with the consent of the Local Govt. Board were in the habit of borrowing money from their bank by way of overdraft before such consent had been obtained. These overdrafts extended over a number of years, & at one time amounted to £200,000. A considerable portion of this money, which they were entitled to borrow for specific purposes only, they used for general purposes. In reduction of these overdrafts the bank, with the approval of the corpn., had applied certain moneys in their hands belonging to the consolidated loans fund contrary to the provisions of the Act of Parliament creating the fund:—Held: (1) the obtaining of the overdraft was ultra vires the corpn.; qu.: whether an overdraft extending over several years for substantially the whole amount of the authorised loan could be justified as a temporary loan; (2) the overdraft obtained from the bank for general purposes in respect of powers granted for specific purposes was illegal; (3) the application of money due to the consolidated loans fund in repayment of the overdrafts in question was illegal.—*A.-G. v. 588. Compliance with formalities—Whether presumed.]—On Feb. 16, 1836, thirty mtges. of the rates of the borough for £100 each, & on Apr. 29, 1836, eight other mtges. of the rates for £100 each were made by the then mayor & two other justices of the town & port, in pursuance of the powers of 24 Geo. 3, c. 54, to J. The mtges. were to be discharged pursuant to the directions of the Act; & interest was to be paid at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum. The moneys in consideration of which the mtges. had been made had been advanced by the mtgee., & applied in defraying the expenses of purchasing, pursuant to a presentment & resolution of sessions before 1835 Act, & converting into a new gaol & sessions house for the borough & port certain buildings called the Maison Dieu, & the land adjoining. It was not known whether 24 Geo. 3, c. 54, s. 9, was complied with in respect of an estimate of the cost of the conversion of the Maison Dieu into a gaol & sessions house having been made, or in respect of its having been ascertained by means of an estimate, whether such cost would exceed one half the amount of the ordinary annual assessment for the rate in nature of a county rate upon the borough, & the limits & precincts of same; but in fact the actual expenditure did exceed one half the amount of such assessment. The first election of councillor under 1835 Act, took place on Dec. 26, 1835; of aldermen on Dec. 31, 1835; & of mayor on Jan. 1, 1836. The principal money had not been paid; & no interest had been paid on the thirty mtges. since Aug. 16, 1847, or on the eight mtges. since Oct. 29, 1847:—Held: after the lapse of, & regular payment of interest for, so many years, the ct. could not presume that an estimate had not been made, or that the justices had acted without jurisdiction.—R. v. Application had to be made to the deputies for any such allotment, & any person aggrieved with their decision could appeal to the justices, of the borough in petty or special sessions, whose determination was "to be final & conclusive, & not removable by certiorari, or any other writ or process whatsoever, into any of Her Majesty's Cts. of Record." By another local Act, the borough had been enlarged to include certain areas called "the added areas." The applicant, a freeman of the borough, & resident in one of the added areas, applied to the deputies for an allotment, but his application was refused on the ground that he was not resident within the borough as constituted at the time of the enactment of the first local Act. He appealed to the justices, who granted his application, but at the request of the deputies they stated a case under Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (c. 49), s. 33 :—Held : on the merits, the extension of the limits of the borough carried with it the extension of the area of the residential privilege.—LEICESTER BOROUGH

640. — Whether mayor & corporation—Action on behalf of ratepayers.]—In pursuance of a resolution passed by the watch committee of a borough incorporated under 1835 Act, the justices of the county provided police for the borough from 1869 to 1887. The expenses of such police for each half-year were provided for in advance by a rate levied on the borough, & the sum so raised was, together with the sums collected from the other townships of the union in which the borough was situate, paid to the county treasurer by the guardians of the union in obedience to precept addressed to them by the county justices. By 1835 Act, the watch committee were required to appoint police for the borough, & on June 30, 1887, they withdrew the county police & appointed borough constables. At this date the county justices had in their hands a sum arising from a rate levied on the borough applicable for the future expenses of the police in the division in which the borough was situate, but there was no ascertained sum applicable exclusively to the police provided for the borough. In an action by the mayor & corpn., suing on behalf of all the ratepayers of the borough, & the guardians of the union against the council of the county as successors of the county justices, to recover the amount overpaid by the borough:—Held: (1) pltf. were not entitled to represent the ratepayers of the borough; (2) the remedy against defts., if any, was by mandamus; (3) on the merits the money was not recoverable on the ground of extortion colore officii, as it was paid under a voluntary arrangement; nor on the ground of a partial failure of consideration as the proportion overpaid was not properly ascertainable.—BOOTLE-CUM-LINACRE CORPN. v. LANCASHIRE COUNTY COUNCIL (1890), 60 L. t. In what name action brought—Whether by officer in individual capacity.]—In an action by a treasurer of a district, under the Division Courts Act, against the clerk of a division ct., for not paying over moneys received, it is sufficient to declare in the treasurer's own name for money had & received by deft. to the use of pltf. for the purposes of the Act.—HOWARD v. WALTON (1845), 2 U. C. R. 266.—CAN.

applt. on behalf of the mayor & corpn. of L. preferred an information against resps. for damaging a holly tree at B., the property of the corpn., to the amount of £5. Applt. was chief ranger of B.; & stated on oath that he had a general power to prosecute for offences under the B. bye-laws on behalf of the corpn. The present proceedings were initiated, not under the bye-laws but under Malicious Damage Act, 1861 (c. 97), s. 22. The solr. representing resps. asked for the production of a copy of the minute or resolution authorising applt. to prefer the information. No such authority, being produced, he raised the objection that as the information was laid on behalf of the corpn. of L. it was laid by a corporate body, & should therefore have been laid by an attorney duly appointed under the common seal or warrant of the corpn. It was contended that the justices could not proceed to hear the information. The justices acceded to this view & dismissed the information:—Held: the information was properly laid.—DUCHESNE v. FINCH (1912), 107 L. T. 412; 76 J. P. 377; 28 T. L. R. 440; 10 L. G. R. 559; 23 Cox, C. C. 170, D. C.

643. ——— ——— ——— ———.] — In prosecution by officers of city or borough councils for penalties in respect of the local licences transferred to the councils by the Finance Act, 1908 (c. 16), & the Order in Council of Oct. 19, 1908, specific authorisation of the proceedings by the councils must be proved. County & borough councils are the successors to the powers & duties of the Comrs. of Inland Revenue in regard to the local taxation licences transferred to them; & their powers are not more extensive than those of the comrs. Under Excise Management Act, 1827 (c. 53), & Inland Revenue Regulations Act, 1890 (c. 21), specific authorisation of the prosecution by the comrs. in each case must be proved, & this is now the case in prosecutions instituted by officers of county & borough councils.—JONES v. WILSON, [1918] 2 K. Councils Act, 1841, a municipal council can in their corporate name enforce payment of debts due to the district where neither the magistrates nor their treasurer could have sued formerly, but they cannot vary the rights of the parties, nor alter any contract.—OTTAWA DISTRICT COUNCIL v. Low (1842), 6 O. S. 546.—CAN.

b. Recovery of improvement expenses.—A council has no power to lay down a side-walk & sue for cost of same. The remedy is by indictment for non-repair, or action for the penalty. — MUNICIPAL COUNCIL v. STABB (1891), 7 Nfld. L. R. 486.—NFLD.

PART VII. SECT. 8, SUB-SECT. 8.—A.

c. Alderman — Failure to attend revision court—Action not maintainable by ratepayer.]—An action cannot be maintained against an individual alderman for his neglect or refusal to attend & constitute a revision ct., as the duty of attendance is one of public concernment only, & involves no question of private right. Municipalities Act, 1867, imposes such duty on the council alone.—HOWE v. HARRISKY (1884), 5 N. S. W. L. R. 223.—AUS.

644. Action for libel—Imputation of corrupt practices by corporation.]—In an action for libel brought by a corpn., the statement of claim complained that deflt. had charged pltfs. with corrupt practices. It contained no allegation that pltfs. had suffered any special pecuniary damage in consequence of such imputation:—Held: inasmuch as a corpn., as distinguished from the individuals composing it, cannot be guilty of corrupt practices, the statement of claim disclosed no cause of action.—MANCHESTER CORPN. v. 648. Recovery of penalty under 1882 Act, s. 224—For acting in corporate office when disqualified—Application of statutory requirements—Whether to Municipal Elections (Corrupt & Illegal Practices Act), 1884 (c. 70).]—In Nov. 1920, defts. were candidates at a municipal election. They were duly elected. They failed within the time limited to make the return & declaration required by Municipal Elections (Corrupt & Illegal Practices) Act, 1884 (c. 70), s. 21 (3), & after the expiration of the twenty-eight days allowed for that purpose by sub-sect. 4 of that sect., they sat & voted at meetings of the council, meetings of committees, & at meetings of the council sitting to exercise the functions of an urban council under the Public Health Acts. Pltf. brought two actions against them, claiming, as a common informer, to recover the penalties under Municipal Elections (Corrupt & Illegal Practices) Act, 1884 (c. 70), s. 21. Defts. relied on 1882 Act, sect. 224. It was admitted that the requirements of this sect. had not been complied with in this case:—Held: (1) the subject-matter 1882 Act, sect. 224, is quite distinct from the subject-matter of the Act of 1884, & therefore, 1882 Act, s. 224, does not apply to Municipal Elections (Corrupt & Illegal Practices) Act, 1884 (c. 70), s. 21 (4); (2) pltf., as a common informer, was entitled, subject to any question of relief by the ct. under Municipal Elections (Corrupt & Illegal Practices) Act, 1884 (c. 70), s. 21 (7), to recover penalties against defts. under sub-sect. 4 of that sect.; (3) Municipal Elections (Corrupt & Illegal Practices) Act, 1884 (c. 70), s. 21 (4), being a penal section, must be construed strictly in favour of defts.; (4) having regard to the facts as found by the judge that defts. were ignorant of the technical requirements of the sect. & that the actions were instigated from improper motives, an opportunity must be given to defts. to apply to the ct. for relief under the sect. before judgment should be entered in the actions.—NICHOL v. FEARBY, NICHOL v. ROBINSON (1922), 127 L. Act, 1875, pursuant to sect. 229, purported to apportion them between certain parishes, & issued their precepts for the amounts due under the apportionments. The overseers of one parish having received notice of such apportionment, appealed to the Local Govt. Board under that sect. against such apportionment. Before the decision of the Local Govt. Board was made known application was made to justices under sect. 231 for a distress warrant to recover the amount of the precept. The justices adjourned the hearing of such application until the decision of the Local Govt. Board was made known:—Held: the justices were entitled to do so.—R. v. FOX, Ex p. PLYMPTON ST. An action was brought by the district council, as successors to such surveyors of highways, against deft. for damages & an injunction for wrongfully depasturing his cattle on the said road, the A.-G. being joined on their relation:—Held: as the property in the said herbage was in the parish council, as representing the inhabitants of the parish, who had the beneficial interest in the said sale, which council, & not the district council, was held to be the proper pltf., & consequently only the interests of a small part of the community were involved & not those of the community at large, the A.-G. could not be joined as a pltf.—A.-G. & SPALDING RURAL COUNCIL v. 696. Counties separated by river — Medium flum rule applies.]—At the trial of a presentment for the non-repair of half a bridge, being a county bridge, the jury returned a special verdict showing that the bridge in question is in the parish of G., which is partly in the county of R. & partly in the county of B. ; that it is thrown over the Wye ; & if that river had always been the boundary of those two counties, the part of G. parish on the B. side, the right bank, containing about 470 acres, would always have been in the county of B., & the duty of repairing one half of the bridge would have rested on the inhabitants of that county. These 470 acres had been taken to be part of the county of R. ; & previously to the passing of Counties detached Parts Act, 1844 (c. 61), whole of the bridge had always been repaired by the inhabitants of the county of R. By 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 64, a part of the parish of G., is described as an isolated part of B., as locally situate in B., or R. ; & is by sect. 26 annexed to B. for the purpose of election for members to serve in Parliament. By Counties detached Parts Act, 1844 (c. 61), from & after Oct. 21, 1844, every part of any county in England & Wales, which is detached from the main body of such county, shall be considered for all purposes as forming part of that county of which it is considered a part for the purposes of the election of members, etc., under the provisions of 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 64. At the hearing, an amendment was made in the special verdict, by which it was conceded that the above-mentioned piece of 470 acres was the only part of G. parish to which the provision in 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 64, sched. M., could apply :—Held : in the absence of any words in the Act determining

Several weeks previously he had attended a meeting of persons who afterwards served notices upon the council of their intention to oppose the application. At this meeting the witnesses it was proposed to call at the hearing were present & their evidence was discussed. He took no part in this discussion, but on being requested to do so explained the procedure before the licensing committee, & also said that assuming the facts to be as stated the matter should be placed before the committee, but he declined to give any opinion as to what importance the committee or council would attach to them. He took no further part in the meeting & the terms of the notices of opposition were not settled there, & he did not at any time take part in assisting to settle them or in advising thereon:—Held: the facts did not furnish sufficient grounds for inferring such bias in favour of the promoters as to disqualify the member from voting on the application & thereby to invalidate the council's decision.—*R. v. By an agreement in 1846, the county of M. joined this union, & agreed to pay a specified sum in respect of the expenses already incurred & to be incurred in the erection of the asylum, & it was also agreed that these three bodies should contribute to the future maintenance of the asylum in certain shares. These three bodies thus became the joint owners of the asylum. By subsequent agreements, made in 1851, 1866, & 1869 respectively, the boroughs of O., B., & L. in the county of Salop were admitted to & joined this union, & became united with the counties of S. & M. & the borough of W., for the purpose of using the joint asylum for their lunatics, each having a representative on the board of visitors. These agreements provided that these three boroughs should pay an annual rent to the treasurer of the asylum for the privilege of using the asylum, & they also provided that in case of a dissolution of the union these boroughs should not be entitled to any right, claim, or interest in the asylum, & in consideration thereof should not be liable, during the continuance of the union, to contribute towards the expenses of the asylum. Each of the three boroughs was, at the date when 1888 Act came into operation, a quarter sessions borough with a population of less than 10,000:—Held: (1) the liability of the boroughs of O., B., & L., under the above agreements, to provide for the maintenance, management of, & other dealings with the joint asylum, was not extinguished, but was transferred under 1888 Act, sect. 38 (1), from the borough to the county council of Salop, but subject to the contracts which had been entered into between these boroughs & the visiting justices of the asylum; (2) in a case stated under 1888 Act, sect. 29, the ct. has no jurisdiction to decide questions of adjustment of liabilities under sect. 62.—Re SALOP COUNTY COUNCIL (1891), 65 L. In these circumstances the county council made an order that for the purpose of the election of guardians the parish should be divided into the same five wards, & that of the seven guardians for the parish three of the wards should have one guardian each & the other two wards two guardians each:—Held: the order, notwithstanding that it reaffirmed the existing number of guardians for the parish, namely, seven, could properly be said to "fix" the number of guardians for the parish within the earlier part of sub-sect. 1 of 1894 Act, s. 60, & therefore, having been made for that purpose, in purporting to divide the parish into wards under the later part of sub-sect. 1 it was a valid order.—*R. v. The justices, therefore, still possess the discretionary jurisdiction conferred on them by the latter sect., although the county council has already given a decision on the matter under the former section.

1894 Act, s. 17 (8), only empowers the county council to make an order regarding the custody of or access to, books, documents, writings, & papers. The county council are nowhere empowered to make an order regarding a portion of a book, document, writing or paper. On an application for a prohibition to the council:—Held: the power of the County Council to amend, by scheme or order, any local or personal Act extends to the amendment of any portion of an Act, whether public & general or local & personal, provided the portion amended is of a local & personal nature; the clauses of the local Acts which related to the burial-ground were of a local & personal nature; &, consequently, the County Council had authority to entertain the proposal & make an order.

incurred by the board were to be defrayed out of a common fund to be contributed by the constituent authorities. The board proposed to bring into Parliament a bill to extend their powers. ##### C. Standing Joint Committee of Council and Quarter Sessions.

See 1888 Act, ss. 9, 30.

719. Relations with county council — Jurisdiction in regard to accommodation of quarter sessions.]—Certain questions arose between the S. county council & the standing joint committee in respect of the transfer or non-transfer of certain powers & duties with regard to the management, maintaining, & repairing of the following classes of buildings: the Shire Hall at T. & the cts. at W., buildings each containing under one roof the cts. used for assizes, for the sittings of the county council, quarter sessions & petty sessions, the high sheriff's room, the grand jury room, & the judges' lodgings. Also, of various petty sessional ct. houses, justices' rooms, police stations, & lock up houses in different parts of the county. These questions had reference to the points whether the power & duty of managing, controlling, maintaining, or repairing the above ct. buildings, or any of them, was transferred to the county council or to the standing joint committee, & as to which body was transferred the power & duty of acquiring additional buildings for the like purposes; & as to whether the power of determining expenditure, vested in the standing joint committee by 1888 Act, s. 30 (3), enables that committee to repair, erect, or acquire ct. buildings without previous application or intervention by the county council, or whether such power only enables them to do so on the default of the council to provide proper accommodation; & also as to which body is transferred the power of making standing orders & regulations as to the management of the said buildings:—Held: (1) all the questions ought to be answered in favour of the standing joint committee; because, though the property in the buildings is vested in the county council, yet by 1888 Act, s. 30 (3), the standing joint committee have complete control of all the questions arising within the sub-sect.; & with respect to all buildings & premises which are within the purview of the sub-sect., all questions with regard to them, or to anything incidental to them, are to be determined by the standing joint committee, & it is their duty to say what expenditure shall be required, & then, upon requisition, the county council are to supply the funds, & it is the duty of the county council to obey the requisition & pay the money; (2) as to the power of making standing orders & regulations for the management & control of such buildings, that power is conferred on both bodies of making such standing

721. ——— Contracts for employment of extra police.—Riots occurred in connection with strikes of workmen at pl'tfs.' coal mines. The police force of the county being unable to cope with the disturbances, the chief constable with the authority of the magistrates of the petty sessional division, telegraphed for the military to be sent down, but the Home Secretary instead sent some metropolitan police. The chief constable also made agreements under Police Act, 1890 (c. 45), s. 25, with the police authorities of other counties & boroughs for the supply of extra police. These agreements contained provisions for the housing & feeding by the aided authority of the imported police. Pl'tfs. at the request of the chief constable, provided housing accommodation & meals for a number of the police so brought into the county & for the metropolitan police. The standing joint committee, who were the police authority for the county, expressly repudiated liability in respect of the metropolitan police on the ground that their assistance had not been requested. In an action by pl'tfs. against the standing joint committee & the county council to recover the expenses so incurred by them for housing & feeding the imported police:—Held: (1) defts. were liable for the expense of housing & feeding the police other than the metropolitan police, the evidence showing either that the chief constable had antecedent authority from the standing joint committee to make the necessary contracts under s. 25 of the Police Act, 1890, for bringing them in & for housing & feeding them, or that the standing joint committee had ratified his acts; but (2) defts. were not liable in respect of the metropolitan police, the standing joint committee not having asked for their assistance & having repudiated all liability in respect of them; (3) (PICKFORD, L.J. & BRAY, J.) the standing joint committee had power to enter into the contracts so as to bind themselves, & they were therefore rightly sued upon them, the county council being properly joined as parties to the action as they were the persons who would have to pay the amount found due & against whom an order for payment might be necessary;

(4) (PHILLIMORE, L.J.) the contracts were the contracts of the county council though made by the standing joint committee, & the latter were properly made parties to the action as it was convenient that the matter should be decided in the presence of the committee who actually made the contracts.—*GLAMORGAN COAL CO. v. Payment was made by him, & his account was afterwards allowed at the quarter sessions. It was held that the order not having been made at a "special session held for the purpose" was invalid; but, the ct. being of opinion that there was no objection to the order in point of form, & that the treasurer was therefore justified in paying it, & taking into consideration the fact that the money had been paid, & the account allowed, discharged a rule which had been obtained for a writ of certiorari to bring the order up to be quashed.—*R. v. 735. — What are — Payments in respect of undertaking — Though producing profits.]—A county council constituted under the Local Government 1888 Act is not in the position of a municipal corpn. created by Royal Charter, but is the creation of statute, & can only exercise such powers as are conferred upon it by statute. Any power, therefore, the assumption of which cannot be justified by the statutes under which the council acts, must be taken not to exist.

The London County Council, which was constituted under 1888 Act, had power under Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 75), s. 43, to purchase compulsorily, & under London Tramways Co. (Limited) Act, 1896 (c. clxxxix), s. 31, to purchase by agreement, the undertakings of certain tramways including any works & property connected therewith. Under London County Tramways Act, 1896 (c. li), s. 2, the Council had power to work the tramways, & provide carriages, horses, cars, & fixed & movable plant for that purpose. Under London County Council (Vauxhall Bridge Tramways) Act, 1896 (c. cexi), s. 21, the Council were to cause accounts to be kept of their receipts & expenditure "in connection with tramways," & set off one against the other; & so far as the tramway revenue was insufficient to cover the expenses the deficiency was to be paid as payment & for general or special county purposes under 1888 Act, & any surplus was to be carried to the county fund. The Council purchased by agreement the whole undertaking of a tramway co. The co. at that time were running omnibuses as feeders to their tramways on certain routes. The Council took over the omnibuses with the tramways, & continued to run them, & extended the route of one line. Passengers used the omnibuses who were not going to or coming from the tramways, & a profit was earned from running them:—Held: (1) the omnibus business was a separate & distinct business from the tramway

739. — — — Refreshments.]—The quarter sessions of the county of L. made rules to regulate the payment of moneys by the treasurer for the expenses of the gaols & houses of correction, by which the expenses were to be from time to time certified by two visiting justices, & then to be paid by the county treasurer. It was the custom to allow refreshments to the justices & jurors at the sessions held at the court house in one of the gaols, & to charge them as part of the expenses of the gaol. At a public inquiry into the conduct of a county ct. judge in Nov., 1851, refreshments were furnished to those who attended, & two visiting justices ordered the amount to be paid by the treasurer. At an adjourned general sessions in Sept. 1852, this payment was disallowed in the accounts of the treasurer, & an abstract of his accounts, with this disallowance, was transmitted to the Secretary of State, in pursuance of County Rates Act, 1852 (c. 81), s. 50. Under the Act the quarter sessions of the county could levy rates on the district in the same manner as was then authorised for making county rates. There are now two county boroughs under 1888 Act in the district. On a question submitted summarily to the ct. under 1888 Act, s. 29:—Held: the county council has the power to levy the rates on such part of the stipendiary district as is not included within either of the county boroughs, & the liability of the county boroughs should be redeemed by an adjustment under 1888 Act, s. 32.—*Ex p. The county council having claimed that the borough should redeem their liability to such contribution under the provisions of the sect., & the borough having tendered evidence before an arbitrator that the share of the costs incurred by the county in respect of the borough exceeded the amount of the contribution:—Held: the words "redeem the liability" in 1888 Act, s. 32 (3) (b), did not mean that, although the county were no longer to render services to the borough, yet the annual payment was to be capitalised for an amount which would bring in annually for the same sum as the county had been receiving from the borough in respect of services which the

See Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5); Mental Deficiency Act, 1913 (c. 28).

1. "Lunatic."—(1) Return to a commission of lunacy, that the party is so far debilitated in his mind as to be incapable of the general management of his affairs, quashed; & a new commission issued: a "Melius Inquirendum" not issuing in lunacy. (2) The commission of lunacy applicable to incapacity from causes, distinct from lunacy; as old age: but the return, if not in the words of the commission, must have equivalent words; & in such a case the proper return is, that the party is of unsound mind; so that he is not sufficient for the government of himself, etc. (3) Privilege of the party, who is the subject of a commission of lunacy, to be present at the execution. (4) Order, that a person, against whom a commission of lunacy was established, should be delivered up to the committee. Habeas Corpus not necessary.

Littleton explaineth a man of no sound memory to be non compos mentis (LORD ERSKINE, C.).

Lord Coke . . . puts that person [lunaticus] by himself; describing him to be a man, who hath sometimes his understanding, & sometimes not; & this is the ancient law of the country (LORD ERSKINE, C.).—Ex p. CRANMER (1806), 12 Ves. 445; 33 E. R. 168.

2. — Imbecile.—Imbecility & loss of mental power, whether arising from natural decay or from paralysis, softening of the brain, or other natural cause, & although unaccompanied by frenzy or delusion of any kind, constitute unsoundness of mind amounting to lunacy within the meaning of 8 & 9 Vict. c. 100.—R. v. SHAW (1868), L. R. 1 C. C. R. 145; 37 L. J. M. C. 112; 18 L. T. 583; 16 W. R. 913; 11 Cox, C. C. 109, C. C. R.

6. "Unsoundness of mind."—Ex p. CRANMER, No. 1, ante.

7. — Strong belief in non-existent things.—Partial insanity is good in defeasance of a will founded immediately, so to be presumed, in or upon such partial insanity. If A. then make a will plainly inofficious, in respect to B., & is proved at the time of making it to have been under a morbid delusion, as to the character & conduct of B., the Ct. of Probate will relieve against, by pronouncing this will to be invalid, & holding A. to have died intestate, in law; how sane soever, in other particulars, or even generally, <sup>A</sup>, at the time in question of making the will, may be proved to have been.

Still, however, with all this, among the vulgar, some are for reckoning madmen those only who are frantic, or violent, to some extent. Insanity, however decided, unaccompanied with such symptoms, they are content to refer to eccentricity or extravagance. Others, again, in the opposite extreme, are too apt to confound mere folly with frenzy; & to describe as odd, or eccentric, or in some such phrase, patients who, in better judgments, are actually, & essentially, insane. What, then, to come back to our proposed subject of inquiry, is the true criterion of insanity? &, principally, how is it distinguished, this being, obviously, our principal concern, from eccentricity, or extravagance, merely. The true criterion—the true test—of the absence or presence of insanity, I take to be, the absence or presence of what, used in a certain sense of it, is comprisable in a single term, namely—delusion. Wherever the patient once conceives something extravagant to exist, which has, still, no existence whatever but in his own heated imagination; & wherever, at the same time, having once so conceived, he is incapable of being, or, at least, of being permanently, reasoned out of that conception; such a patient is said to be under a delusion, in a peculiar, half-technical, sense of the term; & the absence, or presence, of delusion, so understood, forms, in my judgment, the true, & only test, or criterion, of absent, or present, insanity. In short, I look upon delusion, in this sense of it, & insanity, to be, almost, if not altogether, convertible terms; so that a patient, under a delusion, so understood, on any subject, or subjects, in any degree, is, for that reason, essentially mad, or insane, on such subject, or subjects, in that degree. On the contrary, in the absence of any such delusion, with whatever extravagances a supposed lunatic may be justly chargeable, & how like soever to a real madman he may either speak or act, on some, or on all subjects; still, in the absence, I repeat, of any thing in the nature of delusion, so understood as above, the supposed lunatic is, in my judgment, not properly, or essentially, insane (SIR JOHN NICHOLL).—DEW v. CLARK & CLARK (1826), 3 Add. 79; 162 E. R. 410.

9. — Eccentricity & delusions.—DEW v. CLARK & CLARK, No. 7, ante.

10. —.—Exposition of the doctrine of monomania & partial insanity, as applied to wills.

If the mind is unsound on one subject, provided that unsoundness is, at all times, existing upon that subject, it is erroneous to suppose such a mind is really sound on other subjects; it is only sound in appearance, for if the subject of the delusion be presented to it, the unsoundness would be manifested by such a person believing in the suggestions of fancy, as if they were realities; any act, therefore, done by such a person, however apparently rational that act may appear to be, is void, as it is the act of a morbid or unsound mind.

Delusion is the belief of things as realities, which

PART I. SECT. 1.

2i. "Lunatic"—Imbecile.—A person whom it was sought to have a lunatic was shown to be in a state of mind described as senile imbecility :—Held : he might properly be declared a lunatic.—Re KELLY (1875), 6 P. R. 220.—CAN.

a. "Insanity."—There is no such thing as equitable insanity. It is a legal thing, understood according to a legal definition. A deprivation of sense & a total want of understanding to contract: a deprivation of a man's exist only in the imagination of the patient. The frame of mind which indicates his incapacity to struggle against such an erroneous belief constitutes an unsound frame of mind.

To constitute a lucid interval, the party must freely & voluntarily, & without any design at the time, of pretending sanity & freedom from delusion, confess his delusion.

Where delusions are proved to have existed, both before & after the factum, the presumption is, that they existed at the time of the factum, & in such case, proof of a lucid interval, at the time of the factum, is thrown upon the party propounding a will. It is immaterial that the delusions do not appear on the face of the will.

A will written in 1834, by a widow, without children, a person originally eccentric, & in after-life, developing unsound delusions, conferred great benefit on a stranger, the will not betraying, on the face of it, marks of insanity, in the circumstances, pronounced against.

By far the greater number of morbid cases belong to this class. They have acquired a name, the disease called familiarly, as well as by physicians, "monomania," on the supposition of its being confined, which it rarely is, to a single faculty, or exercise of the mind: a person shall be of sound mind, to all appearance, upon all subjects save one or two; & on these he shall be subject to delusions, mistaking for realities, the suggestions of his imagination. The disease here is said to be in the imagination; that is, the patient's mind is morbid, or unsound, when it imagines; healthy & sound when it remembers. Nay; he may be of unsound mind when his imagination is employed on some subjects, in making some combinations; & sound when making others, or making one single kind of combination. Thus, he may not believe all his fancies to be realities, but only some, or one; of such a person we usually predicate, that he is of unsound mind only upon certain points (LORD BROUGHAM, C.).

In the well known case of Dew v. Clark, No. 7, ante, . . . we find SIR JOHN NICHOLL stating that mere eccentricity is not enough to constitute mental unsoundness, nor great caprice, nor violence of temper, but that there must be an aberration of reason; & he adopts a definition of delusion . . . that "it is a belief of facts which no rational person would have believed," Perhaps, in a strictly logical view, this definition is liable to one exception, or at least exposed to one criticism, that it gives a consequence for a definition; & it may be more strictly accurate to term "delusion" the belief of things as realities, which exist only in the imagination of the patient. The frame or state of mind which indicates his incapacity to struggle against such an erroneous belief, constitutes an unsound frame of mind (LORD BROUGHAM, C.).—WARING v. WARING (1848), 6 Moo. P. NORTH, J., in an action in the Ch. Div., gave a judgment removing a trustee of unsound mind & appointing a new trustee in his place, but declined to make an order under s. 34 of the above Act vesting the estate in the new trustee, considering that it ought to be applied for in Lunacy. We have considered whether the order might not be made in the Ch. Div. only by virtue of the jurisdiction delegated to us at the special request of the Lord Chancellor that we should act as judges of the Ch. Div. in matters connected with our jurisdiction in Lunacy, but we think that such jurisdiction can only be exercised in aid of the jurisdiction in Lunacy, & that we ought not to make an order only in the Ch. One of such delusions did to some extent enter into the matter of the contract, but, in the opinion of the ct., not so far as to form the foundation of it. The medical evidence was that the vendor, though capable to some extent of transacting business, was not competent to enter into the contract in question, which, however, was reasonable & simple. There was strong lay evidence that the vendor perfectly understood the transaction. The ct. being of opinion on the whole evidence, notwithstanding the medical testimony, that the vendor was sufficiently sane at the time to understand, & did understand, the transaction, granted specific performance.—*BIRKIN v. ### SECT. 2.—CONTRACTS.

SUB-SECT. 1.—CONTRACTS GENERALLY.

A. Bonâ fide Transactions Without Notice.

47. General rule—Not set aside.]—A bill was filed to set aside a deed of conveyance twenty-seven years after its execution, on the ground of the lunacy of grantor & other collateral circumstances of fraud. At the hearing of the cause these collateral circumstances were not established:—Held: pltf. was not entitled to an issue to try the question of the lunacy of the grantor.

Qu.: whether a conveyance executed by a lunatic is absolutely void in the absence of notice of the lunacy to the party claiming under the conveyance, & of all circumstances of fraud.

Qu.: whether such a conveyance is voidable, & if so, under what circumstances.

Such a conveyance executed under circumstances of fraud, the lunacy being one of those circumstances, might be set aside. It is an established doctrine of equity, that where a bill sets up a case of fraud as a ground for relief & such fraud is not proved, pltf. is not entitled to relief by establishing some other fact independent of the fraud, which might of itself create a title to relief under a head of equity distinct from that applicable to the case of the fraud alleged.—PRICE v. BERRINGTON (1851), 3 Mac. & G. 486; 18 L. T. O. S. 56; 15 Jur. 999; 42 E. R. 348, L. C.

48. —.]—ELLIOT v. INCE, No. 126, post.

49. — Impossibility of putting parties in statu quo.]—A ct. of equity will not interfere to set aside a contract, overreached by an inquisition in lunacy, if fair & without notice; especially where the parties cannot be reinstated.

—AUS.

47 ii. —.]—The rule both of law & equity, as to a contract entered into by a person apparently of sound mind & not known by the other contracting party to be insane, is that such a contract, if fair, bonâ fide, & completely executed, is valid. Even though such a contract might be void at law, it will only be set aside in equity for fraud.—HASSARD v. SMITH (1872), 5 I. R. Eq. 429.—IR.

PART II. SECT. 1.

*c. General rule.]—*All acts done during lunacy to bind the lunatic's estate shall be avoided.—ELY'S (LORD) CASE (1764), 1 Ridg. Parl. Rep. 515, 519.—IR.

44 i. Acts for benefit of lunatic.]—MCLAUGHLIN v. CITY BANK OF SYDNEY (1912), 14 C. L. R. 684.—AUS.

PART II. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 1.—A.

47 i. General rule — Not set aside.]—

A contract entered into by a person who does not know or suspect the other contracting party to be a lunatic cannot be avoided on the ground merely of the inadequacy of the consideration. To set aside such a contract there must have been some fraud, imposition or over-reaching on the part of the person seeking to uphold the contract or some evidence to show that the contract was not fairly made.—TREMILIS v. BENTON (1892), 18 V. L. R. 607.

It is impossible to give pltf. the relief he prays, or any relief, except upon the ground, that he was a lunatic at the time the contract took place. The establishment of that fact is indispensably necessary (GRANT, M.R.).—NIELL v. MORLEY (1804), 9 Ves. 478; 32 E. R. 687.

Annotations:—Apld. Price v. Berrington (1851), 3 Mac. & G. 486. Consd. Campbell v. Hooper (1855), 3 Sm. & G. 153. Distd. Elliot v. Ince (1857), 7 De G. M. & G. 475. Refd. Molton v. Camroux (1848), 2 Exch. 487; Jacobs v. Richards, Jacobs v. Porter (1854), 18 Beav. 300; Wiltshire v. Marshall (1866), 14 W. R. 602; York Glass Co. v. Jubb (1925), 134 L. T. 36.

50. ———.]—Unsoundness of mind will not vacate a contract, if it be unknown to the other contracting party, & no advantage be taken of the lunatic especially where the contract is executed in whole or in part, so that the parties cannot be restored to their original position.

Therefore, where a lunatic purchased certain annuities for his life, of a society which at the time had no knowledge of his unsoundness of mind, the transaction being in the ordinary course of human affairs, & fair & bonâ fide on the part of the Society:—Held: after the death of the lunatic his personal representatives could not recover back the premiums paid for the annuities.

This special verdict hardly shows any such state of mind [lunacy]; but, even if it did, the modern cases show, that when that state of mind was unknown to the other contracting party, & no advantage was taken of the lunatic the defence cannot prevail, especially where the contract is not merely executing, but executed in the whole or in part, & the parties cannot be restored altogether to their original position (PATTERSON, J.).—MOLTON v. CAMROUX (1849), 4 Exch. 17; 18 L. J. Ex. 356; 13 L. T. O. S. 305; 154 E. R. 1107, Ex. Ch.

51. Deed securing money advanced.—In a suit in which a person found lunatic sought to set aside a deed executed by her as a security for moneys advanced at a time subsequent to that from which she was found lunatic, & in which deft. by his answer denied notice of the lunacy, the deed was not set aside, although at the hearing deft. by his counsel admitted that pltf. was at the time of executing the deed of unsound mind; enquiries were directed as to the fact of the advance & the circumstances attending it, & as to the application of the money; & upon further directions the deed was ordered to stand as security for the money reported to have been actually advanced, with interest & costs.—KIRK-WALL v. FLIGHT (1842), 3 W. R. 529.

Annotation:—Apld. Campbell v. Hooper (1855), 3 Sm. & G. 153.

52. Agreement to purchase land—Payment of deposit.—Pltf. entered into a written contract for the purchase of certain land at a specified price from certain persons, vendors thereof on behalf of deft., on the terms & conditions that pltf. should forthwith pay a sum of £415 as a deposit on the purchase; that the purchase should be completed by Mar. 25, 1852; that within four weeks after the contract the vendors should deliver to pltf. an abstract of title to the property & deduce a good title thereto; that within two months after the delivery of such abstract, pltf. should deliver to the vendors a statement of any objections to the title, & if no objections were so delivered, the title should be considered as accepted; that on payment of the residue of the purchase-money on the said Mar. 25 the vendors would convey the premises to pltf.; & that if pltf. should neglect or fail to comply with these conditions his deposit money should be forfeited to the vendors. Pltf. paid the deposit at the time of entering into the contract, & an abstract of title was afterwards duly delivered to him, to which no objection was made. At the time he entered into the contract he was a lunatic, & incapable of understanding its nature; but this deft. did not know, & the contract on his part was a bonâ fide one:—Held: as the contract was entered into by deft., & the money received, fairly & in good faith, & without knowledge of the lunacy, & so far as concerned the deposit, the transaction was completely executed, pltf. was not entitled to the return of the money so deposited.—BEAVAN v. M'DONNELL (1854), 9 Exch. 309; 2 C. L. R. 474; 22 L. T. O. S. 243; 156 E. R. 131; subsequent proceedings, 10 Exch. 184.

53. Supplying goods to agent.—Pltf. was a tradesman, & deft. had given his wife authority to deal with pltf., & had held her out as his agent & as entitled to pledge his credit. Afterwards deft. became insane, & whilst his malady lasted, his wife ordered goods from pltf. who accordingly supplied them. At the time of supplying the goods pltf. was unaware that deft. had become insane. Deft. afterwards recovered his reason, & then refused to pay for the goods supplied to his wife by pltf.:—Held: deft. was liable for the price of the goods.—DREW v. NUNN (1879) 4 Q. B. ### B. Knowledge of Lunacy.

54. Whether a sufficient defence.—Where a tradesman supplied a person with goods suited to his station, & afterwards, by an inquisition taken under a commission of lunacy, that person was found to have been lunatic before & at the time when the goods were ordered & supplied:—Held: this was not a sufficient defence to an action for the price of the goods, the tradesman at the time when he received the orders & supplied the articles, not having any reason to suppose that deft. was a lunatic.

A lunatic is capable of contracting for necessities.—BAXTER v. PORTSMOUTH (EARL) (1826),

PART II. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 1.—B.

54 i. Whether a sufficient defence.—Pltfs. made certain necessary repairs upon deft.'s vessel. At the time the agreement for the repairs was made, one of pltfs. knew that deft. was subject to insane delusions, believing that people were conspiring against him to do him some injury. He, however, superintended the repairs, & talked intelligently to the workmen employed about the vessel; but some months afterwards he became violent, & was confined in asylum for the insane:—Held: pltfs. were entitled to recover for the work done.—ROBERTSON v. KELLY (1882), 2 O. R. 163.—CAN.

d. Sufficiency of knowledge.—A vendor was insane, but not on all subjects; & apart from his delusions,

56. —.]—In an action for work done by pltf., as an attorney, for deft., who pleaded lunacy:—Held: this was no defence unless pltf. knew it; & it appearing that deft. had been duly placed in an asylum while he suffered under delirium tremens, & was mad from time to time when under the influence of drink, but that pltf. did not do business with him at those times; it was for the jury to say whether, when he took his instructions, deft. was insane to his knowledge.—MOSS v. TRIBE (1862), 3 F. & F. 297, N. P.

57. —.]—Where deft. in an action of contract, sets up the defence that he was insane when the contract was made, in order to succeed in his defence he must show that at the time of the contract his insanity was known to pltf.—IMPERIAL LOAN CO. v. STONE, [1892] 1 Q. B. 599; 61 L. J. Q. B. 449; 66 L. T. 556; 56 J. P. 436; 8 T. L. R. 408, C. A.

58. —.]—Deft. entered into a contract by correspondence, after inspection of the property, to purchase pltf. co.'s glassworks & business as a going concern for £54,600, a lower price than that originally asked by the vendors. At that date he was suffering from general paralysis of the insane, & was shortly afterwards removed to a lunatic asylum. The purchase was not completed, & some months later the receiver of deft.'s estate, appointed under the Lunacy Acts, repudiated the contract. The co. then brought an action for damages for breach of contract. The judge before whom the action was tried, gave judgment for pltf. & ordered an inquiry into the damages suffered by them, the result of which was that he awarded the sum of £21,000. Deft. appealed from the judgment & the award of damages:—Held: as deft. had failed to prove that pltf. co., or their representatives knew, or had any reason to suppose that he was insane at the date of entering into the contract, there was a valid & binding contract at common law, there was no equitable ground such as that of unfairness for relieving deft. & his estate of liability under the contract, as the price of the works was the result of bargaining & was fair & reasonable, & having regard to the rapid depreciation of the property between the dates of the contract & its repudiation by the receiver, the damages were not excessive.—YORK GLASS CO., LTD. v. JUBB (1925), 134 L. T. 36; 42 T. L. R. 1, C. A.

59. — Lunatic imposed upon.]—No person can in defending an action, be allowed to stultify himself; & therefore deft. cannot, in an action for work & labour, set up his own insanity as a defence, unless he has been imposed upon by pltf. in consequence of his mental imbecility.

D. Contracts during Lucid Interval.

69. Deed executed before inquisition—Inquisition relating back.]—Upon a bill for specific performance of a contract, over-reached by a commission of lunacy, pltf. not having traversed the inquisition, an issue was directed, whether deft. was a lunatic at the execution: if so, whether he had lucid intervals; & whether the contract was executed during a lucid interval; the difficulties in executing the contract, which was for the sale of an estate vested in the lunatic, viz. that the

a stranger might not perceive his insanity. In the negotiation for a sale of land, he said to the purchaser that he was bewitched, which, it was shown, was one of his delusions:—Held: this was not sufficient to affect the vendee with notice of the vendor's condition.—MCDONALD v. MCDONALD (1869), 16 Gr. 37.—CAN.

price was to be fixed by persons to be nominated, not appearing strong enough to preclude the previous inquiry, with a view to performance: pltf. being willing to take the title.

The law upon this subject is, that all acts done during a lucid interval are to be considered done by a person perfectly capable of contracting, managing, & disposing of, his affairs, at that period. This has more frequently occurred upon wills. A multitude of questions has been raised upon the execution of a will during a lucid interval; & that being proved, the will has been held valid & effectual to all intents & purposes for the conveyance of real & personal estate; as if testator had never been deranged. It must be the same as to contract, or any disposition of property. If he had made an absolute conveyance, it would have been good, if made in a lucid interval (GRANT, M.R.).—HALL v. WARREN (1804), 9 Ves. 605; 32 E. R. 738.

He read them over before he executed them, & suggested several alterations, & acquiesced in them for several months after his discharge from the asylum. A bill, filed by him afterwards for the purpose of setting these deeds aside, was, under the circumstances, dismissed.

The only question for my decision in this case is, were the deeds executed under such circumstances as to be binding upon pltf.; & for the reasons that I have stated I think that they are binding upon pltf. I am satisfied that no coercion was used & also that he perfectly understood the nature & objects of the deeds (LORD LYNDHURST, C.).—SELBY v. JACKSON (1844), 6 Beav. 192; 13 L. Degree of weakness of mind.]—Deeds set aside, the execution of which had been obtained by imposition from an imbecile old man. A degree of weakness of mind, far below what would be necessary to justify a commission of lunacy, if it has been taken advantage of to procure the execution of a deed, will be sufficient ground for setting that deed aside.—BLACHFORD v. CHRISTIAN (1829), 1 Knapp, 73; 12 E. R. 248, P. C.

82. ———.]—On a question whether a deed was void in law, on the ground of unsoundness of mind in the person by whom it was executed, the judge directed the jury that the question for them to try was, whether B. was a person of sound mind or not; & that, to constitute such unsoundness of mind as should avoid a deed at law, the person executing must be incapable of understanding & acting in the ordinary affairs of life. Exception to this—for that the judge ought to have directed the jury that the unsoundness must amount to idiocy, in the strict legal definition of the term. But the judge's direction held by the cts. below to be good, & the judgment affirmed by the Lords.

The strict legal definition of an idiot, in an old book which I have brought down with me, is, that if a man can repeat the letters of the alphabet, or read what is set before him, he cannot be taken to be an idiot. But you would say that this was contrary to common sense; for as to repeating the letters of the alphabet, or reading what is set before him, a child of three years old may do that. Then the question is whether the party was of sound mind or not, & that is the question here. To be sure the judge goes on to say that, as one test of capacity or incapacity, the jury was at liberty to consider whether the party was capable of understanding what he did by executing the deed in question, when its general import was explained to him; & surely that is one good test, & there is nothing irregular in that. But the question is whether, taking the whole direction together, it is right, & I think it is (LORD TENTERDEN).—BALL v. MANNIN (1829), 3 Bli. N. S. 1; 1 Dow. & Cl. 380; 4 E. R. 1241, H. L.

102. ——Under Criminal Lunatics Act, 1884 (c. 64), s. 10 (3), which incorporates by reference the language of Lunatic Asylums Act, 1853 (c. 97), s. 104, the cost of the maintenance of a criminal lunatic can be recovered by the Crown against property to which the lunatic has become entitled, as being due under an implied obligation to pay for that maintenance as a necessary; & this is a statutory liability for the whole amount expended in respect of which there is no limitation against the Crown.

The obligation is not properly a contractual obligation; it is an obligation implied by law from the fact that necessities have been supplied to a person who is unable to contract, but it is none the less an obligation & it has exactly the same status as a debt (FLETCHER MOULTON, L.J.).—Re J., [1909] 1 Ch. 574; 78 L. J. Ch. 348; 100 L. T. 281; 21 Cox, C. C. 766, C. A.

103. ——Circumstances justifying implication.]—Where a lunatic has property to which he is entitled for life under a settlement as well as property to which he is absolutely entitled, the ct. will apply the life interest in the first place towards his maintenance; unless the trustees of the settled property have an absolute discretion whether to employ the whole or any part of the income for the lunatic's benefit. Therefore where property was held upon trust to pay the income in such way, at such time, & in such manner as the trustees should think fit towards the maintenance of a lunatic during her life, with power to invest any surplus not required for the purpose as capital, it was held that the trustees had no such discretion as would oust the jurisdiction of the ct. to apply the whole of the income in the lunatic's maintenance in exoneration of her absolute property. The brother of a lunatic lady not so found by inquisition advanced money for the maintenance of his sister for several years under circumstances which left it doubtful whether he intended it for a gift or expected to be repaid. He died, & his sister was then found to be lunatic by inquisition. His exors. having brought in a claim against the lunatic's estate for repayment of the advances, the ct. made an allowance to testator's estate for past maintenance, but limited it to advances made within six years before testator's death. Qu.: whether a person who supplies a lunatic with necessities, knowing him to be a lunatic, can maintain an action against him on the ground of an implied contract.—Re WEAVER (1882), 21 Ch. 104. ——Whenever necessities are supplied to a person who by reason of disability cannot himself contract, the law implies an obligation on the part of such person to pay for such necessities out of his own property. Accordingly, an obligation may be implied on the part of a lunatic, whether so found or not, to repay a person who has supplied necessities for him, when the necessities supplied are suitable to the position in life of the lunatic. But the provision of money or necessities must be made under circumstances which would justify the ct. in implying the obligation, i.e., with the intention on the part of the person making the provision to be repaid for so doing, & to constitute a debt against the lunatic's estate. A lady of unsound mind who was never found a lunatic, & whose income was under £96 a year, was confined from 1855 down to her death in 1881 in a private lunatic asylum at a cost of £140 a year. Her brother received the income of her property, & applied it in part payment of the £140, paying the deficiency out of his own pocket until his death in 1875. After his death his son, who was his exor., continued to receive & apply the lady's income in the same manner, & the deficiency was made good partly by him & partly by his brother & sisters. No claim was ever made by any of these persons against the lady's estate during her life, nor did any of them appear to have kept any account against her. After her death:—Held: the deficiency was provided under circumstances from which no implied obligation could arise.

Whether the sums so expended were for necessities or not, must be determined according to the circumstances in each particular case.—Re RHODES, RHODES v. RHODES (1890), 44 Ch. D. 94; 59 L. J. Ch. 298; 62 L. T. 342; 38 W. R. 385, C. A.

His son arranged with the bank to continue the lunatic's banking account & to draw upon it on behalf of the lunatic for the maintenance of the lunatic's household & for the necessary outgoings of his estate. At the death of the lunatic this banking account was overdrawn. In a creditors' action to administer the real & personal estate of the lunatic the bank claimed to prove as creditors for the amount of the overdraft, which included usual bank charges for interest & commission:—Held: (1) though the bank were not creditors of the lunatic, they were entitled under the doctrine of subrogation to stand in the shoes of creditors paid by the son by means of the banking account for necessities supplied for the maintenance of the lunatic's household, & for the necessary outgoings of his estate; (2) the bank were not entitled to prove for interest & commission on the overdraft.

Pltf. could not claim, as a debtor, what he had expended, beyond the rents, in the maintenance of the lunatic, as it was an act of bounty on his part, & not a debt contracted by the lunatic, who was in a situation which incapacitated him from contracting a debt (SHADWELL, V.-C.).—*CARTER v. A lunatic tenant in tail of copyholds having executed powers of attorney authorising her attorney first to procure her admission as tenant in tail in the several manors of the copyholds in question; & secondly, to surrender them after admission & take a re-admission in fee:—Held: the transaction was invalid, & the estate tail was not barred; though at the instance of a creditor disputing the lunacy, an issue was directed as to whether the lunatic was, at the time of her executing the powers of attorney, of sound mind.

If the incapacity be such, arising from either or both causes, that the party is incapable of understanding & incapable, from mental imbecility, to take care of his or her own person & property, such an individual cannot dispose of her person & property, by the matrimonial contract, any more than by another contract (SIR JOHN NICHOLL).—BROWNING v. REANE (1812), 2 Phillim. 69; 161 E. 148. — Deaf & dumb person.]—A woman deaf & dumb from her birth contracted matrimony by licence, a third party making the responses for her, & a child was born. Thirty years afterwards, & after her death, the validity of the marriage was disputed, on the ground of mental incapacity to understand & enter into the contract; but the ct., being satisfied of her competency to understand, & of her fully understanding what she did, refused to direct an issue to try the validity of the marriage.—HARROD v. HARROD (1854), 1 K. & J. 4; 23 L. 149. — Evidence of diseased mind.]—Where a guardian ad litem had been duly assigned by the registrar to a lunatic, petitioner in a suit for nullity of marriage, the ct. declined during the hearing of the petition to adjourn the case on the application of resp., on the suggestion of petitioner's recovery, & of her desire for the discontinuance of the suit, or to appoint two medical men to examine her, & proceeded to determine the only issue raised by the pleadings, namely, whether petitioner was of sound mind at the time of the celebration of her marriage. In deciding whether a person has sufficient mental capacity to contract a marriage, the question for the ct. is, whether the mind of the contracting party was diseased or not at the time of the contract, & if the evidence establishes that the mind was at the time of entering into the contract diseased, the ct. will not enter into the consideration of the extent of the derangement. The ct. being satisfied by the evidence that petitioner was not of sound mind at the time of the celebration of her marriage with resp., postponed pronouncing its decree, in order to give resp. an opportunity, if so advised, of establishing the fact of petitioner's recovery, & intimated that if satisfied of her recovery, it would not pronounce a decree of nullity except at her instance.—HANCOCK v. PEATY (1867), L. 150. — Party incapable of understanding nature of contract.]—The burden of showing that resp. was insane at the time of the marriage lies upon the party asserting it, & the ct. has to determine whether resp. was capable of understanding the nature of the contract, & the duties & responsibilities which it creates, & was free from the influence of morbid delusions upon the subject.—*DURHAM v. 151. — Upon a petition for nullity of marriage on the ground of insanity, the question which the ct. has to determine is not whether resp. was aware that he was going through the ceremony of marriage, but whether he was capable of understanding the nature of the contract he was entering into, free from the influence of morbid delusions on the subject. The ct. has to look at the nature of the alleged unsoundness of mind to see whether it is of a character which might come on suddenly, or whether it is a matter of progressive growth & development, & to ascertain whether resp.'s insanity can be traced back to an early period to such an extent as will justify the ct. in coming to a conclusion that it existed before as well as after the marriage contract was entered into. In pronouncing a decree of nullity the ct. ordered that the child of the union should be given to petitioner.

The costs of the official solr., as the guardian ad litem of resp., a person of unsound mind not so found by inquisition, were ordered to be paid by petitioner, who was given leave to add the same to her own costs of suit as against resp.—*JACKSON v. 152. — Delusions.]—On a wife's petition for nullity of marriage on the ground that before & at the time of the ceremony resp. was of unsound mind & incapable of contracting marriage, the ct. found that resp. held the deluded belief that he was an army officer holding a responsible & trusted command, & that he suffered from delusions as to his own persona, as to his position in the world, & as to his capacity to perform any of the obligations which he undertook—delusions which rendered his life an unreal thing—& on that finding ct.:—*Held: resp. was mentally incapable of entering into the contract of marriage, & a decree nisi of nullity was pronounced.—FORSTER (OTHERWISE STREET) v. No costs to the party taking out a commission of lunacy, which is traversed with success;

however meritorious the case: the property never coming to the possession of the Crown, there is no fund.

It does not appear to me what right the jury had to find that at the marriage she was a lunatic. The inquisition does not state that she was a lunatic at the time of the marriage. There is no such allegation upon it. The issue is ill-joined: for the plea to the inquisition takes up a fact not stated by the inquisition itself (LORD LOUGHBOROUGH, C.).—*Ex p. #### SECT. 4.—COMPROMISE OF PROCEEDINGS.

164. Proceedings before commission.]—Pltf. being confined in a lunatic asylum, & an inquisition under a commission of lunacy being held upon her, & attended by her counsel, before any verdict was given an agreement was signed by her counsel & counsel attending for the promoters of the commission, that pltf. should be released from confinement, that certain arrangements should be made as to property which she claimed, that the title deeds relating thereto, which had been taken from her when she was confined, & now were in the hands of the promoters, should be given up & placed in the hands of H., & that the commission should be superseded. Accordingly, pltf. was released; & the deeds handed over to H. Pltf. then brought detinue against H. for the deeds. An interpleader rule was obtained, on the claim of the promoters, by which the proceedings were stayed, & a feigned issue brought, by pltf. against the promoters, to try whether pltf. was entitled to the deeds notwithstanding the arrangement:—Held: (1) on the trial of such issue, it was not necessary that pltf. should prove her title to the deeds, the question being only whether the agreement prevented her from insisting on her title; (2) it was rightly left to the jury, on evidence of the state of pltf.'s mind & health at the time of the agreement being made, to say whether the consent of her counsel was obtained by constraint & without her free will; & the jury having so found, pltf. was entitled to the verdict: & the legality of the restraint, assuming it to have been legal, & the consent of counsel, furnished no conclusive proof that the agreement was not void by duress.—CUMMING v. 172. Validity of deed—Inquisition continuing in force—Execution during lucid interval.]—(1) When a person has been found lunatic by inquisition, so long as the inquisition has not been superseded, but continues in force, he cannot, even during a lucid interval, execute a valid deed dealing with or disposing of his property. The ct. directing will not recognise such a deed even by directing proceedings to be taken to try the question of its validity or to perpetuate testimony as to the state of the lunatic's mind when it was executed, but will treat the deed as entirely null & void.

(2) The difference between the execution of a deed & the execution of a will by a lunatic so found explained.

(3) As regards the relation of the Crown to lunatics, it may be taken generally that the Crown is the custodian of the property of a lunatic so found, & it may, I think, be said in general terms that the property passes out of the control of the lunatic & comes under that of the Crown only in order that the lunatic may have that protection from the Crown to which he is entitled. Therefore, when we have to consider the question whether this deed is void, we cannot dispose of it by saying that that which was the property of the lunatic has ceased to be her property & has become the property of the Crown. But during the whole period of history in which we have legal reports, the Crown has possessed the prerogative (although it was not always defined as it has been later by statute) of dealing with & controlling the property of a lunatic. It is quite sufficient, as it seems to me, to dispose of the present case to say that the Crown has that control (as distinguished from property) of the real & personal estate of a lunatic, because the moment one sees that the committee, as representing the Crown, has the rights & powers mentioned in Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), s. 120, it is perfectly plain that they cannot be effectively exercised by the Crown in the interest & for the benefit of the lunatic, if during the same period some one else is to have the control of the property. In that event there would be a conflict of control which would be entirely inconsistent with the exercise by the committee of those rights of the Crown which have been delegated to him (VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J.).

(4) It is said that if a lunatic is of sufficient mental capacity to do so he can execute a will, & that after his death the will can be proved, if the ct. to which the application for probate is made is of opinion that testator at the time when he executed the will was of testamentary capacity & understood what he was doing. Of that there can be no doubt (VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J.).—Re WALKER, [1905] 1 Ch. 160; 74 L. J. Ch. 86; 91 L. T. 713, C. A.

173. — Appointment of receiver.]—By his will dated Feb. 14, 1912, testator, who died in 1913, gave his residuary real & personal estate to trustees upon trust to raise a fund of £6,000 & to hold the same upon trust to pay the income to his son during his life or “until he . . . shall assign or charge or affect to assign or charge the said income or some part thereof or until any other event shall happen whereby if the income belonged absolutely to him he would be . . . deprived of the personal enjoyment thereof.” On Dec. 12, 1916, an order was made in lunacy appointing a receiver of the son's estate under Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), s. 116 (1) (d), the whole of his income being allowed for his maintenance. On May 15, 1919, the son executed an equitable charge on his income under testator's will:—Held: the order in lunacy appointing a receiver did not operate as a forfeiture because the receiver was the statutory agent of the son to receive the income of the trust fund; &, as the document of May 15, 1919, was executed after the appointment of the receiver in lunacy, it was null & void, & could not therefore work a forfeiture.—*Re MARSHALL, MARSHALL v. 186. General rule—Insanity no defence.—It is true that a judgment of dissolution may operate as a punishment, but so also may any verdict or judgment in a civil action, whether for a wrong as a libel, or an assault, or to recover landed estate, as in ejectment, or to recover a debt or damages in an action of assumpsit or trover. Yet, in all or any of these cases, insanity is no defence & no bar to the suit, & no ground for a stay of proceedings. It is enough that deft. has done a wrong, or given a right of action to pltf. for any of the causes above enumerated; in any such case, although after the wrong done, he may become insane, & so incapable of making his defence or instructing an attorney or counsel, a committee or guardian is appointed who conducts the defence, & pltf. enforces his legal right, & proceeds with the suit to verdict & judgment. Indeed, this doctrine was carried to its extreme length by LORD ELDON, who awarded a commission of bkpcy., partaking both of a civil & criminal character, against an insolvent trader, who, after committing an act of bkpcy., had become insane (KELLY, C.B.).—MORDAUNT v. 188. General rule.—The Marquis of W., as was supposed, made his will in writing, & thereby did devise divers manors, lands, & tenements of great value to his reputed sons, & made them exors. Because it appeared by divers witnesses, & by many notorious circumstances, that the Marquis being sick, et multa proventus senectute, was not of sane & perfect memory, such as the law requires at the time of the making of the supposed will; for by law it is not sufficient that testator be of memory when he makes his will, to answer familiar & usual questions, but he ought to have a disposing memory, so that he is able to make a disposition of his lands with understanding & reason; & that is such a memory which the law calls sane & perfect memory. Upon this matter a suggestion was framed in the name of the now Marquis as son & heir, to have a prohibition, supposing that he was not of sane memory at the time of the making of his will, which matters the now Marquis had pleaded in the Spiritual Ct., in stay of the probate of the will. A prohibition was granted generally by the rule of the whole ct.—WINCHESTER'S (MARQUESS) CASE (1598), 8 Co. Rep. 23 a; 77 E. R. 287.

The proof of a will is attended with more solemnity than that of a deed; the former being supposed to be made when testator is in extremis, & therefore in equity it is necessary to prove the sanity, which is all presumed in the case of the latter (JEKYLL, M.R.).—HARRIS v. BENNET* (1787), 1 Cox, Eq. Cas. 353; 29 E. R. 1200.

200. Sound & disposing mind—As to extent of property & nature of claims.]—The single inquiry . . . is whether he [testator] was of sound & disposing mind & memory, at the time when he made his will; however deranged he might be before, if he had recovered his reason at that time, he was competent to make his will. . . . A mind & memory competent to dispose of his property may stand thus: having that degree of recollection about him that would enable him to look about the property he had to dispose of, & the persons to whom he wished to dispose of it. If he had a power of summoning up his mind so as to know what his property was, & who those persons were that then were the objects of his bounty, then he was competent to make his will.

If whenever his brother's name occurred, instantly a fit of delirium had seized him . . . he was not competent to make his will; but if his mind remained entire, if he had new raised up prejudices against his brother, though upon improper grounds, yet if they were such prejudices as might reside in a sound mind; it is hard that those prejudices should lead to conclusions unfavourable to his brother; but hard as the case may be, it is better that a thousand hard cases should take place, than that we should remove the landmarks by which man's property is to be decided. . . . It is the history of every week in the year, & the history of almost every family at one time or other, that harsh dispositions have been made, that unreasonable prejudices have taken place, that one child standing equally near in blood has been preferred to another; & if once we get into digressions of that kind, then we get upon a sea without a rudder, where will you stop, what partiality will be enough to set aside a will, & what partiality will you give way to, & say the will is good? . . . You are to consider whether his mind was entire to make the disposition, not whether the disposition was whimsical, cruel; what none of you retiring to your own bosoms & collecting your own feelings, would have made; but to see whether it was the disposition of this man's mind, exercising the faculties of his mind at a time when in possession of those faculties. If you think, that whenever that topic occurred to him, it totally deranged his mind, & prevented him from judging of who the objects of his bounty should be, according to his own will, then the will cannot stand, & then you will find for deft.; but if you think he was of competent mind to make his will, to exercise his judgment, however that might be disturbed by passions which ought not to be encouraged, then the will ought to stand (LORD KENYON).—*GREENWOOD v. 201. ———.]—HARWOOD v. BAKER, No. 339, post.

202. ———.]—Supposing a will made by a person of testamentary capacity, it is not sufficient to avoid it that it is not such a will as a sensible person would make, or that it is harsh, capricious or unjust; nor, on the other hand, is it enough to avoid it on the ground of undue influence, that it was made under the influence of acts of attention & kindness; but the influence or importunity must be such as to deprive testator of the free exercise of his will. The testamentary capacity, however, involves more than the mere fact of recognising familiar persons or objects, & means a sound disposing mind, that is to say, a power of understanding the nature of the property, & the family, & the effect of the will.

It is not sufficient in order to make a will that a man should be able to maintain an ordinary conversation & to answer familiar & easy questions. He must have more mind than suffices for that. . . . He must be able to dispose of his property with understanding & reason. . . . He must be able to understand his position; he must be able to appreciate his property; to form a judgment with respect to the parties whom he chose to benefit by it after his death, & if he has capacity for that it suffices (CRESSWELL, J.).—SEFTON (EARL) v. HOPWOOD (1855), 1 F. & F. 578.

203. ———.]—On an issue devisavit vel non, it appearing that at the time of the will testator was in extreme old age, & in the last stage of bodily infirmity, bedridden, utterly helpless, & dependent on the care of pltf. (sole devisee of the realty), & a nurse (the only legatee), & a physician, an attesting witness, & an intimate friend of the devisee, her own attorney (another witness), having prepared the will, upon instructions elicited by himself from testator by interrogatories, they having a few days before represented him as "quite incapable of managing his own affairs, or taking care of his person"; & it being admitted that two or three days before he was not competent to make the will, yet the jury, being told that if he understood the state of his property, & his family, & the effect of the will, & if he had free volition, & the will was really in accordance with his intentions, & there being evidence that it was, a verdict in favour of the will was not disturbed.

To constitute a good testamentary disposition, testator must retain a degree of understanding to comprehend what he is doing, to have a volition, or power of choice; so that what he does really be his own doing, & not the doing of anybody else. The faculties, in those two great divisions, of the understanding & the will, must still exist. They have declined from their former comprehensiveness & vigour; they may be, & often are on such occasions, weak, & actually on the point of being extinguished; still, though they may be, as it were, flickering in the socket, yet, if they suffice to show the genuine & last behests of a rational creature, & a free agent, that is a good will in point of law. . . . It is not enough that a testator is able to answer familiar & usual questions. That has always been laid down. He must be able to exercise a competent understanding as to the general nature of the property. As to the state of his family, & as to the general condition & claims of the objects of his bounty; as to the nature of the instrument which he executes, & as to the general nature & general objects of the provisions which it contains; if he can do that, though he may be very feeble & debilitated in understanding, & be at the point of death, it is enough (BYLES, J.).—SWINFEN v. SWINFEN (1858), 1 F. & F. 584; subsequent proceedings (1859), 27 Beav. 148.

Annotation:—Mentd. Swinfen v. Bacon (1860), 6 Jur. N. S. 1257.

204. ———.]—(1) Partial unsoundness, not affecting the general faculties, & not operating on the mind of a testator in regard to testamentary disposition, is not sufficient to render a person incapable of disposing of his property by will.

(2) It is essential . . . that a testator shall understand the nature of the act & its effects; shall understand the extent of the property of which he is disposing; shall be able to comprehend & appreciate the claims to which he ought to give effect; & with a view to the latter object, that no disorder of the mind shall poison his affections, pervert his sense of right, or prevent the exercise of his natural faculties (COCKBURN, C.J.).

(3) At a trial where the question was as to the testamentary capacity of G. it was proved that at one period of his lifetime he had been confined in a lunatic asylum, & that at the time of making his will he was subject to certain fixed delusions. These delusions, however, could not be connected with any of the dispositions in the will. The judge left it to the jury to say whether, at the time of making his will, testator was capable of having such a knowledge & appreciation of facts, & was so far master of his intentions & free from delusions, as to be able to have a will of his own in the disposition of his property & to act upon it:—Held: there was no misdirection.

The pathology of mental disease & the experience of insanity in its various forms teach us that while, on the one hand, all the faculties, moral & intellectual, may be involved in one common ruin, as in the case of the raving maniac, in other instances one or more only of these faculties or functions may be discovered, while the rest are left unimpaired & undisturbed: that while the mind may be overpowered by delusions which utterly demoralise it & unfit it for the perception of the true nature of surrounding things, or for the discharge of the common obligations of life, there often are, on the other hand, delusions, which, though the offspring of mental disease & so far constituting insanity, yet leave the individual in all other respects rational, & capable of transacting the ordinary affairs & fulfilling the duties & obligations incidental to the various relations of life (COCKBURN, C.J.).—BANKS v. GOODFELLOW (1870), L. R. 5 Q. B. 549; 39 L. J. Q. B. 237; 22 L. T. 813; subsequent proceedings (1871), L. R. 11 Eq. 472.

205. ——— Unimpaired capacity.]—(1) A sound & disposing mind means a mind of natural capacity, not unduly impaired by old age or enfeebled by illness or tainted by morbid influence. Although delusive ideas & erroneous beliefs may argue mental alienation, they do so not because they are delusive & erroneous, it is in some cases the degree of their divergence from ordinary sense & reason, & in others the mode in which they exhibit themselves, & the forces which they successfully resist for their expulsion, that induce the conclusion of disease. In judging of the sanity of an individual he should be compared in his acts & thoughts with those whom in general temperament & character he resembles. It is not right to compare with an enthusiast, one who in daily life has not shown himself to be of that character or temper, nor in scrutinising his opinions to make such allowances as are found to be necessary in reducing the conception of enthusiasts to the ordinary standard of mankind.

(2) If disease be once shown to exist in the mind of testator, it matters not that the disease be discoverable only on a certain subject, or that on all other subjects the action of the mind is apparently sound, & the conduct even prudent, testator must be pronounced incapable. Further, the same result follows whether or not the particular subjects upon which disease is manifested have any connection with the testamentary disposition before the ct.

(3) The question of insanity is a mixed one, partly within the range of common observation, & partly within the range of special medical experience, & it is the office of the ct. in searching for a conclusion to inform itself of the general results of medical observation, & to make a comparison between the sayings & doings of testator at the time when the disease is alleged to exist.—SMITH v. TEBBITT (1867), L. R. 1 P. & D. 398; 36 L. J. P. & M. 97; 16 L. T. 841; 16 W. R. 18.

206. Knowledge & approval of contents of will.]

—(1) It is essential to the validity of a will that at the time of its execution testator should know & approve of its contents.

(2) However much men have been in the habit of yielding to the pressure & opinions of others in disposing of their property, I suppose no case ever yet to have occurred in which a man in possession of his full faculties handed over the making of his will to another, & was content to execute it without so much as the curiosity even to know what it contained. But still the question remains whether a will so made, if duly executed, would be good in law; & I am constrained to come to the conclusion that it would not. . . . There are also certain consequences which must follow from holding such a will good; & the most important of these is, that it would no longer be necessary to show that a testator was, in the old language of the law, of "sound mind, memory, & understanding." These words have been time out of mind held to mean sound disposing mind, & to import sufficient capacity to deal with & appreciate the various dispositions of property to which testator was about to affix his signature. But if the mental act of disposing can be delegated to another, & a blind confidence in his dispositions all that is required in a testator, the "sound disposing mind" is a needless requisition (SIR J. P. WILDE).—HASTILOW v. STOBIE (1865), L. R. 1 P. & D. 64; 35 L. J. P. & M. 18; 13 L. T. 473; 11 Jur. N. S. 1039; 14 W. R. 211.

SUB-SECT. 2.—TESTAMENTARY INCAPACITY.

A. In General.

209. Depends on particular circumstances.]—Criteria by which to test & ascertain whether natural or innate eccentricity has exceeded the bounds of legal testamentary capacity.

In all such cases it is absolutely & essentially necessary to look to the peculiar circumstances of each individual case; & to judge from the whole character of the person, whose mental capacity is the subject of inquiry; what was the state & condition of the mind of that individual; not only with respect to the immediate time at which a will is executed, but at the intermediate stages of his life. . . . The same acts which would constitute insanity in one eccentric individual, might not do so in another; for the reason that the minds & habits of the two persons might be differently constituted (SIR H. JENNER FUST).—MUDWAY v. CROFT (1843), 3 Curt. 671; 2 Notes of Cases, 438; 1 L. T. O. S. 479; 7 Jur. 979; 163 E. R. 863.

210. Unreasonable prejudice.]—GREENWOOD v. GREENWOOD, No. 200, ante.

211. Occasional incapacity—Violent nervous attacks.]—(1) Where testator is far advanced in years, & where occasional incapacity from violent nervous attacks is admitted, the mere opinion of witnesses of little weight.

(2) This [old age] raises some doubt of capacity, but only so far as to excite the vigilance of the ct.; for the law allows a person at any age to make a will, provided he retains the disposing faculties of his mind. Age is an uncertain criterion of mental powers (SIR JOHN NICHOLL).

PART II. SECT. 8, SUB-SECT. 2.—A. t. Paranoia.]—A person suffering from the form of insanity known as monomania or paranoia, he wrongly suspecting & holding his own family in aversion, lacks testamentary capacity to make a will leaving the bulk of his estate to religious uses, depriving his wife of any benefit thereunder & making inadequate provision for his infant

a. Physical weakness.]—Held: mere physical weakness, however great, without proof of mental incapacity, is not sufficient to render invalid an acknowledgment of a debt by a testator.—EMES v. EMES (1865), 11 Gr. 325.—CAN.

(3) Another fact . . . is the occasional incapacity of deceased. . . . This circumstance, however, bears upon the case in two opposite directions; it renders in the first place, the capacity at least fluctuating, & imposes on the party setting up these instruments the obligation of proving that at other times deceased was capable, & that these instruments were made during that capacity; but on the other hand, if these attacks produced only a temporary incapacity . . . these occasional attacks account for the opinions of many of the persons who only saw the deceased occasionally (SIR JOHN NICHOLL).—KINLESIDE v. HARRISON (1818), 2 Phillim. 449; 161 E. R. 1196.

B. Deaf and Dumb Persons.

214. Communication by signs & motions—Necessity for affidavit—As to giving of instructions.]—Where a testator, who was deaf & dumb, made his will by communicating his testamentary instructions to an acquaintance by signs & motions, who prepared a will in conformity with such instructions, which was afterwards duly executed by testator, the ct. required an affidavit from the drawer of the will, stating the nature of the signs & motions by which the instructions were communicated to him, & ultimately refused to grant probate on motion.—In the Goods of OWSTON (1862), 2 Sw. & Tr. 461; 31 L. J. P. M. & A. 177; 6 L. T. 368; 26 J. P. 728; 10 W. R. 410; 164 E. R. 1075.

215. —.— As to approval of will.]—Where probate was sought of the will of a testator who was deaf, dumb, & illiterate, the ct. required evidence on affidavit of the signs by which testator had signified that he understood & approved of the provisions of the will, before making the grant.—In the Goods of GEALE (1864), 3 Sw. & Tr. 431; 4 New Rep. 349; 33 L. ### C. Delusions.

Delusions defined, see Part I., Sect. 1, ante.

216. General rule.]—(1) The mere existence of a delusion in the mind of a person making a disposition or contract is not sufficient to avoid it, even though the delusion is connected with the subject-matter of such disposition or contract; it is a question for the jury whether the delusion affected the disposition or contract.

(2) A lessor at the time when he made a lease of a farm laboured under the delusion that it was impregnated with sulphur. On an issue directed as to the capacity of the lessor to make the lease, rational letters by the lessor relating to the lease were put in evidence. The judge did not tell the jury that the letters did not displace the effect of

216 ii. —.—.]—The burden of proving unsoundness of mind on the part of a testator, who made a will rational on the face of it, lies on the person who

the delusion, but directed them that it was a practical question whether the lessor was so insane as to be incompetent to dispose of his property though believed to be full of sulphur. The jury found that the lease was valid. On a motion for a new trial:—Held: there was no misdirection.

(3) I hold it to be now settled law, & that until the contrary shall have been decided by the House of Lords, it must be considered that the mere existence of a delusion is not sufficient to deprive a person of testamentary capacity (HALL, V.-C.).—JENKINS v. MORRIS (1880), 14 Ch. D. 674; 42 L. T. 817, C.A.

217. Pretended delusions—For purpose of deception.—Where testator is not shown to be subject to frenzy, or fatuity, it is necessary, for the purpose of establishing his insanity, to show that, upon some particular subject, he was under delusion as to the facts within his own observation & that he actually believed in the existence of facts which a rational man, from the use of his senses, under the same circumstances, would have known not to exist; & a gross exaggeration of slight circumstances may amount to insane delusion, as falling within the above proposition of delusion as to facts. But a testator is not to be considered insane from entertaining any opinions, however unfounded or absurd: as where he speaks of his kept mistress, who had died before him, as having been a person of “deep religious feeling.” Nor from a pretended belief in non-existing facts, assumed for the purpose of deception: as, where testator had, in Oct. 1832, acknowledged a child by his second wife to be his child, & yet in a codicil to his will, dated in the same year, disowned any daughter born of his second wife; the ct. thinking that testator never really believed that such child was illegitimate, but that he only threw doubts on her legitimacy for sinister purposes. Applt. though unsuccessful, under the circumstances given his costs of the suit in the ct. below, though not the costs of appeal.—DITCHBURN v. FEARN (1842), 6 Jur. 201, P. C.

218. Continuous delusions.—(1) Moral insanity, or the perversion of the moral feelings, not accompanied with insane delusion, which is the legal test of insanity, is insufficient to invalidate a will.

Because a man does not duly appreciate the acts or feelings which generally influence mankind, that, therefore, he is to be considered mad, & unfit to make a disposition of his property, is not the law of this country. I am of opinion that perversion of moral feeling does not constitute unsoundness of mind, so as to render an act performed per se invalid (SIR H. JENNER FUST).

(2) Wherever there is delusion existing at the time of the execution of the act, whatever it may be, the act will be invalid as a civil act, provided the delusion is continued permanently fixed on the mind, whether it has any relation to the particular act to be considered or not (SIR H. JENNER FUST).—FRERE v. PEACOCKE (1846), 1 Rob. Eccl. 442; 163 E. R. 1095; sub nom. FREER v. PEACOCKE, 11 Jur. 247.

Impeaches it on the ground of unsoundness of mind. The existence of insane delusions affords evidence of such unsoundness of mind, but to be insane a delusion must be persistent, & existing only in the imagination of the patient & such as no rational person can conceive that the patient when sane would have believed.—RAPSON v. PUTTERKILL, [1913] App. D. 417.—S. AF.

DAVIDSON (1848), 6 Notes of Cases, 461.

226. — Superstitious terror.—A bill in equity will lie to set aside a will made under the influence of superstitious terrors.

I can easily conceive a case of a man of very strong mind being under the influence of such a superstitious terror or delusion, as that he might think it necessary to his salvation that he should give all his money to his priest or confessor. If that was clearly established, I am by no means prepared to say that it would not be a very sufficient ground; & were I the judge directing the jury upon the subject, I should say that if they found it to be such a degree of delusion as to deprive the man of the exercise of his free judgment in what he was doing, it would be sufficient to destroy the will (LORD ABINGER, C.B.).—MIDDLETON v. 228. — Though considerable business capacity.—(1) A man may be capable of transacting business of a complicated & important kind, involving the exercise of considerable powers of intellect, & yet may be subject to delusions so as to be unfit to make a will.

(2) But if the delusions under which a man labours are such that they could not reasonably be supposed to have affected the dispositions made by his will, the will would be valid.

(3) The burden of proving capacity to make a will rests upon those who propound the will, & a fortiori, when it appears that testator was subject to delusions. It must be shown by those who set up the will that there is no reasonable connection between the delusions & the testamentary dispositions.—SMEE v. SMEE (1879), 5 P. D. 84; 49 L. J. P. 8; 44 J. 229. —As to religious duty.]—In an action for reduction of a will pursuers averred that testator was "subject to insane delusions," & that "he believed that he had a special & imperative duty to further the cause of total abstinence & to oppose the Church of Rome by devoting his pecuniary resources to these objects, in consequence of commands which he conceived he had received from the Deity by direct communications on various occasions." That these insane delusions dominated his mind & overmastered his judgment to such an extent as to render him incapable of making reasonable & proper settlement of his means & estate, or of taking a rational view of the matters to be considered in making a will:—Held: a relevant case for trial was averred.—*HOPE v. 231. —.]—B., a captain in the army, & having an appointment at Chatham, was attacked with illness in the beginning of Aug. 1857, which affected his mind. In the course of a fortnight he became better, & went on a visit to friends at Lewes, with whom he remained till the last week in Sept., & apparently conducted himself quite rationally. About a fortnight before he left Lewes he received, after conference with & the approbation of the incumbent of the parish, the communion for the first time. He returned to Chatham on Sept. 29. On Sept. 30 he wrote a testamentary paper, which was executed by him, & attested by two brother officers on Oct. 1. He had immediately on his return to Chatham shown symptoms of returning or reviving mental disease, which specially took the form of an uncontrollable idea that he must be eternally damned for having received the communion unworthily. A few days after the date of the will he was pronounced insane by a medical board, & died in Sept. 1858, in a lunatic asylum:—Held: if a will, rational on the face of it, is shown to have been executed & attested in the manner prescribed by law, it is presumed, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, to have been made by a person of competent understanding. But if there are circumstances which counterbalance that presumption, the decree of the ct. must be against its validity, unless the evidence on the whole is sufficient to establish affirmatively that testator was of sound mind when he executed it; though the will propounded was sensible on the face of it & contained no trace of any reference to or connection with testator's then subject of delusion, yet, as the production of an unsound mind, it was not entitled to probate.—SYMES v. GREEN (1859), 1 Sw. & Tr. 401; 28 L. J. P. & M. 83; 33 L. T. O. S. 168; 5 Jur. N. S. 742; 164 E. R. 785.

234. —.]—A man, moved by capricious, frivolous, mean, or even bad motives, may disinherit wholly or partially his children, & leave his property to strangers. He may take an unduly harsh view of the character & conduct of his children, but there is a limit beyond which it will cease to be a question of harsh unreasonable judgment, & then the repulsion which a parent exhibits to his child must be held to proceed from some mental defect. If such repulsion, amounting to a delusion as to character, is shown to have existed previous to the execution of his will, it will be for the party setting up that document to establish that it was inoperative when the will was made, & the jury, in determining whether or not the delusion was operative, will have regard to the contents of the will & the circumstances surrounding the execution of it.

In contemplation of law the expression "sound mind" does not mean a perfectly balanced mind. The question of mental soundness is one of degree. In considering it large allowance must be made for the difference of individual character; but in every case the lightest degree of mental soundness is required in order to constitute capacity to make a testamentary disposition.—*BOUGHTON v. 239. Habitual drunkenness—Testator not under influence at time of making will.]—A case of insanity alleged to defeat a will. Testator proved to have been not, properly, a madman; but an habitual drunkard, who, under the excitement of liquor, acted in all respects, very like a madman:—Held: testator had not been under the excitement of liquor, & consequently, not insane, at the time of making his will; & the will itself, consequently, established.—AYREY v. HILL (1824), 2 Add. 206; 162 E. R. 269.

240. —.]—(1) On an issue devisavit vel non, the will being impeached on the ground that testator's mind was impaired by drinking, & was under undue influence on the part of the devisee or his family:—Held: though he was proved to have been addicted to drinking, & to have had delirium tremens a few days before the alleged will, the question was whether he was sane & sensible, & able to understand the nature & contents of the will at the time when it was executed.

(2) Although it was drawn by a son of the devisee, an old friend, & at his house:—Held: if testator had really requested him to do it, & it was his voluntary & spontaneous act, not under constraint, free from force or fraud, from imposition or importunity, there was no undue influence, & the will was valid.—HANDLEY v. STACEY (1858), 1 F. & F. 574.

241. Excessive drinking—When testatrix otherwise capable.]—(1) The will (executed eight years before death) of a woman, who, though guilty of excessive drinking & great extravagancies, managed her own property, received her dividends, did various acts of business, corresponded rationally with her friends, & was not shown to be under any delusion, cannot be set aside on the ground of insanity.

(2) Though such will, in total exclusion of distant next of kin (with whom she had quarrelled), be in the handwriting of, & executed at the office of her attorney (one of the exors. & residuary legatees to a great amount, he & his family having also very large legacies) & the attesting witnesses speak to a bare execution; documents in her own handwriting, showing both capacity & knowledge of contents, though not mentioning the residue, will supply the additional proof required by such circumstance.—*WHEELER & BATSFORD v. The ct. granted probate [of a copy of the will], but doubted whether if he had confirmed the act of destruction when he was in a condition of sanity, it would not have amounted to a revocation.—*BRUNT v. #### F. Foolishness.

247. Mere foolishness not sufficient—Will sounding to folly—General conduct to be considered.—The ct. will not, at once, reject an allegation propounding a will, which sounds to folly, when facts are pleaded, showing that deceased, up to his death, conducted himself, in the ordinary concerns of life, as a sane man.—ARBERY v. ASHE (1828), 1 Hag. Ecc. 214; 162 E. R. 562.

248. —.—.]—A., a native of England, but who had lived long in the East, & was familiar with Eastern habits & superstitions, & professed his belief in the Mahommedan religion, died in England leaving a will, which, after various legacies, gave the residue to the poor of Constantinople, & also towards erecting a cenotaph in that city, inscribed with his name, & bearing a light perpetually burning therein. The Pre-rogative Ct. having, chiefly on the ground of this extraordinary residuary bequest, which sounded to folly, & partly on parol evidence of the wild & extravagant language of testator, pronounced him to be of unsound mind when the will was made:—Held: as the insanity attributed to deceased was not monomania, but a general mental derangement, & as the proper mode of testing the allegation was to review the life, habits, & opinions of testator, on such a review there was nothing absurd or irrational in the bequest, or anything in his conduct at the date of the will indicating derangement; & therefore the will was admitted to probate.—AUSTEN v. 281. General rule—On party propounding will.]—SUTTON v. SADLER, No. 193, ante.

282. — —.]—That testator knew & approved of the contents of a will propounded is part of the burden of proof assumed by the person who propounds it, & consequently, the next of kin who oppose a will may cross-examine the witnesses produced in its support on that matter, as well as upon the capacity of testator, or the execution of the will, without exposing themselves to costs, provided they give the notice required by the rules.

In all cases, whether through the medium of a presumption unrebutted, or of positive evidence to that end, the party who puts forward a document as the will of a testator, must establish the fact that testator was competent to make a will when he executed it. This competency forms part of the proposition that a will was made. For if there is no competency, no testable capacity, there can be no will. I am of opinion that testator's knowledge of the contents of his alleged will stands upon the like footing. That he knew & approved of the contents is a proposition implied in the assertion that a will was made by him (LORD PENZANCE).—CLEARE v. CLEARE (1869), L. R. 1 P. & D. 655; 38 L. J. In many cases it has happened that a will in a testator's custody has been found, after his death, obliterated in such a way as to amount to a revocation if he was of sane mind when he did it, & there has been no evidence whether it was done before or after he became insane. Does the ct., in the absence of proof, presume that it was done before he became insane, when it would amount to a revocation, or when he became insane, when it would not amount to a revocation? The answer is, that the ct. always refuses to presume one way or the other, but holds that the party who alleges that it was done at a time when it would amount to a revocation must prove his allegation, & in the absence of proof the revocation falls to the ground (LORD PENZANCE).—BENSON v. BENSON (1870), L. Probate of the will was opposed by the next of kin on the ground of testator being of unsound mind at the time of its execution. The exors. contended that it was executed by him in a lucid interval. The jury having found a verdict for the exors., probate of the will was decreed:—Held: (1) where a person afflicted with habitual insanity, with intermissions, makes a will, the fact that the will is a rational one & made in a rational manner, though not conclusive, is strong evidence of its having been made in a lucid interval; (2) where a person is labouring under an insane delusion, his sanity is to be tested by directing his attention to the subject matter of such delusion; but where a person is afflicted with habitual insanity unaccompanied with delusions, his sanity is to be tested by his answers to questions, his apparent recollection of past transactions, & his reasoning justly with regard to them, & with regard to the conduct of individuals.—NICHOLS & FREEMAN v. BINNS (1858), 1 Sw. & Tr. 239; 32 L. 312. Probability of disposition—Degree of supplementary evidence required—Where mental aberration established.]—Where mental aberration is proved to have shown itself in the alleged testator, the degree of evidence necessary to substantiate any testamentary act depends greatly on the character of the act itself. If it purports to give effect only to probable intentions, its validity may be established by comparatively slight evidence. But evidence, very different in kind, & much weightier in degree, is requisite to the support of an act, which purports to contain dispositions contrary to testator's probable intentions, or savouring, in any degree, of folly or frenzy. What then are the features, & what is the character, of the testamentary act, set up in the present case? It is precisely such a disposition as natural affection would dictate. Testator bequeaths by it his whole property, in equitable proportions, to his wife & children. If, in truth, the mother of these children were not his lawful wife, this rather increases than repels, the presumption in favour of the act. In addition to natural affection, it rendered some measure of the sort absolutely incumbent on deceased, in point of moral duty; as his intestacy in that case would have left this mother & her children wholly

360. ———.]—Pending the lunacy, & while the commission was in full force, a will was made. That fact does not of necessity show that the will is not a good will; it is very possible that there may have been a period during which the lunatic was competent to make a will, & that such a will, though the commission existed, may be a valid will . . . there is, unquestionably, the strongest presumption arising from the fact of there being a commission existing at the time, but still it is a presumption, & capable of being rebutted (LORD COTTENHAM, C.).—COOKE v. 361. ———.]—Where evidence of business capacity.]—(1) Testator, who had been in confinement as a lunatic between the years 1815 & 1817, executed his will in 1820. He was again placed in confinement in 1822. In Nov. 1838, a commission in the nature of a writ de lunatico inquirendo was issued, & testator was found, in Jan. 1839, a lunatic without any lucid interval from Aug. 1, 1815. Will pronounced for. Difference between imbecility or idiotcy & delusion, in respect of acts of business, observed upon. The witnesses against the will deposed to a case of idiotcy.

I admit that from that verdict a presumption arises against the validity of the will in question, but I am of opinion that in endeavouring to measure the strength of that presumption I am bound to look to all the circumstances attending the inquisition, though not to the evidence then given (DR. LUSHINGTON).

(2) I am of opinion that the verdict of the jury is sufficient to rebut the ordinary presumption in favour of the will, & to require the party propounding it to prove that a lucid interval did take place when the will was executed; by "lucid interval" I mean that testator was of sound mind at that time. I use the expression—lucid interval—only by reason that there was preceding & succeeding unsoundness of mind. I say, I think, a presumption is raised by the verdict against the validity of this will; nevertheless I am of opinion that the facts already stated greatly diminish the strength of that presumption, making it much less strong than if there had been an issue, raised & contested, as to the existence of lucid intervals (DR. LUSHINGTON).

(3) It is notorious that the sane demeanour of a patient on the occasion of an accidental visit is no proof, or, at least, no satisfactory proof, of soundness of mind (DR. LUSHINGTON).

(4) It is alleged that deceased walked about, in a stooping position with his hands dangling before him, muttering unintelligible & idiotic noises—that boys in the street hooted him as an idiot—that he did not go into company or appear with the family when any one was present—that he did not transact any business—did not order his own clothes or dress himself—and that in 1819, & for a year after, he was, though residing with his mother, under the care of a keeper. Such was the state of things after 1822; but the question is, was such the state before that year? If deceased was in 1820 in the condition alleged, I must pronounce against the will, for such a state is inconsistent with the rational dispatch of any act of business requiring thought, judgment, & reflection (DR. LUSHINGTON).

(5) The case presented against the will is that of idiotcy, or imbecility, the characteristic of which is permanence with very little, or no, variation. To meet such a case, & to show that such a state did not exist at any given period, proof of acts of business is very important evidence. Many acts of business may possibly be done by a lunatic, & the lunacy itself not detected; but it is scarcely possible to predicate the same of an idiot, or imbecile person (DR. LUSHINGTON).—BANNATYNE v. BANNATYNE (1852), 2 Rob. Eccl. 472; 16 Jur. 864; 163 E. R. 1383.

362. ———.]—Deceased was found a lunatic by inquisition in 1869. She suffered from delusions under which she became violent & even dangerous. Her disorder was an obsessional insanity, but her obsessions were recognised by herself as morbid & did not prevent her from taking an intelligent interest in general topics. She kept up a correspondence with her relatives & friends, & in other respects was a shrewd, clever woman, & her memory was excellent. In 1905 a will was drawn up on the instructions of deceased, & executed by her & attested by three doctors who were prepared to certify that she was perfectly intelligent & capable at the time. The ct. granted probate of the will.—In the Estate of WALKER, WATSON v. TREASURY SOLICITOR (1912), 28 T. L. R. 466.

363. ———.]—(1) The will, dated & executed on Nov. 15, 1839, of a testator who was labouring under certain delusions on the three previous days to its execution, & who destroyed himself on the day following (Nov. 16) while under temporary insanity, pronounced for, & the costs of the Queen's Proctor, who opposed the will on behalf of the Crown, refused.

It is admitted that, in this case as in others, the presumption of law is in favour of sanity, particularly where the will is in the handwriting of the deceased, & executed in the presence of witnesses; & then it is incumbent on the party alleging the insanity to establish that state of mind (SIR HERBERT JENNER).

(2) If there had been a delusion previously existing, there was a lucid interval, & I have no hesitation in pronouncing for the validity of the paper (SIR HERBERT JENNER).—CHAMBERS & YATMAN v. QUEEN'S PROCTOR (1840), 2 Curt. 415; 163 E. R. 457.

368. ———.]—(1) The difference, in a question of fluctuating capacity & partial recovery, between unsoundness of mind partaking of the nature of mental derangement, manifesting itself in insane delusions; from unsoundness of mind caused by fever, which produces delirium, observed upon.

In a case where from bodily indisposition testator's mind fluctuated, & at times produced an excitement which while it lasted amounted to unsoundness of mind, a will & codicil made in accordance with the intentions of deceased expressed in a former testamentary instrument & of his declarations & the state of his affection; pronounced for, the fact of a lucid interval at the time of execution being established.

(2) Where the circumstances of the case are so doubtful as to require that a will should be established by legal proof, the party objecting to the legality ought not to be subjected to costs for instituting such an inquiry; but after a full inquiry & the will established in the ct. below, the Judicial Committee held that there was no sufficient ground to justify the appeal, & decreed costs against applt.—DIMES v. DIMES (1856), 10 Moo. P. C. C. 422; 14 E. R. 550, P. C.

369. When instructions given during lucid interval—Will of complicated nature.]—(1) Where a person much depressed by illness, but with his mind calm & clear, gives instructions for a will of a complicated nature, such a will would not be set aside, although on executing it the next day testator could not have given those complicated instructions, or even fully understood them.

(2) But at a time when the mind is incapable of forming an intention, or arriving at it as a new idea, the mere recollection of an intention vaguely expressed in conversation two months before, is not sufficient proof of capacity.

(3) As to testamentary capacity, there is a wide distinction between two species of delusions, namely, such as are the rooted delusions of insanity, & those which are only the temporary delusions of delirium.—BENNET v. MANCHESTER (DUKE) (1854), 23 L. T. O. S. 331; 2 W. R. 644.

(2) When a man of sound memory makes his will, & afterwards by the visitation of God becomes of unsound memory (as every man for the most part before his death is), God forbid that this act of God should be in law a revocation of his will, which he made when he was of good & perfect memory.—*FORSE v. (2) The wife of a testator, in a fit of anger, at a time when her husband was in a state of hopeless intoxication, tore up his will on account of certain language which he had used towards her. The pieces of the torn will were afterwards pasted together, & the will was complete, with the exception of three or four words. The husband treated the act of his wife in the light of a joke & subsequently referred to his will as being still in existence:—Held: at the moment when the will was torn, testator had no mental capacity to authorise such an act, & the tearing up did not amount to a revocation. The intention to revoke must be manifested at the time of destruction, & no subsequent ratification is of any effect.—GILL v. GILL, [1909] P. 157; 78 L. J. P. 60; 100 L. T. 861; 25 T. L. ## Part III.—Presumptions and Proof of State of Mind.

SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

382. Mental capacity—Question for court—Independently of medical evidence.]—The question of mental capacity is one for the ct. before which the matter comes, & not for the doctors, & the ct. cannot be relieved by medical testimony of obligation to form an independent opinion on the technical aspect.—RICHMOND v. RICHMOND (1914), 111 L. T. 273; 58 Sol. Jo. 784.

383. What must be considered—Collateral circumstances.]—(1) In support of an action brought in 1808 to reduce certain deeds executed by M. between 1782 & 1799, upon the ground of the insanity of M. the grantor; parole evidence given that he was quite deranged from 1781 till his death in 1804; the evidence applying to his insanity generally, & not to the particular moments when the deeds were executed. This evidence encountered by parole evidence of his general sanity during the same period; & this latter evidence corroborated by notes or receipts written by M. having reference to the contents of the deeds; & showing that he understood their nature & effect; & also by the deeds themselves, which were rational in his circumstances; corroborated also by the circumstances that the deeds were attested by witnesses of unimpeached credit, & that M. had been in 1784 served heir, & infert in the subjects conveyed by the deeds, & had then sold part of the lands, & mortgaged the remainder, etc., these transactions proceeding on the supposition of his sanity, & remaining unchallenged:—Held: the deeds were good.

(2) Delay in challenging the deeds a material circumstance.

Another principle which we may safely lay down is this: if property has been disposed of twenty or thirty years before, formally, & with the concurrence & assistance of individuals of good character; & if that disposition is not quarrelled with as speedily as may be, & only challenged when the parties best acquainted with the whole circumstances of the transaction are dead & gone, it is dangerous to set aside that disposition, at the distance of twenty or thirty years, upon a ground so fallible as human memory, & testimony as to the state of the person making that disposition at other moments, without at all applying to the moment when he executes the deed (LORD ELDON, C.).

(3) It must be taken that the persons who prepared & witnessed, & were parties to the deeds, would, if alive, have sworn to the sanity of M. at the time when the deeds were executed.

The persons who prepared these deeds, & who were parties & witnesses to them, were dead when this process commenced; & we must take it that they would have sworn that he was competent: for we have no right on this general testimony to assume the contrary (LORD REDESDALE).—TOWART v. 385. — — — General conduct.]—(1) Though the finding of a person's insanity, by inquisition upon a commission of lunacy, is not binding on third parties, still it destroys the natural presumption in favour of sanity, & casts the burden of proving the person's sanity on the party alleging it.

(2) After a bill to foreclose, the mtgor. was found lunatic by inquisition, at a date overreaching the mtge. deed. At the hearing, an issue was directed as to his sanity at the date of the mtge.

(3) As to the difficulties in ascertaining a man's sanity, & the proper tests to be employed.

A man may be subject to some delusions, & one of the means . . . of judging whether these apparent indications ought to be relied upon as proving a general unsoundness of mind, is by a comparison of the alleged acts of insanity with other acts of the same person & the general course of his life; so that, on questions of insanity, a great deal more is to be taken into consideration than the particular acts of imputed insanity. When a man's ways & general course of life are such as to indicate sanity & a knowledge of his affairs, proof of one or more particular acts, though very strange in themselves & though affording some grounds for imputing insanity, would not be sufficient proof to show that all his acts were done

PART III. SECT. 1.

• Question for court—Independently of medical evidence.]—On an application to appoint a guardian ad

litem to a person alleged to be of unsound mind, not so found by inquisition, it is not sufficient evidence of the lunacy that deponents swear that the person is of unsound mind, or that they believe him to be so; such facts should be shown as will enable the ct. to judge for itself.—MCINTYRE v.

under the delusion of insanity. On the other hand when a man is thought by various persons to have been insane at a particular period, & to have so continued ever since, proof of one or more acts done afterwards apparently in the manner of a man of sound mind would not, if unaccompanied by other proof & the application of some test or inquiry, prove that the acts done were done under circumstances free from delusion, or what is quite as much of importance, free from the influence to which persons acting under insane delusions are confessedly liable (LORD LANGDALE, M.R.).—*SNOOK v. 393. To establish incapacity of an executor—Eccentricity not sufficient.]—(1) Two persons were named co-exors.; one of them sought to obtain the probate exclusive of the other, by reason of his alleged mental incapacity:—Held: his incapacity for the office was not sufficiently proved.

As to the evidence of incapacity he might not possess a strong energetic mind; he might be liable to imposition & indisposed to exertion, & therefore it might be desirable that some one should be appointed exor. with him, some one who was conversant with the management of the mineral property of deceased, & more competent than he was to turn it to the best advantage. Several affidavits have been made in order to show his incapacity; but all that I can discover from them is that a former schoolfellow of his speaks as to his eccentricity of mind, & that he was reserved in his manner, & inclined to literary pursuits: that is the utmost approach towards incapacity. There may be some foundation for the suspicion that he might be liable to imposition, & therefore it might be desirable, as deceased seemed to think, that some one should be joined with him in the exorship. The utmost proved was, that it was desirable that some one should be joined with him in the execution of the office. Affidavits also had been made in favour of his capacity, which, though not proving a high degree of capacity, were still sufficient to satisfy the mind of the ct. that he was capable of discharging the duties of an exor. in conjunction with another (SIR H. JENNER FUST).

(2) The onus probandi lies on those who impeach capacity; where, however, incapacity has been proved, the onus is shifted upon those who set up capacity (SIR H. JENNER FUST).—EVANS v. TYLER (1849), 2 Rob. Eccl. 128; 7 Notes of Cases, 296; 14 L. T. O. S. 450; 14 Jur. 47; 163 E. R. 1266.

394. To dissolve partnership—Inability to conduct business according to articles.]—Motion for an interim injunction to restrain a partner who six months previously, being temporarily of unsound mind, had attempted to commit suicide, from interfering in the partnership affairs, refused, the evidence not showing, that, at the time of the motion, he was incompetent to conduct the business of the partnership according to the partnership articles. A motion in a cross suit to restrain debts. in such cross suit from prosecuting the partner who had been insane from transacting the business of the partnership as a partner thereof, granted. The circumstances, that the conduct & state of mind of the partner in question were such as at once to destroy the confidence of the other partners, & to induce customers to withdraw their custom from the firm, & that the malady under which he laboured might as easily have led him to attempt the life of one of his partners:—Held: not to promise sufficient ground for granting the first motion.

Examination of the authorities on this subject. They establish these propositions: (a) actual insanity of a partner is not in itself a dissolution of the partnership, but there must be a decree for dissolution; (b) such a decree, notwithstanding actual insanity proved to have existed before the filing of the bill, will not be made in a disputed case without a further inquiry, whether, at the time when the relief is sought, the party is in such a state of mind as to be able to conduct the business of the firm with the others members, according to the articles of partnership, & semble, the affirmative of this issue would then lie with the party who had been of unsound mind; (c) insanity existing when the relief is sought, is good ground for dissolution.—ANON. 395. General rule.]—(1) If you can establish that the party afflicted habitually by a malady of the mind has intermissions, & if there was an intermission of the disorder at the time of the act, that being proved is sufficient, & the general habitual insanity will not affect it; but the effect of it is this, it inverts the order of proof & of presumption, for, until proof of habitual insanity is made, the presumption is that the party agent like all human creatures was rational (SIR WILLIAM WYNNE).

(2) But where an habitual insanity in the mind of the person who does the act is established, there the party who would take advantage of the fact of an interval of reason must prove it; that is the law; so that in all these cases the question is whether, admitting habitual insanity, there was a lucid interval or not to do the act (SIR WILLIAM WYNNE).

(3) Now I think the strongest & best proof that can arise as to a lucid interval is that which arises from the act itself; that I look upon as the thing to be first examined, & if it can be proved & established that it is a rational act rationally done the whole case is proved (SIR WILLIAM WYNNE).—CARTWRIGHT v. condition of mind that it was scarcely possible, though the alleged fraud was by an open act, that he should have discovered the fraud, if the condition of his mind was not that of actual lunacy; for the ct. cannot possibly estimate for this purpose the chance which the state of mind & education of a man may afford of his making such discovery, & is, therefore, compelled to assume that every one not actually a lunatic is competent to judge of & to obtain advice concerning his rights, & to assert them if necessary. Therefore a suit cannot be maintained to set aside a compromise of an action to recover large estates made eighty years before, upon the ground that the compromise was a fraud upon pltf. in the action, & that he was a man of such dull intellect that, though cognisant of all the facts, it was necessarily a concealed fraud as to him.—*MANBY v. 420. On party alleging lucid interval.]—If derangement be alleged, it is clearly incumbent on the party alleging it to prove such derangement; if such derangement be proved, or be admitted to have existed at any particular period, but a lucid interval be alleged to have prevailed at the period particularly referred to, then the burden of proof attaches on the party alleging such lucid interval, who must show sanity & competence at the period when the act was done, & to which the lucid interval refers; & it certainly is of equal importance that the evidence in support of the allegation of a lucid interval, after derangement at any period has been established, should be as strong & as demonstrative of such fact as where the object of the proof is to establish derangement. The evidence in such a case, applying to stated intervals, ought to go to the state & habit of the person, & not to the accidental interview of any individual, or to the degree of self-possession in any particular act (LORD THURLOW, C.).—A.-G. v. Such presumption, however, may be rebutted & displaced by positive proof of entire recovery, or possession of a lucid interval, when a testamentary instrument was executed.

(2) The onus probandi lies upon a party setting up a will, made during the subsistence of a commission of lunacy, to establish the affirmation of complete or partial recovery of the lunatic at the time of giving instructions for & executing the will.

(3) Insane delusions are of two kinds: first, the belief in things impossible; & second, the belief in things possible, but so improbable under the surrounding circumstances, that no person of sound mind would give them credit.

Testator, against whom a commission of lunacy was subsisting, made a will & codicil, the instructions for which were rational & the testamentary papers properly executed. Such instruments pronounced against, the evidence showing that deceased had been instructed to conceal the continued existence of the delusions he still entertained, & that he acted under restraint; the evidence of his partial or perfect recovery at the time of giving instructions & execution, being inconclusive & unsatisfactory.—*PRINSEP & EAST INDIA CO. v. Judicial inquisition generally, see Part VII., post.

436. As to anterior act—Purchase.]—An inquisition of lunacy is always admitted to be read, but is not conclusive evidence, for you may traverse it. Where, before an inquisition of lunacy, a person who was found a lunatic, has made a purchase with the approbation of his only son, the ct. will not change the disposition that has been made of this sum of money, but the purchase will stand.

An inquisition is not conclusive evidence, for it may be denied & traversed. Nay, it is not conclusive to the point of time in which it is found, much less is it to a retrospect. There have been many instances wherein juries have found a man a lunatic for many years before the inquisition, & notwithstanding that evidence has been given to another jury upon trials to controvert such former inquisition, & the jury have found him not to be a lunatic (LORD HARDWICKE, C.).—*SERGESON v. ## Part V.—Jurisdiction of Chancery Division of High Court of Justice.

SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

485. No jurisdiction by reason of lunacy.]—(1) A suit instituted by a next friend on behalf of a person of unsound mind, not so found by inquisition, becomes absolutely paralysed by a change in the status of pltf. If he becomes of sound mind there is no pretext for the continued intervention of the next friend; if he is found a lunatic by inquisition, & is thus placed under the protection of the Crown, the suit should be continued only with the sanction of the Ct. in Lunacy.

(2) Orders of the Ct. of Ch. obtained by a solr. who has officially instituted such a suit give him no protection, & he will have to pay the costs of unnecessary inquiries made under such orders. But if, on the person of unsound mind being found lunatic by inquisition, the solr. can satisfy the Ct. in Lunacy that he has acted bond fide for the benefit of the lunatic, that Ct. will reimburse him out of the lunatic's estate.

(3) Every proceeding taken in the suit after the inquisition, whether or not a committee has been appointed, is irregular & void & a contempt of the Ct. in Lunacy. A suit on behalf of a trader who had become deranged, for an account against his agent & manager, & the appointment of a receiver of his stock-in-trade, etc., was instituted by solrs. who had occasionally acted for the pltf., but were not his ordinary family solrs. A receiver was appointed in the suit with the concurrence of the family solr., who consented upon the understanding that no further steps should be taken without notice to him. The suit was proceeded with without such notice. A decree directing accounts & inquiries was obtained, the accounts were taken, the chief clerk made his certificate, & an order on further consideration was obtained directing taxation & payment of the costs of suit, which were paid out of pltf.'s estate. Meanwhile, previously to the last mentioned order, pltf. was found a lunatic by inquisition, but no committee was appointed until after the said order. The

from general peculiarities in the manner, speech, behaviour & letters of the alleged lunatic should be drawn by the jury for themselves, & they should not be guided by the opinions formed by medical witnesses.—MORRISON v. MACLEAN'S TRUSTEES (1862), 24 Dunl. (Ct. of Sess.) 625; 34 So. Jur. 311; affd. (1865), 3 Macph. (Ct. of Sess.) 42, H. L.—SCOT.

committee with the sanction of the Master in Lunacy presented a petition for the purpose of setting aside as invalid the proceedings in the suit subsequent to the finding in lunacy:—Held: all proceedings after the appointment of the receiver were unauthorised & improper, & all after the finding on the inquisition were irregular & void, & the solrs. of the next friend were liable to refund the costs so paid out of the lunatic's estate under the orders so irregularly obtained & to pay the costs of the petition.

The law of the Ct. of Ch. undoubtedly is that in certain cases where there is a person of unsound mind, not found so by inquisition, & therefore incapable of invoking the protection of the Ct., that protection may be in proper cases, & if & so far as may be necessary & proper, invoked on his behalf by any person as his next friend. But every person so constituting himself officially the guardian, committee, & protector of a person of unsound mind does so entirely at his own risk, & he must be prepared to vindicate the necessity & propriety of the proceedings if they are called in question. . . . Unsoundness of mind gives the Ct. of Ch. no jurisdiction whatever . . . & is not by reason of the incompetency, but notwithstanding the incompetency, that the Ct. of Ch. entertains the proceedings . . . the Ct. can only exercise such equitable jurisdiction as it could under the same circumstances have exercised at the suit of the person himself, if of sound mind (SIR W. M. JAMES, L.J.).—BEALL v. SMITH (1873), 9 Ch. App. 85; 43 L. J. Ch. 245; 29 L. T. 625; 38 J. P. 72; 22 W. R. 121, L. JJ.

With regard to the question, what amount of property was small enough to justify the exercise of the jurisdiction, the Legislature had provided an index in the provision of Lunacy Regulation Act, 1862 (c. 86), s. 12, fixing £1,000 of capital or £50 of annual income as the "small amount" (JESSEL, M.R.).—*VANE v. It would be very inconvenient if it was; for if no person took proceedings in lunacy the infant would be left without any protection at all. Moreover, I am not aware that I ever heard of a petition in lunacy against an infant. Is there any authority in support of the view that unsoundness of mind takes away the jurisdiction which exists, on the ground of infancy? (JAMES, L.J.).—Re EDWARDS (1879), 10 Ch. D. 605; 27 W. Therefore, where a committee had neglected to comply with an order in lunacy, authorising him to make certain payments out of the lunatic's estate, in discharge of a liability which had been established against the lunatic in a suit at the Rolls; an order pronounced by the Master of the Rolls on a petition in the cause that the payments be made "by the lunatic or the committee" on or before

Chancellor in matters of lunacy, is not derived from his jurisdiction as judge in the Ct. of Ch. The King might, by his sign manual, commit into any other hands the care of lunatics, as well as to the Chancellor. But when does not affect the jurisdiction of the Ct. in Lunacy as to the application of the lunatic's property.

His only other property was a £10 share in a co-operative society & some furniture of small value. He had carried on business as a market gardener. He had not been found lunatic by inquisition. He was sixty-four years of age & his wife was sixty. He had a daughter aged twenty, who lived with her mother, & seven grown-up sons, who did not contribute to their mother's support:—Held: the discretion of the ct. as to the application of the lunatic's property would be properly exercised by allowing out of the fund, the capital being used for the purpose, the sum of £26 a year to the guardians as the cost of his maintenance in the asylum, & the sum of £25 a year to the wife, & an order was made accordingly. Semble: after the making of the order the lunatic would no longer be in the position of a pauper lunatic.—Re TYE, [1900] 1 Ch. 249; 69 L. Conflict of jurisdiction with other courts—Action in county court—Claim by medical man for expenses of examination.]—Lunacy Regulation Act, 1862 (c. 86), s. 11, in substance provides that it shall be lawful for the Lord Chancellor to order the costs, charges, & expenses of & incidental to the presentation of a petition for a commission in the nature of a writ de lunatico inquirendo, or for any order of inquiry under the Lunacy Regulation Act, 1853 (c. 70), & to the prosecution of any inquiry on such commission or order, to be paid either by the party who has presented the petition, or by the party opposing it, or out of the estate of the alleged lunatic, or partly in one way & partly in another; & that such order shall have the effect of an order for the payment of money made by the Ct. of Ch.

An inquiry having been ordered under Lunacy Regulation Acts whether or not deft. was of unsound mind, pltf., a medical man, was employed by deft.'s solr. to examine deft., for the purpose of giving evidence of his sanity at the inquiry. Pltf. accordingly did so, & attended & gave evidence at the inquiry, but notwithstanding such evidence deft. was found to be a lunatic. Pltf. subsequently brought an action in the county ct. against deft. for his charges in respect of the services so rendered by him, but was nonsuited on the ground that he could not recover such charges without an order under the above sect.:—Held: the sect. did not take away or affect pltf.'s right of action, assuming the action to be in other respects maintainable, & therefore that the nonsuit was wrong & there must be a new trial.

The general rule is, that what is done be for the benefit of the lunatic; but this is not to be pursued by unnecessary alterations; the order being made & in full force the persons entitled after the lunatic must take it as they find it & have no equity between them (LORD LOUGHBOROUGH, C.). —OXENDEN v. 538. ———.]—A lunatic was tenant for life of certain real estates, including the advowson of a rectory. A lease of this property had been granted by order of the ct. for ninety-nine years, if the lunatic should so long live. This lease had become vested in a person who was also first tenant in tail in remainder expectant on the death of the lunatic without issue male. The lunatic was over eighty years of age, & had never had any issue. The first tenant in tail in remainder wishing to sell the next presentation to the rectory presented a petition praying the ct., as protector of the settlement, to consent to the barring of the entail of the advowson:—Held: the ct. ought not to interfere, as the application was not made for the benefit of the lunatic's estate.—Re THARP (1876), 3 Ch. 539. ———.]—(1) The principles on which the ct. acts in dealing with the property of lunatics under its care are not open to question. The leading principle, the paramount consideration, is the interest of the lunatic (LORD MACNAGHTEN).

(2) Consistently with that principle it is settled that in the ordinary course of managing a lunatic's estate, the ct. pays no regard to the interests or expectations of those who may come after, but it is equally well settled that in matters outside the ordinary course of management, it is the duty of the ct. so far as may be possible not to alter the character of the lunatic's property, or to interfere with any rights of succession (LORD MACNAGHTEN). —A.-G. v. AILESBUURY (MARQUIS) (1887), 12 App. Cas. 672; 57 L. J. Q. B. 83; 58 L. T. 192; 36 W. R. 737, H. L.

540. ———.]—In exercising the power given to the judge by Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), s. 118 to charge monies expended or to be expended under his order for the permanent improvement of the property of a lunatic upon the improved property, the judge may take into consideration, not only the benefit of the lunatic personally, but also what is fair & right as between his real & personal estates.

Regard ought also to be had to the nature & extent of the estate & to the difficulty in drawing a clear line between ordinary repairs & permanent improvements.

The principle on which the ct. acts in dealing with the property of lunatics under its care is very clearly stated by LORD MACNAGHTEN in A.-G. v. Marquis of Ailesbury, No. 539, ante, where he said: "The leading principle, the paramount consideration, is the interest of the lunatic" (STIRLING, L.J.).—Re GIST, [1904] 1 Ch. 398; 73 L. J. 541. ———.]—Property not to be changed—So as to affect succession.]—Ex p. ANNANDALE (MARCHIONESS), No. 536, ante.

542. ———.]—(1) Lord Chancellor may make an order in lunatic's affairs after the death of the lunatic. Mtge. on his estate paid off, & the mtge. term ordered to be assigned to attend the inheritance & not in trust for the next of kin.

It was said to be the general rule that the ct. will not alter the lunatic's property to the prejudice of his successor, rightly understood. It is true that the ct. will not buy or sell land for him; but in the management of the estate the governing principle is the interest of the lunatic (LORD APSLEY, C.).

The great principle upon which I have always conceived the ct. to act, is the immediate care of the lunatic. In Morrison's case, Lord S. was indebted to the lunatic in £1,000 by bonds in England; the committee brought an action against Lord S. in Scotland, but afterwards prayed the direction of the ct., & its assistance, on some doubts made in Scotland as to the right of suing. LORD HARDWICKE made no hesitation as to the order; but, on the ground, that it was for the benefit of the lunatic, without regard to the succession; for the rights of the succession were altered by it.

In Lord Annandale's case, there was a motion not reported by Vesey; the Scotch & the English next of kin opposing each other, LORD HARDWICKE referred it to the master, to inquire whether it was for the benefit of the trust, the money being English trust money, not whether it was for the benefit of the next of kin, nor whether for the benefit of the lunatic.

Upon these cases, it strikes me that the ct. alters the succession to the personal estate, without regard to the interest of the next of kin, if the interest of the lunatic requires it.

If so, why may not the personal estate be taken from the next of kin, if the immediate interest of the lunatic requires it, to favour the heir at law; repairs may be made, new buildings, such as barns: if so why not restore the estate to the condition in which it was, by paying off incumbrances? (LORD DE GREY, C.J.).

(2) When a person is found a lunatic, the King alone can grant the custody of the lunatic by sign manual & therefore to save repeated applications, there always is a sign manual to the Chancellor on his coming into office (LORD APSLEY, C.). —Ex p. GRIMSTONE (1772), Amb. 706; 4 Bro. 573. — Allen—Resident here for short time—Or for particular purpose.]—A commission of lunacy may issue against an alien.

The domicil of the party against whom a commission of lunacy is applied for, is not material to the question of jurisdiction, though it may be material to the question of discretion, if, for instance, the party has come here for a short time or for a particular purpose. If an alien, who is resident, & possessed of property in this country, become insane, the Lord Chancellor has jurisdiction to issue a commission of lunacy with a view to the protection of his person & property.—Re BARIATINSKI (PRINCESS) (1843), 1 Ph. 375 ; 13 L. 574. Weak understanding & imbecile mind.]—In this case a commission was refused in respect of a person of merely weak understanding & imbecile mind.

Lunacy is a distemper occasioned either by disorders or accident ; & to one of these two cases were commissions at first confined ; but in some time this part of the prerogative, this paternal care, was enlarged & extended to one, who is non compos mentis ; but here it stopped, & this at least, this ct. insists, must be found to entitle any one to a commission : & therefore though a jury finds, that one is incapable of managing his affairs, yet such a finding is not sufficient, but they must expressly find him to be of unsound mind. In the present case I allow, Lord Donegal is of very weak understanding & of no resolution of mind ; but that is not sufficient for me whereon to ground a commission. If I was to grant any, it must be that of idiocy : for no time is mentioned, when he was of better understanding. Beside the petition is in behalf of infants, whose remainder might by this means be defeated : but this ct. will take care, that an infant shall never be hurt by any proposal that may be made in his name. It is objected, that there must be a very large personal estate at death of Lord Donegal, & if the commission is not granted, he may dispose of it by will ; but fraud & imposition upon weakness is a sufficient ground to set aside a will of real, much more of personal estate ; & yet such weakness is not sufficient to ground a commission (LORD HARDWICKE, C.).—DONEGAL'S (LORD) CASE (1751), 2 Ves. 611. ——— Improper dealing with alleged lunatic's property.] — The ct. is very reluctant at issuing commissions in the cases of persons whose minds have become affected merely by age & infirmity.

Petition presented by the son-in-law & daughter of the alleged lunatic, who applied for the carriage of the commission. The alleged lunatic was a person of considerable substance, & lately lived upon his own property. At the instance of his son-in-law he sold it, & went to reside with him. Part of the produce of the sale the son-in-law borrowed, on the security of a bill of sale of his household furniture, & the good will of a school, which he, the son-in-law, had lately established:—Held: a commission ought to issue to protect, as well his person as his property, but the ct. refused to trust the carriage of the commission to petitioners. — Re WILSON (1852), 19 L. T. O. S. 357, L. C.

612. Priority of presentation of petition—Gives primâ facie right—Though later petition presented by wife.] — (1) The right to the carriage of a commission in lunacy belongs primâ facie to those who first present the petition.

Two petitions for a commission of lunacy were presented, one by the wife of the lunatic, the other by a nephew jointly with his wife, who was the daughter of the lunatic by a former marriage. The petition of the nephew & his wife was the earlier in date:—Held: a wife is not entitled to any preference over a child of the alleged lunatic as to the conduct of proceedings under a commission of lunacy, & it not being shown that there was any impropriety on the part of the nephew & daughter, or that the petition of the wife was preferable, the conduct of the proceedings ought to be given to the nephew & daughter as having presented the earlier petition.

The onus is on the brother to show why the usual course should be departed from, & there being no objection made by affidavit, the wife, as the nearest relation, will have the carriage of the commission. 629. Inspection of reports by court doctors.]—If the lunatic is dead, & appct. wants to see documents in the custody of the ct. in order to make good a claim to the lunatic's property such a purpose is prima facie sufficient to induce the ct. to allow inspection, even although the request is opposed by a rival litigant. The ct. would not under any circumstances make an order for the inspection of the reports confidentially made to the ct. by its own medical advisers, but with this exception the general rule is to allow inspection by any person claiming an interest in the property of the deceased lunatic or alleged lunatic & who can satisfy the ct. that he wants inspection for some reasonable & proper purpose.

Where an inquiry in lunacy was directed, but the alleged lunatic died before anything further was done, & the same issues were raised in a subsequent probate action a party to such action who claimed under the deceased was not allowed to inspect affidavits filed in the lunacy proceedings, inasmuch as appct. wanted inspection not to support her own case, but to enable her to ascertain what allegations of mental incapacity were intended to be made at the trial of the probate action, so that she might have an opportunity of rebutting them.—*Re STRACHAN, [1895] 1 Ch. 439; 64 L. neighbourhood of Paris, & having no place of residence in this country, commission of lunacy ordered to be executed in Middlesex. Commission ordered to issue for the examination of witnesses residing in or near Paris.

(2) The carriage of the commission should be given to that party, by whom, it is most likely, that the whole truth will be brought out.

(3) In questions as to the issuing & carriage of commissions of lunacy, relations are, unless under peculiar circumstances, always preferred to creditors.

(4) There has been, in general, a reluctance to make orders, giving parties liberty to attend the execution of a commission of lunacy by their counsel & solrs.

The proper order, in cases where it may be fit to give a party liberty to carry in proposals for committees of the person & estate, is to direct that the Master in Lunacy, in case the inquisition should be returned, finding the lunacy, shall not proceed to the approval of committees of the person & estate until further order. A practice, in the appointment of committees, to give a preference to the proposal of the party who, upon a contest, has succeeded in obtaining the carriage of a commission, would be a most improper practice.—Re WEBB (1846), 2 *Coop. temp. 681. Hearing in camera — Exception to general rule as to publicity.—The three exceptions which are acknowledged to the application of the rule prescribing the publicity of cts. of justice are, first, in suits affecting wards; secondly, in lunacy proceedings; & thirdly, in those cases where secrecy, as, for instance, the secrecy of a process of manufacture or discovery or invention, trade secrets, is of the essence of the cause. The first two of these cases depend upon the familiar principle that the jurisdiction over wards & lunatics is exercised by the judges as representing His Majesty as parens patriæ. The affairs are truly private affairs; the transactions are transactions truly intra familiam; & it has long been recognised that an appeal for the protection of the ct. in the case of such persons does not involve the consequence of placing in the light of publicity their truly domestic affairs (LORD SHAW).—SCOTT v. See, generally, Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), ss. 90–93, 96, 97; Rules in Lunacy, 1892, r. 30.

682. Right to demand jury—Confined to original inquiry.—(1) Where an Order in Lunacy has been made in Ireland by the ct. having jurisdiction for that purpose, & a transcript of the record has, under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 70, s. 52, been transmitted to this country, the English ct. must treat the order as a binding order, & has no jurisdiction to entertain an application either for the purpose of setting aside the proceedings in Ireland, or for a supersedeas. Any such application must be made to the ct. which originally made the order. (2) The right of an alleged lunatic to demand a jury is confined to the original inquiry.—Re TALBOT (1882), 20 Ch. Dispensing with jury—Discretion of court.—See Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), ss. 91, 92.

684. Number of jury.—(1) In a case where the ct. directed an inquiry as to the soundness of mind of an individual, the jury returned a verdict in favour of the individual; & the ct., considering that upon the whole evidence there was reasonable ground for questioning the sanity, refused to order the applicants for the inquiry to pay the costs of the alleged lunatic. It is at least doubtful whether in such a case the Ct. has jurisdiction to order them to pay such costs.

(2) Semble: from an order directing such an inquiry an appeal lies to the Privy Council.

(3) Where lunacy is found, the care of the lunatic & his estate is in the Crown as parens patriæ, but where not found, there can be no trust or duty in the Crown, on which the powers of the ct. can attach.

(4) Distinction between congenital imbecility & unsoundness arising from the mind being imperfect, & conduct may be so extraordinary as to amount, even in absence of delusions, to evidence of such unsoundness.

(5) The result was a verdict of soundness of mind, in which fifteen certainly (of course more than a sufficient number) of the jurymen concurred. Those fifteen alone signed their names as assenting. With regard to the other seven (for only twenty-two of the original number were able to go through the whole inquiry), a written communication, made to us by the learned master, at our request, which one of us read in ct. on Mar 13, showed that some, at least, of these seven expressly dissented from that verdict; & I think also that not one of the seven assented to it, an absence of assent which indeed would, I suppose, have been properly presumable from the absence of their signatures (KNIGHT BRUCE, L.J.).—Re WINDHAM (1862), 4 De G. 689. Alleged lunatic entitled to verdict of all jurors.—(1) An order to examine an alleged lunatic against his will can be made by a master, & if necessary, by the ct., but no such order should be made adversely to a person, pending a petition, unless the master or other person conducting the inquiry inform the ct. that such an order is necessary to enable him to come to a decision.

Qu.: whether a master can enforce such an order when made by him in a case where there is no jury.

(2) The jury, if there is one, ought to see the alleged lunatic. . . . In order to inconvenience him as little as possible, sometimes one or two of the jury see him & report to the rest; but in strictness the supposed lunatic is entitled to the judgment of all the jurors (LINDLEY, L.J.).

SUB-SECT. 3.—WHO MAY ATTEND.

700. Heir-at-law.]—Re BROWN, No. 805, post.

701. Persons interested under lunatic's will.]—S. died, leaving a will by which he gave all his property to his widow, requesting her to bequeath certain parts of it to A., if living. The widow, immediately after her husband's death, made a will in conformity with this request, & shortly afterwards became lunatic. T. & wife, the wife being heiress-at-law & sole next of kin of the lunatic, were appointed committees of the person, & their eldest son committee of the estate. Letters of administration of the estate of S. were granted to Mrs. T. for the use & benefit of the lunatic, & during the lunacy. After a few months a new committee of the estate was appointed, & Mr. & Mrs. T.'s eldest son filed a bill against Mr. & Mrs. T., the lunatic & the committee of the estate, seeking to make T. & the estate of S. liable for very large sums alleged to have been improperly received by Mrs. T. & the lunatic & their husbands in excess of what they were entitled to as tenants for life under the will of the lunatic's father. A. then presented a petition for leave to attend proceedings under the lunacy, alleging that none of the parties were substantially interested in defending the suit:—Held: a precedent ought not to be made for allowing persons named in the wills of lunatics to attend the proceedings in lunacy, & application refused accordingly.—Re SCARLETT (1873), 8 Ch. 704. Lunatic & wife—Lunatic capable of managing himself—Incapable of managing affairs.]—In 1906 Lord T. was found to be a person incapable of managing his affairs, but capable of managing himself. A committee of the estate was appointed & the person who in default of issue male to Lord T. was the next heir to the title & also tenant for life in remainder of the settled estates was given liberty to attend generally upon the proceedings. Since the management of the estate was taken over by the committee the income received by Lord T. had increased from a nominal sum to about £800 per annum. In 1911 Lord T. & his wife applied that they or one of them might be at liberty to attend the future proceedings in the matter generally at the expense of the estate:—Held: the application must be refused.—Re TOWNSHEND (MARQUESS) (1911), 28 T. ## B. The Petition.

(a) By Lunatic.

732. Right by law—Evidence supporting finding.]—Upon a search of precedents it was held no objection to the return to an inquisition, finding a person lunatic, that it does not state that the lunatic has or has not lucid intervals. A traverse to the return to an inquisition, finding a person lunatic, is a right by law; though the Lord Chancellor is not dissatisfied with the return upon the evidence. The order was therefore suspended for the purpose of taking the traverse.—Ex p. WRAGG, Ex p. FERNE (1800), 5 Ves. 450; 31 E. R. 677, L. C.; *subsequent proceedings sub nom. Ex p. 735. —.]—(1) On application to the Lord Chancellor for that purpose by a person found lunatic under a commission:—Held: leave to traverse the inquisition is matter of right.

Qu.: whether it is necessary for a lunatic, found so by inquisition, who is desiring of traversing the inquisition, to come by petition to the Chancellor, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 53, or whether he may go direct to the Petty Bag Office & lodge his traverse.

(2) Semble: the same holding applies to a similar application by another person having an interest.

(3) The fact of the traverse being of right does not, however, preclude the Lord Chancellor from exercising such a control over the matter as may be necessary for the protection of the person & estate of the alleged lunatic, as, for instance, by satisfying himself that the application is bond fide,

& that the alleged lunatic, where he is the person applying, is competent to judge of what he is doing & is really desirous that the traverse shall issue.

Qu.: whether, if the Lord Chancellor should not be otherwise able to satisfy himself on the points above mentioned, he would allow any & what evidence to be gone into respecting them.

(4) Where the ct. considered it expedient in the circumstances of the case that, pending a traverse, the system of personal care of the supposed lunatic should not be disturbed, & that she should continue to receive her income, the appointment of committees & the execution of the grant were not stayed on that account, but the order for the appointment & grant was qualified by the introduction of directions to the above effect.—Re CUMMING (1852), 1 De G. (1) In the case of infants, it is the habit of the ct. very much to disregard form in order better to protect their interests, & in some respects lunatics are entitled to a similar privilege. This indulgence, however, is not to be granted to the same extent to a lunatic applying for a supersedeas, for he cannot at the same time assert his soundness of mind & claim the benefit of any relaxation of practice conceded to those of unsound mind. Semble: for the purpose of discouraging improper applications for a supersedeas, the Lord Chancellor will not adjudicate upon a case in favour of petitioner, where it clearly appears that improper means have been used in getting up the petition.

(2) The existence of a delusion is the symptom or result of a diseased mind, & therefore so long as it continues, whether exhibiting itself more or less distinctly, there must still be unsoundness.

SUB-SECT. 10.—COMMITTEES.

A. Proposals for Appointment.

776. Attendance of next of kin—Order discouraging attendance avoided.]—It is greatly to the advantage of lunatics, generally speaking, that all the next of kin & the heir-at-law should be present when the proposals for committees of the estate & of the person are discussed. In their absence many cases would be decided in total ignorance of, or only with a partial & imperfect acquaintance with, those circumstances a thorough knowledge of which is necessary to enable the Lord Chancellor to determine whether the plans he is required to sanction, will be beneficial, or detrimental, to the unfortunate persons on whose account they are framed. An order which might discourage the next of kin & heir-at-law from attending, when the proposals for committees of the person & estate are carried in, should be carefully avoided (LORD ELDON, C.).—Re MEUX (1808), 2 Coop. temp. Cott. 106; 47 E. R. 1075, L. C.

777. — Generally ordered to attend.]—In general an order is not requisite that any of the next of kin may be at liberty to carry in proposals for committees of the person & estate of the lunatic, & that they shall have notice of any proposal for committees of the person & estate, which the party prosecuting the commission shall carry in. Where from any peculiar circumstances such an order is requisite, the case probably will very rarely occur in which the Lord Chancellor will decline to make it. The policy here has long been in favour of making such an order. If the persons connected with the lunatic by blood, & interested in his estate, shall not come forward, & they not unfrequently will not care to come forward when obstacles are thrown in their way, the consequences will be extremely mischievous. It is, in general, only by means of the information, which such persons possess, that the Lord Chancellor can ascertain whether any proposal, upon which he is called to exercise a judgment, ought to be adopted as the most conducive to the case & welfare of the lunatic, & to the security of his property (LORD LYNTHURST, C.).—Re HOWELL (1829), 2 Coop. temp. Her husband, who had petitioned for the inquisition, having before the trial of the traverse, become incapable of attending to business, the ct. appointed interim committees of the lady's person, with liberty to take such proceedings with respect to the traverse as they should think fit.—Re ARMSTRONG (1858), 2 De G. & J. 123; 44 E. Practice.]—(1) Where the nearest of kin are foreigners, domiciled abroad, the Chancellor will not appoint them committees of the person to the exclusion of persons resident in this country who are one degree more distantly related to the lunatic; but where the foreign relatives complained that the lunatic had been treated harshly & injudiciously, though the charges were not fully made out, the Lord Chancellor deemed sufficient had been proved to show that a change of treatment was necessary, & he therefore suspended the final appointment of the English relatives, who had been appointed interim committees, to be committees of the person until satisfactory changes of treatment had been made.

(2) It is the duty of the interim committees, under such circumstances, to communicate to the advisers of the foreign relatives the steps taken towards affecting his lordship's directions.—Re BARIATINSKY (1845), 6 L. T. O. S. 17, L. C.

SECT. 2.—PERSONS FOR WHOM RECEIVER MAY BE APPOINTED.

See Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), s. 116 (1).

822. Person lawfully detained—Person detained abroad.]—A “person lawfully detained as a lunatic” in Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), s. 116 (1) (c), means a person lawfully detained under the provisions of that Act, & consequently within the jurisdiction, & does not include a person lawfully detained in a foreign country under the laws of that country. There is therefore no jurisdiction to appoint a receiver of the income of any such person under Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), s. 116 (2).—Re WATKINS, [1896] 2 Ch. 336; 65 L. J. Ch. 636; 74 L. ## SECT. 2.—MAINTENANCE AND ACCOUNTING.

833. Liability of committee to account—Sum allowed for maintenance of children—Gross fraud.]—The ct. allowed the profits of the lunatic's estate to the committee for the maintenance of his person. The lunatic died, his administrator brought a bill for an account of these profits; defendant, the committee, pleaded this order of ct. of the allowance of the profits for the lunatic's maintenance; the plea ordered to stand for an answer: but the ct. declared they would not relieve in such case without gross fraud.—*SHELDON v. Annotation:—Mentd. Palmer v. Mure (1773), 2 Dick. 490.

834. ——— Special circumstances.]—Where an annual sum of money is ordered to be paid to the committee of the person for the maintenance of a lunatic, the committee is not bound to keep accounts, &, as a general rule, will not be ordered to account. But the committee may be ordered to account under special circumstances, as when the lunatic has been improperly maintained, or the sum allowed has clearly not been expended. Where a committee had received one allowance for the maintenance of a lunatic & another for the maintenance of her infant children, & had, after properly maintaining the lunatic, spent the remainder of her allowance on the maintenance of the children:—Held: he would not be ordered to account on the petition of the children.—Re FRENCH (1868), 3 Ch. 835. ——— Separate maintenance for children—Account on petition by children.]—Re FRENCH, No. 834, ante.

836. ——— Proof of insufficient maintenance by committee.]—The committee of the estate of a lunatic was authorised by an order of Mar. 1896, in the common form, to pay to the committee of the person £2,500 per annum for the lunatic's maintenance; the order also provided for the keeping up of a considerable establishment, & that the committee of the person should be at liberty to reside in the lunatic's own house & have the use of the horses, carriages, & other effects of the lunatic. As a matter of convenience to the committee of the person, the allowance was paid quarterly in advance. A quarterly payment of £625 was made on Oct. 29, 1896, & thirteen days afterwards the lunatic died. The exors. of the lunatic claimed to be repaid the sum of £528, being the proportionate part of the quarter's allowance for the period subsequent to the death of the lunatic; or, in the alternative, an inquiry what was properly payable for the maintenance of the lunatic during the thirteen days, & brought an action to enforce this claim:—Held: as the lunatic had not been maintained for the whole year, the exors. were entitled to receive from the committee of the person such portion of the yearly allowance as had not been properly expended for the purposes of the lunatic; & an inquiry was directed what sum ought to be allowed to the committee of the person during the time the lunatic was maintained, regard being had to the order of Mar., 1896, with liberty to apply in chambers for any balance that might be found due to the lunatic's estate, & as to costs.—STRANGWAYS v. READ, [1898] 2 Ch. 419; 67 L. J. Ch. 581; 79 L. T. 245; 46 W. R. 671; 14 T. L. R. 508; 42 Sol. Jo. 654.

SECT. 3.—RESIDENCE OF LUNATIC SO FOUND.

837. Permission to reside out of jurisdiction.]—(1) Where the lunatic's delusions are entirely consequential upon an unfounded jealousy of his wife's fidelity, the wife, though she may be continued one of the committees of the person, will not be allowed any active superintendence or control over the lunatic; & the lunatic, if attended by a proper person, will be permitted to reside abroad, out of the jurisdiction.

(2) The invariable principle & practice of this ct. is, that when once a jury had pronounced a person to be insane, the clearest possible case must be made out of recovery before the ct. can interfere to set aside the commission. The proper state of things, that the person should be conscious of his previous delusions, & that they left him; & not still to adhere to them as if they were true (LORD COTTENHAM, C.)—Re DYCE SOMBRE (1844), 3 L. The relation of attorney & client on a special retainer for a specific purpose, or business not necessarily involving or importing a retainer to apply for a writ of habeas corpus, does not give an authority to the attorney to make such an application on behalf of his client. In the case of an alleged lunatic, his retainer of an attorney to prosecute a petition of lunacy does not give such an authority, even although the attorney be denied access to him, & if, under such circumstances the application be made by the attorney, without any affidavit from the client, & without any affidavit showing that he expressly authorised the application, or is detained against his will, & without any explanation of the absence of such express authority or affidavit on his part beyond the mere fact of his detention, & of the exclusion of his attorney, the rule will be discharged with costs.

Special leave to appeal from certain orders of ct. refused, petitioner's object being to obtain a jury's decision as to the lunacy.

The ct. may come to a conclusion, as it has done in this case, that appct. is lawfully detained upon the evidence before it. The ct. is not bound to direct an issue to be tried by a jury. A. In General.

858 Lien on estate.]—BARNESLEY v. POWELL, No. 1646, post.

859. — Special lien—After death of lunatic—As against purchaser with notice of committee's claim.]—A committee of a lunatic has no special lien upon the estate, after the death of the lunatic, for money expended by him on his behalf, & a purchaser having notice of the claim of the committee is no more bound to see to the application of the purchase-money than if he bought with notice of simple contract debts.—JONES v. NOYES & ALLEN (1858), 28 L. J. Ch. 47; 32 L. T. O. S. 102; 4 Jur. N. S. 1033; 7 W. R. 21.

860. Application of savings of management—Payment of interest.]—Brother of lunatic, committee of the estate, had managed it nine years before the commission, during which time there were considerable savings. To pay interest, though alleged, he made no use of it, unless particular circumstances to justify that.—Re CHUMLEY (1790), 1 Ves. 156; 30 E. R. 278, L. C.

861. Who may be appointed—Solicitor under inquisition of lunacy.]—Solr. under a commission of lunacy not to be appointed receiver of the estate of the lunatic.—Ex p. PINCKE (1817), 2 Mer. 452; 35 E. R. 1013, L. C.

— Principles governing appointment.] — See Part VII., Sect. 4, sub-sect. 10, C.

862. Duty to keep down interest—Mortgage.]—Docketing the issue without docketing the judgment, & the debt, damages, & costs recovered thereby, is not a sufficient docketing a judgment within 4 & 5 Will. & Mar. c. 20. Therefore, where a committee of a lunatic, against whom judgment had been obtained but not duly docketed, paid over rents to a mtgee. of a date subsequent to the judgment, it was held, that he was not liable as for money had & received to the use of pltf., who claimed as tenant by elegit under the judgment; for it was his first duty as committee to keep down the interest on the mtge.—BRAITHWAITE v. WATTS (1832), 2 Cr. & J. 318; 2 Tyr. 293; 1 L. J. Ex. 97; 149 E. R. 136.

863. Officer of court—Powers.]—Semble: the committee of a lunatic has not power to vary or exchange debts, or alter contracts entered into by the lunatic, they being merely officers of the ct.—Re STOCKS, Ex p. PARKER (1842), 2 Mont. D. & De G. 511; 11 L. J. Bcy. 26; 6 Jur. 541, Ct. of R.

864. Freedom from interference—By person other than court—Complaint by creditor.]—The control of the committee over a lunatic's estate will not generally be interfered with, except in case of improper conduct on the part of the committee, & therefore a petition presented on behalf of a joint-stock co., in which a lunatic was a shareholder, praying for a reference, whether it would be for the benefit of the lunatic that the amount due in respect of his shares by virtue of a call which had been made by the co., should be paid out of his estate, which petition was opposed by the committee, was dismissed with costs.—Re HITCHON (1846), 15 L. 865. Complaint by relation—Against committee—Personal examination of lunatic.]—Re BAGSTER (1847), 9 L. T. O. S. 242, L. C.

866. Answer of committee—Whether binding on estate of lunatic.]—A bill was filed against a lunatic & her committees, A., B., and C. After answer by the committees & replication, & evidence having been taken, but before the hearing, the lunatic died. Administration having been granted to A. & D. & E. the wives of B. & C., the suit was revived against A., B., & C., D., & E. by bill of revivor; & in the answer to the bill of revivor defts. claimed the benefit of the previous answer of the committees. To this answer no replication was filed:—Held: (1) (LORD CRANWORTH, C.) although the answer of the committees might not in general be binding on the estate of a lunatic, yet the representatives, being really the same parties as the committees, & having adopted their answer, must be concluded by it; (2) (LORD ST. LEONARDS) the answer of committees was in general binding on a lunatic's estate, & under the circumstances there was nothing to take the case out of the general rule.—STANTON v. PERCIVAL (1855), 5 H. 969. — Not assignable.]—On a decree for a judicial separation an order was made for payment of £60 a year to the wife as permanent alimony. The husband was afterwards found lunatic by inquisition, & by an order in Lunacy & Chancery the dividends of a sum of stock to which he was entitled in a Chancery suit were ordered to be carried to his account in the lunacy & £60 a year to be paid out of them to his wife in respect of her alimony till further order. The wife assigned the annuity to a purchaser, who presented a petition in Lunacy & in the suit to have the annuity paid to her:—Held: the petition must be refused, on the ground that whether the annuity was considered as alimony, or as an allowance made to the wife by the Ct. in Lunacy, it was not assignable.—Re ROBINSON (1884), 27 Ch. 976. Allowance to brother & sisters—Brother committee of estate—Power to mortgage.]—An order was made that the brother of a lunatic, who was committee of his estate, should be allowed to retain the family mansion & grounds & the heirlooms therein for his own occupation & use, & that of his unmarried sisters, & that £4,000 a year should be allowed him for his expenses in reference thereto. The committee with his sisters occupied the mansion accordingly, & incurred heavy &, as it was alleged, unreasonable expenses about the establishment. The income being insufficient to pay the allowance, it fell into arrear, & the committee mortgaged the arrears. He subsequently was removed from being committee & became bkpt., & a large amount of bills incurred in keeping up the establishment remained unpaid. A surplus having arisen applicable to payment of the arrears, the new committee presented a petition for direction as to its application:—Held: (1) although the allowance was made to the former committee without any obligation to account, & with an intention indirectly to confer a benefit on him & his sisters, still it was an allowance made to a person in a fiduciary position for a particular purpose, & which he had no right to mortgage, & the mtgee. could stand in no better position than the committee himself; (2) the person to whom an allowance of this kind is made has no such right to arrears as will prevent the ct. from dealing with them in such way as it may consider just, &, if the ct. finds that the expenses incurred for the purposes for which the allowance was granted remain unpaid, it will stop the arrears, & make provision for payment of such expenses. An inquiry was, therefore, directed as to which of the debts of the committee were properly incurred in keeping up the establishment at the mansion.—Re WELD (1882), 20 Ch. D. 451; 51 L. J. From then until her death in 1922 the Master in Lunacy from time to time directed the receiver to make allowances out of her surplus income to various members of the family of testatrix including sons' wives & grandchildren with provisions for such allowances to be treated as advancements & to be brought into hotchpot against the respective shares, if any, under the will of testatrix of the recipients or of their husbands or issue. The directions were not made in the presence of the parties who were to be accountable. Some of such parties predeceased testatrix, others took only life interests, & others again were infants:—Held: the directions that the allowances should be treated as advancements & brought into hotchpot were only binding so far as they could affect the consciences of the recipients, & the ct. in administering testatrix's estate had a discretion not to enforce them, & would not do so, as by reason of the terms of testatrix's will, & the events which had happened the directions would not do equity.—Re MERRAIL, GREENER v. MERRAIL, [1924] 1 Ch. 45; 93 L. J. Ch. 162; 130 L. T. 312; 68 Sol. Jo. 209.

(b) Collateral Relations.

978. Principle on which court acts—Presumed intention of lunatic.]—Practice of making an allowance to the immediate relations of a lunatic, other than those whom the lunatic would be bound to provide for by law, extended to the case of brothers & sisters & their children, & founded not on any supposed interest in the property, which cannot exist during the lunatic's lifetime, but upon the principle that the ct. will act with reference to the lunatic, & for his benefit, as it is probable the lunatic himself would have acted if of sound mind. The amount & proportions of such an allowance are, therefore, entirely in the discretion of the ct.

For a long series of years the ct. has been in the habit, in questions relating to the property of a lunatic, to call in the assistance of those who are nearest in blood, not on account of any actual interest, but because they are most likely to be able to give information to the ct. respecting the situation of the property, & are concerned in its good administration. It has, however, become too much the practice that, instead of such persons confining themselves to the duty of assisting the increased maintenance to the lunatic, in order that the same may be applied for the support of the near relations of the lunatic.—Re CREAGH (1838), 1

h. Allowance to wife & children—Before committee appointed.]—Until a committee of lunatics' person be first appointed, the ct. will not pay out any sum, even for the present maintenance of lunatic's wife & children.—Re B—(1839), 1 L. Eq. R. 181.—IR.

Sect. 2.—Extent of powers of management and administration: Sub-sect. 2, B. (b), C., D., E. & F.]

ct. with their advice & management, there is a constant struggle among them to reduce the amount of the allowance made for the lunatic & thereby enlarge the fund which, it is probable, may one day devolve upon themselves. Nevertheless, the ct., in making the allowance has nothing to consider but the situation of the lunatic himself, always looking to the probability of his recovery, & never regarding the interest of the next of kin. With this view only, in cases where the estate is considerable, & the persons who will probably be entitled to it hereafter are otherwise unprovided for, the ct., looking at what the lunatic himself would do, if he were in a capacity to act, will make some provision out of the estate for those persons (LORD ELDON, C.).—*Re HINDE, Ex p. The misconception as to the overdraft arose from the fact that considerable dividends on funds in ct. belonging to the patient had been overlooked. These were paid to the credit of her account on Jan. 31, 1918, but in the interval the sum of £48 11s. 11d. had been drawn out of the £1,000 & duly applied by the receiver on behalf of the patient. 1034. ———— Payment to colonial master in lunacy—Jurisdiction of court to order.—A lady detained in a lunatic asylum in New South Wales, but not found a lunatic by inquisition, was entitled for life to the income, about £30 a year, of one-third of a testator's residuary estate, & was absolutely entitled to a fund of about £2,000 which had arisen from accumulations of this income. She had for years been maintained by the colonial government at a total expense of £803. By the New South Wales Lunacy Act extensive powers of management of the property of "lunatic patients," i.e. persons detained as lunatics but not found so by inquisition, were given to the Master in Lunacy of New South Wales, & he was enabled to sue for & receive debts due to the patient, but the Act did not vest the patient's property in him. The Master claimed to have the accumulations, which were in England, paid to him, upon which the trustees paid them into ct. under Trustee Relief Act. The Master petitioned to have them paid out to him. The judge ordered payment to him of the £803, & also payment to him of the income of the remainder of the fund so long as the patient should be detained as an insane patient in New South Wales, & authorised the trustee to pay to him the patient's share of the income of the residuary estate, which the trustee undertook to do. The Master in Lunacy appealed:—Held: (1) although the Master could enforce payment in New South Wales of any sums due to the patient, still as the patient had not been found lunatic, & her property was not vested in the Master, he could not compel payment of any moneys due to the patient from persons in this country, & his claim as of right to have the whole of the accumulations made over to him could not be sustained; (2) a trustee here, or the ct. acting as trustee, was justified in paying over to the Master anything which the competent authority in New South Wales decided to be necessary for the maintenance or benefit of the patient, & the order therefore was right in ordering the payments which had been directed. It was also right in declining to go further, no case having been made to show that more was required for the comfort or benefit of the patient.

(3) The costs of an unsuccessful appeal ought not, except on very rare & special occasions, to be paid out of the fund which is the subject of the appeal, but ought to be borne by the unsuccessful appellant.—Re BARLOW'S WILL (1887), 36 Ch. D. 287; sub nom. Re BARLOW'S WILL TRUSTS, Re BARLOW, BARTON v. SPENCER, 56 L. J. Ch. 795; 57 L. T. 95; 35 W. R. 737; 3 T. L. R. 695, C. A.

K. Moral Obligations.

1035. Debts of honour—Discretion of court to order payment.—The payee of a promissory note given without consideration is not, even in the administration of a solvent estate, in the same position as the payee of a voluntary bond, so as to be entitled to claim against the estate after creditors for value.

A lunatic, while sane, had given a promissory note for £50,000, payable in instalments of £5,000 each, in discharge of what he considered was a moral obligation, & had paid three of such instalments. Upon a claim made against his estate, which was a very large one, after he had been found lunatic, by the holder of the note for the sum of £35,000, being the amount of the unpaid instalments thereon, to which claim the next of kin consented:—Held: (1) although, as the gift was voluntary, the payee of the note was not entitled to claim as a creditor against the lunatic's estate, the ct. in the exercise of its discretion would order the payment to be made thereout, by way of bounty & as in discharge of a debt of honour on the part of the lunatic, which, under the circumstances, it ought to recognise; (2) the application should have been made by the committee & he must be joined as co-petitioner.—Re WHITAKER (1889), 42 Ch. Three of the houses were sold to a church building committee as a site for a church to a new district parish, & the incumbent & the church committee solicited subscriptions for building a church & parochial schools in connection with it. Leave was given to the committee of the estate, who was also heiress-at-law & sole next of kin, to contribute out of the lunatic's income £250 towards building the church, & a like sum for the schools.—Re STRICKLAND (1871), 6 Ch. 1065. ———.]—The judge in lunacy, in dealing with the creditors of the lunatic, always considers what is for the benefit of the lunatic first, so far as the property under the control of the judge is concerned. That is part of the law of the land, & is of so long standing that no judge in lunacy nor this Ct. can alter it. It is our duty as the law stands to look to the interest of the lunatic, but, when we have done that & when we have provided for the lunatic to the extent to which the judge in lunacy thinks right, there is nothing which justifies the Ct. in withholding a creditor from exercising his legal rights & getting paid if he can (LINDLEY, M.R.).—Re SEAGER HUNT, [1900] 2 Ch. 54, n.; 69 L. 1066. ———.]—(1) An action brought in a proper case in the name of a lunatic not so found by his next friend, for the recovery of his property may, in the absence of any lunacy proceeding be maintained without the sanction of the Ct. in Lunacy.

(2) The Ct. in Lunacy, having property of a lunatic under its control, will, as between the lunatic & his creditors, see that proper provision is made out of the property for his maintenance, as the first & paramount consideration; but, subject to that, the Ct. will not withhold a creditor from exercising his legal rights.

(3) A foreign curator or administrateur provisoire of a lunatic, not so found judicially, domiciled & resident abroad, is not necessarily an improper person to sue in this country as next friend for the recovery of the lunatic's personal property here, though, if such next friend is resident abroad, he may be required to give security for costs.

(4) The Ct. in Lunacy has no jurisdiction under Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), s. 134, to order the transfer of securities in this country standing in the name of or vested in a person of unsound mind, not so found, residing out of the jurisdiction of the High Ct., unless his status has been altered by his being judicially declared lunatic according to the law of the place where he is residing.

G., domiciled & resident in Belgium, deposited with an English bank for safe custody, in his name, certificates & scrip for securities of great value. On his death in 1892 his widow, then also domiciled & resident in Belgium, took out administration in England to his estate, & had the securities then standing to his account, & also a sum of cash representing dividends thereon collected by the bank on his account, transferred to a new account opened by her at the bank in her own name.

In 1897 she became lunatic, though she was not so declared judicially, & was placed in a foreign lunatic asylum. D., a Belgian, was appointed by the Belgian Ct. her administrateur provisoire, with power to collect & get in her personal estate, & subsequently D. obtained in England letters of administration de bonis non to G.'s estate, whereupon he brought an action in England against the bank in the names of himself & of Madame G., the writ not stating that she was of unsound mind or that he was suing as her next friend, claiming, in his double capacity of legal personal representative of G. & of administrateur provisoire of Madame G., to have the certificates, scrip & cash standing in her name delivered up to him. Pltf. D. appealed, having first obtained from the Belgian Ct. an order giving him leave to appeal with a view to property sought to be recovered, D. was entitled suing in his own name & as next friend of Madame G., to demand the delivery of her property to him & could give the bank a good discharge; (6) in the absence of lunacy proceedings in this country the Ct. was bound, on general principles of private international law, to recognise the order of the Belgian Ct. giving D. leave to prosecute the appeal & to obtain & give a good discharge for the property.

(7) In Chancery it had long been the settled practice to institute suits in the names of lunatics not so found by inquisition, by a next friend. Applications to stay such suits were also frequently made with success. . . . The alleged lunatic could make such application himself if he asserted his sanity (LINDLEY, M.R.).—*DIDISHEIM v. 1070. — Validity of order—Priority to representative of lunatic.—The effect of a charging order made by a judge in favour of judgment creditor under Judgment Act, 1838 (c. 110), does not depend upon the capacity of judgment debtor to give a valid charge, but upon the validity of the judgment; & sect. 14 of that Act, & the proviso in Judgments Act, 1840 (c. 82), s. 1, must be read as meaning that judgment creditor is to have the same remedies, & the order of the judge the same effect, as if judgment debtor had made a valid & effective charge in favour of the judgment creditor.

Creditors of a lunatic, whose debts were incurred before the lunacy, after the lunacy obtained judgments against him, & also orders charging a fund in ct. in the lunacy with the amounts of their respective judgments, which orders were not in terms enforceable until the death of the lunatic or further order.

Within a week of the probate being granted, an action was commenced to administer deft.'s estate, & an order in lunacy made affecting a sum in ct., deft. having been of unsound mind. On the day following this order a charging order was made that pltf. be at liberty to issue execution against the exor., & that deft.'s interest in the sum in ct. should stand charged with the payment of the sum due. Judgment was then given in the administration action, & this action was transferred to this division:—Held: the order charging deft.'s interest in the sum in ct. was invalid; the order must be construed strictly, & could not be set right on the ground of accidental slip or omission under R. S. C. Ord. 28, r. 11.—STEWART v. RHODES, [1900] 1 Ch. 386; 81 L. T. 807; 48 W. R. 233; 44 Sol. Jo. 195.

(2) The issuing of a summons in lunacy does not withdraw the property of the lunatic from legal process by a creditor until an order is made showing that the Crown has actually taken the property under its protection.

A judgment creditor of a person not found lunatic by inquisition, after receiving notice of the pendency of a summons in lunacy for the appointment of a receiver under Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), s. 116, issued a fi. fa. under which the goods of debtor were seized before any order was made upon the summons. A receiver was afterwards appointed while the goods were in the possession of the sheriff:—Held: the Ct. had no jurisdiction to order a sale of the goods under Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), s. 117, for the maintenance of the alleged lunatic in priority to the claims of

Before A. received payment of the sum of £413 14s., or any part of it, the lunatic died intestate, & it having been ascertained that his personal estate had been exhausted, A. instituted a creditor's suit against the heir-at-law for payment of his debt out of the real estate of the lunatic:—Held: the heir-at-law was bound by the proceedings in lunacy, & A. had established a sufficient prima facie case to entitle him to a reference to the master to inquire & find whether any debt was due to him from the estate of the lunatic.—*WENTWORTH v. 1089. ——— Expenses of solicitor.]—Upon a petition to allow the expenses of an election petition, which the solr. of the lunatic had incurred in defending the lunatic's seat in Parliament, it appeared that before the election a sum of £3,000 had been paid to the same solr., for which he had given an accountable receipt to the lunatic, upon which a reference was made to the Master in Lunacy to take a general account of all transactions between the lunatic & his solr. On that reference the Master had examined the solr. viva voce, who stated that he had paid the money to a person named, at the place of election, & that such person had been in communication with the lunatic during the election, & had expended the whole of the money for the purposes of the election; that a written account of the mode of expending it had been, after the election, shown to the lunatic, who had approved of it, & paid some additional expenditure. When the paper had been shown to the lunatic, it was destroyed. The person who had actually expended the money was not examined, because the money having been confessedly spent in bribing the electors, would have been amenable to the law. The Master reported these circumstances:—Held: this was not a proper taking of the account, but only assigning a reason why it was not taken, & did not comply with the order of reference; & it was referred to the Master to review his report at the cost of petitioner, the solr.—*Re DYCE SOMBRE, Ex p. 1091. Order in lunacy—Administration in Chancery—Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), ss. 116, 117.]—H. was a person not detained as or found lunatic, but found to be incapable of managing his affairs through mental infirmity arising from disease. In 1898 a Master in Lunacy made an order under above Act, sect. 116, that H.'s wife should be authorised to do such things as the Masters should approve of for the purpose of protecting his estate & to exercise the powers of a committee of his estate. In 1902 an order was made in lunacy that H.'s wife should apply certain funds in payment to his creditors of a dividend of 6d. in the pound on their debts. In 1904 an order was made in lunacy that B. & co., who had not previously claimed, should be admitted as creditors in respect of a certain debt, & should participate in future dividends out of H.'s estate, & should rank in priority to other creditors to the extent of 6d. in the pound upon that debt. Before effect could be given to the order of 1904 H. died, & proceedings for the administration of his estate were taken in the Ch. Div. of the High Ct.:—Held: the jurisdiction in lunacy ended at the death of H.; the order of 1904 did not bind the High Ct. when administering his estate; on the death of H. his creditors were entitled to have his assets collected & distributed according to their rights as creditors on the estate of a deceased person irrespective of the fact that up to his death his estate was subject to the jurisdiction in lunacy; & the claim of B. & co. to priority therefore failed.—*Re SEAGER HUNT, SILICATE PAINT CO. & ORR (J. The Master in Lunacy made a certificate finding that the property of a lunatic produced an income of £163, & that his debts amounted to £7,000, including £250 for his past maintenance in an asylum, & £374 for the past maintenance of his wife & children expended by the committee. On a summons taken out under Lunacy Orders, 1883, Ord. 45, on which some of the ordinary creditors appeared & claimed payment of their debts:—Held: (1) the expenses of past maintenance of the lunatic, his wife & children, must be paid in full; (2) capital producing £110 a year should be set aside for the lunatic's future maintenance; (3) the residue should be divided among the ordinary creditors pro rata, who were to have a charge on the reserved capital, with liberty to apply on the lunatic's

On the completion of the partition the lands allotted to the lunatic were conveyed to her simply in tail, without any provision for raising the costs:—Held: they had no jurisdiction to authorise the committee to mortgage the land for the purposes of raising the costs.—Re BLOOMER (1860), 2 De G. The real estate was liable as assets for payment of a considerable amount of simple contract debts of the ancestor which his personal estate was insufficient to pay. The ct. authorised the committee to concur with the other co-heiress in a mtge. of the entirety to raise the amount of the debts, the mtge. being so framed that the lunatic's moiety was only liable for one moiety of the mtge. debt & interest, & could not be made liable for any default of the other co-heiress in payment of the other moiety of the principal & interest, but the ct. declined to authorise the committee to enter into any covenant on behalf of the lunatic.—Re FOX (1886), 33 Ch. Execution by sheriff—Purchase by other partner at undervalue—Sale set aside.]—During the temporary unsoundness of mind of pltf., who was a partner with deft., the sheriff levied execution against his "chattel interest" in the partnership upon three judgments which had been obtained against him. At a sale by auction by the sheriff, deft. himself bought the interest for a sum very much below its actual value, & an assignment of the interest was executed by the sheriff to deft. The purchase-money was paid to the sheriff by a cheque drawn by deft. on the partnership banking account, & the amount was debited to pltf. in the partnership books. Pltf. on recovering his health brought an action to set aside the sale on the ground of undervalue & undue advantage, for a declaration that the partnership was still subsisting, for a dissolution, & for the usual accounts:—Held: (1) the purchase was void & must be set aside; (2) under the circumstances of the present case there was no dissolution of the partnership by the seizure & sale.—*HELMORE v. The surviving partner was of unsound mind, but notice of his intention to purchase was given on his behalf by his solr. within three months from the death. An order was subsequently made under the Lunacy Act authorising a notice being given on his behalf & a second notice was given accordingly, but after the three months had expired:—Held: as the option to purchase had not been exercised within the time limited there was no contract which could be confirmed by the second notice & consequently, the committee of the surviving partner was not entitled to the benefit of the provision in the arts.—DIBBINS v. #### SUB-SECT. 9.—POSITION OF COMMITTEE.

1143. Partners not compelled to carry on partnership with committee.]—(1) The ct. will not compel a person to carry on a partnership with the committees of a lunatic, or to have the share of a lunatic partner ascertained by an inquiry what a stranger would give for it.

(2) Three persons mutually agreed to carry on & work together certain mineral property; the deed of partnership providing that each party should be at liberty to sell his share after giving notice to the others, who were to have a right of pre-emption. One of the partners became a lunatic, & committees of his estate were appointed. On a bill filed by pltf., who had purchased the shares of the other two partners, against the committees of the lunatic, praying a dissolution of the partnership & the usual accounts:—Held: the partnership must be dissolved, & the property offered for sale as a going concern by some person to be appointed other than the parties.

(3) Notice to the lunatic partner before his lunacy of the intention of another partner to sell his share:—Held: to bind the committees afterwards appointed, & they had no right of pre-emption under the deed.—ROWLANDS v. EVANS

The joint grant being vacated by the death, the survivor of the joint committees applied to be appointed sole committee, & asked that the order of 1885 might be varied & the dividends be ordered to be paid to him alone. The Master appointed him sole committee, but declined to make any order as to the dividends. The sole committee then presented a petition entitled in the matter of the lunacy & also in the matter of Land Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 18), & Board of Works, praying that the dividends both past & future might be paid to him, & served the Board of Works. At the hearing the Board contended that they were not liable for the cost of successive orders for the payment of dividends unless there had been a change in the beneficial interest. The ct. ordered the past & future dividends to be carried to the credit of the matter paid petitioner, intimated that any future order appointing a new committee might direct payment to him of the dividends, & that as such dividends would be standing to the credit of the lunacy, the Board need not be served on the application, & ordered the Board to pay the costs of the present petition.—Re RYDER (1887), 37 Ch. 1173. — General order giving power to execute deeds—Whether separate consent for each lease necessary.]—(1) A private Act, passed for managing the partnership business of a lunatic, authorised the Lord Chancellor “from time to time” to make orders with respect to the business, & (inter alia) with respect to the disposal of any real or personal estate belonging to the business. An order was made empowering the committees, with the approbation of the Master, to execute all such deeds as should be required for the management of the business:—Held: it was not necessary that a separate order should be made for each deed, & a lease executed under the general order was valid.

(2) A deed to which a lunatic is expressed to be a party by his committees is sufficiently executed by the committees affixing seals & signing their own names.

By a deed expressed to be made between B., a lunatic, so found by inquisition, by D. & F., the committees of his estate, & X. & Z., the said B., X., & Z. carrying on business in co-partnership & thereafter called the lessors, of the one part, & H. of the other part, the lessors, the said B. acting by the said D. & F. as such committees, demised to H. certain premises. The deed concluded, “In witness whereof the parties to these presents have hereunto set their hands & seals,” etc. D. signed his name opposite one seal & F. opposite another, & the attestation clause was “Signed, sealed, & delivered by the within-named D. & F. in the presence of,” etc.:—Held: the deed was well executed on behalf of B.—*LAWRIE v. 1177. Arrangement for lease—Without sanction of court—Adoption of arrangement by court.]—A gentleman entered into an arrangement by letter with the land agent who acted for the committee of a lunatic's estate, to take a lease of part of the estate for a term of three years. No formal agreement was entered into, nor was the sanction of the Master in Lunacy applied for, but the tenant was let into possession, & expended a considerable sum in repairs & improvements. After he had been nearly eighteen months in possession, the committee gave him six months' notice to quit, upon which he applied by petition to have the terms of his arrangement with the agent carried into effect:—Held: the ct. had jurisdiction to make an order giving effect to that arrangement.—Re WYNNE (1872), 7 Ch. Effect of authorisation—Liability of person authorised for trade contracts.]—A committee appointed by the ct. to carry on the business of a lunatic cannot be made personally liable on contracts entered into in the course of trading, unless it can be shown that the goods were supplied on his credit. He is therefore in a different position as regards personal liability to that of a manager & receiver appointed by the ct., being in fact merely a bailiff or trustee of the business. In the event of the assets of the business not being for a time available to pay the creditors the committee cannot be compelled to pay them out of his own pocket repaying himself at a later time from the funds of the business when the assets come to hand.—*ISAACS v. 1188. ——— Agency.]—By an order made by a Master in Lunacy under Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), ss. 116, 120, deft. was authorised to exercise the powers of a committee of the estate of a lunatic not so found by inquisition as in the case of a person of unsound mind so found by inquisition, & to carry on his business, which had been carried on by the lunatic in the name of a firm of which he was the sole partner. While carrying on the business under the order, deft. ordered goods in the name of the firm, & the goods were supplied by plts. for the purposes of the business. Plts. having sued deft. personally for the price of the goods supplied by them:—Held: the effect of the order made under Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), was to make deft. the agent of the lunatic for the purpose of carrying on his business, & in the absence of evidence that deft. intended to pledge his personal credit, the mere fact that he carried on the business under the order did not make him personally liable to plts. for the goods supplied by them.—PLUMPTON v. BURKINSHAW, [1908] 2 K. The curator ad bona of the lunatic, duly appointed according to the law of the country in which the lunatic resided, & who according to that law had the fullest powers & control over the lunatic's real & personal estate, petitioned for the transfer of the fund to him:—Held: the fund, as representative of real estate sold under special legislation, was subject to the laws of this country relative to real estate, & must remain in ct. as a fund which might devolve upon the heir-at-law of the lunatic, & the curator ad bona was only entitled to receipt of the dividends.—*GRIMWOOD v. Under the will of her father she was absolutely entitled to a trust fund. An originating summons was taken out in her name as pltf. by a next friend, the trustees being defts., asking for directions as to the maintenance of pltf. out of the income, & as to the application of the residue of the income & of so much, if any, of the capital as the ct. should think fit for the comfort & benefit of pltf. The fund was invested partly in India stock & partly on mtge.

Sect. 8.—Stock: Sub-sect. 1, D., E., F. & G.]

On the hearing of the summons the judge declined to give any directions as to the maintenance of pltf., being of opinion that, having regard to Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), s. 116, that matter would be more properly dealt with in the Lunacy jurisdiction. Upon the undertaking of the trustees to transfer the stock into ct. & to deposit in ct. the mtge. deed & other deeds in their hands relating to the mtged. property, the Ct. of Appeal ordered that the interest on the stock & on the mtge. should, during pltf.'s life or until further order, be paid to pltf.'s sister, one of the trustees, she undertaking to apply the same for the maintenance, comfort, & benefit of pltf. The ct. had made an order appointing new trustees, & vested in them the right to call for a transfer of the trust stock & to receive the arrears of dividends. It was found that an order in this form could not be acted on as to the arrears of dividend, since the bank could not pay arrears on part of a sum. The ct. therefore varied the order so as to enable the new trustees to receive the past dividends on the whole sum of stock & to retain for the purposes of the trust that portion which had accrued due in respect of the trust stock.—Re STEWART (1860), 2 De G. Ct. declined to order a moiety of the stock to be transferred for payment of lunatics' debts, costs of commission, etc.—Re LYNN (1838), 2 Jur. 200.

1280. Payment of costs—Of inquiry into mental condition.]—An inquiry instituted on the petition of a husband as to the state of his wife's mind resulted in a finding that she was of sound mind & capable of managing herself & her affairs. The Lords Justices sitting as Judges in Lunacy made, on the application of petitioner, an order that two-thirds of his costs of the inquiry & also his costs of the application should be paid by the wife. Subsequently an order was made by a judge charging the costs on certain consols belonging to the wife & standing in her name, & directing the transfer by her of a sufficient amount to meet such costs; & as she neglected to make the transfer, a further order was made by the judge that the official solr. should execute the necessary transfer. On appeal against these orders:—Held: (1) an appeal would lie in such a case to the Ct. of Appeal, & no leave to appeal was necessary; (2) the Lords Justices had authority under Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), s. 109, to direct that the costs should be paid out of the wife's estate, including those incurred after the finding that she was of sound mind; (3) the procedure under R. S. C., Ord. 46, r. 1, which deals with charging orders, was not applicable to such an order, & the subsequent orders to enforce the charge were proper to carry it into effect.

(4) An urgency order is what its very name indicates. The safeguards for personal freedom, which the Legislature had provided were obviously considered inappropriate to cases where instant intervention was required, either for the sake of the alleged lunatic, or for the sake of the public; & accordingly exceptional provisions were made for such a contingency (LORD HALSBURY).

(5) I cannot concur in considering the means of the respective parties as a topic that ought to enter into the question [of costs], though as to the latter part of the fifth head of the learned judges' analysis I entirely concur. It is quite true that either party may by his conduct render an inquiry much more expensive than it might otherwise have been, & undoubtedly had there in this case been a cross-appeal that consideration might have been a very serious one indeed (LORD HALSBURY).—Re CATHCART, [1893] 1 Ch. 466, C. The ct. has, under that sect. & its general jurisdiction in Lunacy over the personal property of a lunatic, a discretion as to making or refusing the order, & therefore, as a condition for obtaining the order, the curator must first satisfy the ct. by evidence that the property is required for the maintenance or other purposes of the lunatic.—Re KNIGHT, [1898] 1 Ch. 257; 67 L. The only ground for the petition stated in the affidavits annexed was that T. was of unsound mind. By a memorandum indorsed on the petition the Scottish ct. appointed the curator, but the order contained no express declaration that T. was of unsound mind. It was shown that curators were appointed in Scotland, not only in cases of unsoundness of mind, but also when persons were by illness or absence abroad, incapable of managing their affairs:—Held: the memorandum indorsed on the petition amounted to a declaration, within above sect. that T. was of Vesting of personal estate in person appointed to manage—Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), s. 134—Meaning of vesting.]—Under above sect. the Ct. in Lunacy has jurisdiction to order funds in this country standing in the name of a person resident abroad, & found lunatic by a foreign or colonial ct., to be transferred to the committee, curator or other person duly appointed by that ct. to manage the lunatic's personal estate, although such personal estate is not actually "vested" in such committee, curator or other person according to the law of this country. "Vested" in above sect. includes the right to obtain & deal with, without being actual owner of, the lunatic's personal estate.

A lady residing in the colony of Victoria, was declared lunatic by the Supreme Ct. of the colony sitting in Lunacy, & the Master in Lunacy in the colony was appointed to manage her property which consisted of English stocks standing in her name:—Held: under above sect. the ct. in Lunacy in this country had jurisdiction to order a transfer of the stocks to the Master in Lunacy in Victoria, & the ct. being satisfied that all the stocks were required for the maintenance & support of the lunatic, made the order accordingly, prefaced with a statement that the personal estate of the lunatic was "vested" in the Master within that sect.—Re BROWN, [1895] 2 Ch. 666; 64 L. 1294. Consols—Necessity for appointment of officer of Bank of England to make transfer.]—A person of unsound mind not so found being sole trustee of a sum of consols, the Judge in Lunacy, upon the application of B., made an order under the Acts of 1890 & 1891, that the right to call for a transfer of, & to transfer into his own name the consols standing in the name of the lunatic, & to receive the dividends thereon, should vest in B., & that he should transfer the consols into his own name to be held by him upon the trusts applicable thereto. The Bank of England refused to act upon an order in this form upon the ground that under Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), s. 137, some proper officer of the Bank should have been appointed to make the transfer:—Held: the order made by the Judge in Lunacy was right, & the Bank must act upon it, & must allow the consols to be transferred accordingly.—*Re C. 1295. Stock in books of Bank of England—Necessity for schedule—Detailing stocks to be dealt with.]—By an order made under Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), s. 116, by the Master in Lunacy, a receiver was authorised, in the name & on behalf of a lady who had been found through mental infirmity to be incapable of managing her affairs, "to receive & give a discharge for all dividends, interest, & income & all arrears thereof respectively to which she is or may become entitled"; & it was ordered that the securities & bonds belonging to her then deposited with her bankers were not to be dealt with until further order. Among the securities belonging to the lady were certain stocks registered in her name in the books of the Bank of England; but the officials of the Bank declined to act upon the order until it had been amended by the insertion in the body thereof of particulars of the stocks in the bank books which were sought to be dealt with thereby:—Held: (1) although there was jurisdiction to do so, the practice was not to appoint a receiver of the dividends only of stocks standing in the books of the Bank of England, but to order the stocks to be transferred into ct. in the name of the Paymaster-General, & then to let the receiver obtain the dividends from him: (2) the officials of the Bank of England were perfectly justified in declining to act upon so vague & general a direction as was contained in the order; & the practice had always been to have a schedule to an order of this nature detailing the stocks which were sought to be dealt with thereby.—Re AUCHMUTY (1908), 99 L. T. 462, C. A.

A petition was then presented to the Ch. #### B. Transfer of Property to Representatives.

1389. General rule.]—M., a pauper lunatic in an asylum at Bethnal Green, but not found lunatic by inquisition, became entitled to a small fund in ct. An order was made in 1856, on petition under Trustee Relief Act, by M., by his next friend, directing that he should continue at the asylum until further order, & the guardians of the poor of his parish undertaking to maintain him there, that £31 a year should be raised out of the fund & paid to the guardians in repayment of the sums to be expended in his maintenance. In 1859 he was removed to the new asylum for his county by order of the justices, but without any order of the Ct. of Ch. From this time no payments were applied for by the guardians. He remained in the county asylum till his death in 1875. His legal personal representative petitioned for transfer of the funds in ct. to him. The guardians appeared & claimed maintenance for the past time:—Held: (1) the guardians could not claim maintenance under the order, which ceased to be operative on the lunatic's removal to a fresh asylum; (2) any claim for maintenance independently of the order was merely a debt of the lunatic, payable by his personal representative in due course of administration, & the ct. had no jurisdiction in the matter to order payment of it, but the whole fund must go to the personal representative.—Re MARMAN'S TRUSTS (1878), 8 Ch. Therefore, where two rival claimants had filed bills praying for a receiver of the real estates pending the decision of their rights, & then presented petitions in Lunacy for the appointment of a receiver, the ct. refused the application in Lunacy, & also declined to exercise its original jurisdiction in Ch. for that purpose, upon an interlocutory application in the suits. ### SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

1494. Lunatic personally—Ejectment.]—Service of a declaration in ejectment upon a lunatic in an asylum was held to be sufficient.

After several unsuccessful attempts to effect personal service, a declaration in ejectment was left with the tenant's daughter on May 21, the day before the term. A letter from the tenant's attorney, dated May 24, was received on May 25, by the attorneys of the lessor of pltf., stating that the tenant had put the declaration into his hands:—Held: sufficient to raise a presumption that the declaration reached the tenant on May 21 & the service was sufficient.—*DOE d. Defts. by their defence stated that they did not admit that, either at the time when the deeds & documents came into their possession or at any time since, pltf. was, or that she now was, a person of unsound mind; that they held the deeds & documents for her; & that she alleged that she was during the period in question, & still was of full mental capacity & soundness of mind. On an application by pltf. to strike out so much of the defence as did not admit the unsoundness of mind of pltf. & for judgment on the admissions in the defence:—Held: defts. by raising the issue as to the unsoundness of mind of pltf. were in effect denying the authority of pltf.'s solrs. to bring the action, & that was not an issue which it was competent to them to raise at the trial; so much of the defence as did not admit the unsoundness of mind of pltf. must be treated as irrelevant, & pltf. was entitled to an order for delivery up of the deeds & documents on the admissions in the defence.—*RICHMOND v. SECT. 1.—DISCRETION OF COURT.

See Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), s. 109.

1544. Discretion will not be fettered by rules.]—A petition presented by a husband for an inquiry into the mental condition of his wife resulted in a finding that she was of sound mind & capable of managing herself & her affairs. Petitioner applied that the ct. should, in the discretion given to it by Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), s. 109, direct his costs to be paid by resp. The costs were very large, & petitioner would have been almost ruined if obliged to pay his own costs. Resp. had considerable property. The ct. was of opinion that there were ample grounds for instituting an inquiry, & that petitioner had acted bonâ fide in the interests of his wife, but his conduct had been such as to excite great hostility in her, thereby probably causing extra expense:—Held: petitioner's costs must be taxed as between party & party, & two-thirds of the taxed amount must be paid out of a sum of £10,000, part of his wife's estate, in which he claimed an interest, but which claim he waived so far as was necessary for the payment of the costs.

The matter [of costs] being thus left to the discretion of the ct., I do not think it right to attempt to lay down any principles or rules by which the free exercise of its discretion may be fettered. I will content myself with enumerating & making a few observations on those matters which occur to me as essential for consideration. The points to be considered are: (a) the reasons for believing in the insanity of the alleged lunatic; (b) the reasons for believing him to be not only insane, but also incapable of managing himself or his affairs; (c) the reasons for instituting any proceedings, assuming him to be insane & incapable of managing himself or his affairs; (d) the relation in which petitioner stands to the alleged lunatic, & the objects & conduct of petitioner. These matters must always be important; but, in addition to them, there may be others, & if there are, they also must be taken into account by the ct. before coming to a conclusion as to what ought to be done (LINDLEY, L.J.).—Re CATHCART, [1892] 1 Ch. 549; 61 L. 1579. Inquiry instigated by petitioner's solicitor—No order made.]—A petition was presented for an inquiry as to the state of mind of S. The medical visitor, by direction of the ct., saw her, & he made a report showing that the case was one for inquiry. She was, however, when the inquiry took place, found by a jury to be of sound mind. The ct. was satisfied, on the evidence before it, that petitioner had not presented the petition of his own accord, but that the proceedings originated with petitioner's solr., who induced petitioner to lend his name, & after the inquiry gave him an undertaking to indemnify him against costs:—Held: no costs ought to be given to petitioner, but, as the case was one calling for inquiry, he ought not to be ordered to pay costs.—Re E. S—(1876), 4 Ch. D. 301; 35 L. T. 828; sub nom. Re S., 46 L. J. Ch. 233; 25 W. R. 133, L. JJ.

1583. Agreement to pay all costs—On consideration of conveyance of estates that would descend from lunatic—Whether void.]—By indenture made in 1827 between R. & his eldest son P., reciting that A. of C. was seised of large real estates, was never married, & was then in a state of mental & bodily imbecility; that in the event of his dying so seised, intestate & without issue, R. as his heir at law would be entitled to the reversion of his estates in fee; that R. was desirous of having a commission of lunacy sued out for the protection of A. & his property & of his own reversion, & that P., at R.'s request, agreed to sue out & prosecute such commission & take other necessary law proceedings at his own expense, in R.'s name; R., in consideration of the agreement & of love & affection for P., covenanted to convey all the estates that would descend to him on the decease of A. to the use of himself for life, remainder to the uses expressed respecting the estate of B. in P.'s marriage settlement, being for the benefit of P. & the heirs male of the marriage. The commission was accordingly issued; A. was declared a lunatic, & P. was reimbursed for his expenses out of his estate. R. was then sixty-three years of age; the lunatic was forty; P. was younger. The lunatic died in 1829, & R. entered into possession of his real estates, & conveyed them to his second son, H., for valuable consideration. On a bill filed by P. to set aside that conveyance & for specific performance of the covenant, R., by his answer, said he entered into it without legal advice, & by fraud, imposition & misrepresentation on the part of P. It was proved in evidence that both parties employed the solr. who prepared the indenture under advice of counsel for each; that R. read it & heard it read before executing it, & afterwards as well as before expressed his desire that the estate of C. should be united to the estate of B. & go to his eldest son:—Held: R. tendered a false defence, & all the matters put in issue by his answer were disproved by the evidence.

The thing to be looked to in matters of lunacy is the protection of the person & property of the lunatic, & for that purpose the encouragement to parties to interfere & to bring the facts before the ct. It is obvious that this object would in many cases be impeded, rather than promoted, by holding that all agreements relative to the costs of the proceedings, or the ultimate division of the property, were void (LORD COTTENHAM, C.).—*PERSSE v. Where, therefore, a solr., having notice that his claim would be opposed, failed to satisfy the ct. of his retainer, & the ct. entertained some doubt of the bona fides with which he had acted, his petition was dismissed with costs, leave to amend being refused. The solrs. now presented a petition praying an order for taxation with a view to proceedings to make the real estate liable, & the ct. made the order, but without prejudice to any question whether petitioners had any claim on the lunatic's estate.—Re HART (1852), 21 L. [1890] W. N. 207, L. JJ.

1605. Duplicate evidence.]—Two sisters alleged to be persons of unsound mind not so found by inquisition were detained in an asylum. Each was entitled to a one-third share in a small property; one of them had also a mtge. of £392, & the other a mtge. of £58. Their sister applied for an order that she should be appointed receiver of their estates & that she might be at liberty to apply their income to their maintenance. For this purpose she took out two summonses in similar terms founded on evidence which had been previously filed. This evidence consisted of affidavits practically in duplicate by appct. stating the family history & property of the lunatics; duplicate copies of an affidavit of the fitness of appct. to be receiver; & affidavits by the medical attendant, which differed considerably. Separate undertakings by appct. to account were also filed. The master objected to the duplicate evidence & made one order appointing appct. receiver on both summonses; allowing the whole income to be applied for maintenance; & directing that only such costs should be allowed as would have been incurred, if one set of affidavits & one undertaking had been filed in the two matters.

The receiver appealed & asked that separate orders might be made:—Held: the master's order was right. It was necessary to have two summonses in the first instance, but not to have duplicate evidence.—Re MORRIS, [1912] 1 Ch. 730; 81 L. J. Ch. 451; 106 L. T. 553, L. JJ.

1606. Employment of solicitor—In connection with lunatic's real estate—All income necessary for maintenance—Liability of receiver.]—Solrs. appointed by the quasi-committee of a lunatic not so found by inquisition did work in respect of the lunatic's real estate, the costs of which were not paid to them inasmuch as all the lunatic's income was applied for her benefit & there were no funds available. Some of these costs were, as against the quasi-committee, barred by lapse of time:—Held: the quasi-committee was the statutory agent of the lunatic & was not personally liable to the solrs. appointed by him to act for the lunatic; the cost of the solrs. were payable out of the estate of the lunatic; the relation of the solr. & client did not exist between the solrs. & the quasi-committee, therefore the question of Stat. Limitations could not be raised by him; & if it might be raised by the judge, that in the present case it ought not to be pleaded.—Re E. G., [1914] 1 Ch. 927; 83 L. J. Ch. 586; 111 L. He & his committee presented a petition entitled in the suit, & also in the lunacy, praying that the lunatic might defend by his guardian, & that the committee might be appointed such guardian. The committee prayed that, as such, he might be at liberty to prosecute the claim of the lunatic as next of kin, & that all such costs as should be properly incurred, & as should not be paid out of the estate to be administered in the suit might be raised & paid out of the lunatic's estate. The ct. gave liberty to the committee to defend the suit, but refused to appoint a guardian as being unnecessary, or to make any prospective order as to costs, & directed the title in the cause to be struck out.

The ct. will not make any order for the payment of extra costs out of the estate of a lunatic, until such costs have been incurred.—Re MANSON (1852), 21 L. J. Ch. 249; 18 L. T. O. S. 266, L. JJ.

SUB-SECT. 5.—LIABILITY OF SOLICITORS ACTING FOR PERSON OF UNSOUND MIND.

1663. Ex parte order obtained—Knowledge of pending petition in lunacy—Whether professional misconduct.]—(1) A solr. is not prevented from taking legal proceedings on behalf of his client by the mere fact that to his knowledge a petition in lunacy for an inquiry into the state of mind of the client is pending, provided that he believes the client to be sane. The ct. will, however, in a proper case, when informed of the petition, stay the proceedings until the inquiry is completed.

(2) A solr. who was aware that a petition in lunacy against his client was pending obtained on her behalf an order ex p. without disclosing the fact. He believed her to be sane, but she was subsequently found to be of unsound mind. Upon the order being discharged:—Held: he had not been guilty of such professional misconduct as to make him liable for the costs.—Re ARMSTRONG (GEORGE) & SONS, [1896] 1 Ch. 536; 65 L. J. 1664. Conduct of defence—Ignorance of insanity.]—Where an authority given to an agent has without his knowledge been determined by the death or lunacy of the principal, & subsequently, the agent has, in the belief that he was acting in pursuance thereof, made a contract or transacted some business with another person, representing that, in so doing, he was acting on behalf of the principal, the agent is liable as having impliedly warranted the existence of the authority which he assumed to exercise, to that other person in respect of damage occasioned to him by reason of the non-existence of that authority.

Solrs. were instructed by a client to conduct his defence to an action which was then threatened & was afterwards commenced against him. Before the commencement of the action the client became, & was certified as being, of unsound mind. In ignorance of his unsoundness of mind, & of his having been so certified, the solrs. entered an appearance for him in the action, & delivered a defence, to which pltf. replied, & other interlocutory proceedings took place in the action. Subsequently, the action not having come to trial, pltf.'s solr. was informed that deft. had been certified as being of unsound mind; & an application was made on behalf of pltf. at chambers for an order that the appearance & all subsequent proceedings in the action should be struck out, & that the solrs. who had assumed to act for deft. should be ordered personally to pay pltf.'s costs of the action up to date, on the ground that they had so acted without authority. The master made an order that the appearance & subsequent proceedings in the action should be struck out, but refused to make an order for payment of the pltf.'s costs by the solrs. personally, which refusal was on appeal affirmed by the judge at chambers:

A son who took no benefit under the settlement desired to have it impeached, & adduced evidence showing that there was reasonable ground for contending that the settlor was of unsound mind when he executed it. The income of the lunatic was amply sufficient for his wants:—Held: no proceedings ought to be directed at the expense of the lunatic's estate, but the excluded son ought to be allowed to file a bill, as next friend of the lunatic, without giving security for costs, to impeach the settlement.—Re GORDON (1875), 10 Ch. App. 192; 44 L. J. Ch. 208; 32 L. T. 348; 23 W. R. 760, L. JJ.

The ct. held that at the time of making the will testator was of sound mind, memory & understanding, & granted probate. But in deciding the question of costs, it held that when testator's general conduct, though it fell short of insanity is such as to raise doubts as to his sanity, & after due inquiry, to afford reasonable grounds for litigating the questions, the costs of all parties ought to be borne out of the estate. Accordingly, it allowed the unsuccessful opponents of the will costs out of the estate.—DAVIES v. GREGORY (1873), L. R. 3 P. & D. 28; 42 L. J. P. & M. 33; 28 L. T. 239; 37 J. P. 279; 21 W. R. 462.

1671. Power to make agreements—For plans for asylums—Plans not ultimately approved.]—A declaration against the clerk to a committee of visitors of a county lunatic asylum, under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 126, ss. 16, 17, stated, that the committee under the statute agreed with pltf., in consideration that he would render his services as an architect in examining the site of a proposed lunatic asylum, & preparing the requisite probationary drawings for the committee, & all other drawings required to be submitted to the Comrs. in Lunacy & the Secretary of State, that a certain sum should be paid to him, & averred that he did prepare requisite probationary drawings for the approval of the committee, & was ready to prepare all other drawings to be submitted to the Comrs. & Secretary of State, but that the committee wrongfully discharged him & prevented him from completing the agreement. Second plea, that pltf. did not prepare the requisite probationary drawings. Fifth plea, that a reasonable time had elapsed for pltf. to prepare the requisite probationary drawings for the approval of the committee, & that pltf. prepared divers drawings which were not approved of by the committee, but rejected by them, & that, save as aforesaid, pltf. did not prepare any probationary drawings for the approval of the committee, wherefore, etc.:—Held: 'probationary' drawings meant drawings to be approved of by the committee, the Comrs., & the Secretary of State; even if the visitors could contract for the payment for plans not approved of, yet there was a contract here which would make them liable for dismissing pltf.; & pltf. could not recover on the indebitatus counts.

Qu.: whether the visitors had power to contract for the payment for plans not ultimately approved of; whether mandamus to the treasurer of the county would be the proper remedy in such a

1681. Agreement to unite—Boroughs paying annual rent—Transference of liability to county council—Subject to existing contracts.]—By an agreement made in 1844 between the county of S. & the borough of W. it was agreed that the county & borough should unite for the purpose of providing a county lunatic asylum for paupers, to be erected at their joint expense in certain specified proportions, & an asylum was erected accordingly. By an agreement in 1846, the county of M. joined this union, & agreed to pay a specified sum in respect of the expenses already incurred & to be incurred in the erection of the asylum, & it was also agreed that these three bodies should contribute to the future maintenance of the asylum in certain shares. These three bodies thus became the joint owners of the asylum. By subsequent agreements, made in 1851, 1866, & 1869 respectively, the boroughs of O., B., & L. in the county of Salop were admitted to & joined this union, & became united with the counties of S. & M. & the borough of W., for the purpose of using the joint asylum for their lunatics, each having a representative on the board of visitors. These agreements provided that these three boroughs should pay an annual rent to the treasurer of the asylum for the privilege of using the asylum, & they also provided that in case of a dissolution of the union these boroughs should not be entitled to any right, claim, or interest in the asylum, & in consideration thereof should not be liable, during the continuance of the union, to contribute towards the expenses of the asylum. Each of the three boroughs was, at the date when Local Government Act 1888 (c. 41), came into operation, a quarter sessions borough with a population of less than ten thousand:—Held: the liability of the boroughs of O., B., & L., under the above agreements, to provide for the maintenance, management of, & other dealings with the joint asylum, was not extinguished, but was transferred under Local Government Act, 1888 (c. 41), adjudge the legal place of settlement of such pauper, have no power to make a retrospective order upon the parish for the payment of maintenance during the time of his confinement in the asylum, antecedent to their adjudication:—the charges so incurred must be borne by the county.

An order of justices made under the 5 Geo. 4, c. 71, stated, "that the justices, after due examination had on oath, having adjudged the legal place of settlement of a pauper lunatic, confined in a lunatic asylum, to be in M., did thereby require the churchwardens & overseers of M. to pay to the treasurer of the lunatic asylum £10 16s. due for twenty-four weeks' maintenance, etc., being at the rate of 9s. per week, & to pay the same weekly sum during so long a time as the pauper should remain therein." The parish of M. appealed against this order, & in their notice of appeal described it as an order of settlement & maintenance:—Held: as the parish of M. had treated this as an order of settlement, it must be presumed that there was no other order, & therefore, the words, "having adjudged," must be understood as words of present adjudication, & the order was good in this respect; so much of the order as was retrospective was bad, but it was good for the residue.—*R. v. Upon an appeal, against an order of adjudication & maintenance, under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 97, upon the parish in which her father was settled:—Held: the pauper lunatic being unemancipated, continued part of her mother's family, & therefore, her mother having ceased to be irremovable, she also ceased to be irremovable, & the order was rightly made. Qu.: whether an unemancipated child can acquire a status of irremovability in its own right.—*R. v. M. was a parish of the union, & the guardian for M. at the board of guardians appears to have consented that M. should be charged with the maintenance of the pauper by reason of the settlement being supposed by him to be in that parish. After being twelve months in the workhouse, the pauper was removed by the relieving officer of the union under an order of a justice who was chairman of the board of guardians of the union, & taken to an asylum, & he was afterwards removed to D. asylum, & on both occasions he was described to be of A. For several years M. was charged with & paid the maintenance of the asylum as if he had been settled therein:—Held: the pauper lunatic had acquired a status of irremovability in A., & the expense of his maintenance was chargeable out of the funds of the union, & M. was not liable thereto, nor estopped from showing its nonliability by reason of the payment of the expenses for several years.—*R. v. 1713. ———.]—Poor Law Amendment Act, 1834 (c. 76), s. 56, is a legislative exposition of what relief to children shall be relief to the parents so as to make the latter removable; & therefore relief to a child above the age of sixteen, although unemancipated & residing with the parent is not relief to the parent.

A female above the age of sixteen, but unemancipated & living with her widowed mother in the parish of P., became insane & was removed as a pauper lunatic to an asylum; & afterwards an order for her maintenance was made on the parish of her settlement. At the time of the removal the mother had resided more than five years in P., but during that residence the child, though generally residing with her mother, had, when above the age of sixteen, from time to time been confined in an asylum under an order of a justice as a pauper lunatic at the charge of the parish of P., such confinement being necessary because the mother could not keep her under proper care & control. The time of the several confinements, if deducted from the period of the mother's residence, reduced it below five years:—Held: the child being above sixteen, her confinement in the asylum at the charge of the parish was not "relief" to the mother within Poor Removal Act, 1846 (c. 66), s. 1, & the time of her confinement in the asylum, therefore, ought not to be deducted from the mother's residence; & consequently the mother & child were both irremovable, & the order on the parish of settlement bad. Qu.: whether, if the child had been under sixteen, her maintenance in the asylum at the charge of the parish would have been "relief" to the mother.—*R. v. 1714. ——— Domestic servant.]—M., a single woman, aged twenty-eight, having resided in the R. Union as a domestic servant more than a year, was suddenly seized with mania on Sept. 16; the next day her mother fetched her away from her master's house, he paying the wages up to that day, & took her to her parents' residence in the S. Union. She remained with her parents one night, & the next day was taken to the S. Union house, & on Sept. 26 she was sent to the county lunatic asylum as a pauper lunatic, where she still remained, having continued insane from her first seizure. M.'s settlement was in the W. Union:—Held: the order for her maintenance, under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 97, ss. 97, 102, ought to be on the R. Union & not on the W. Union, for that the lunatic having acquired a status of irremovability by a year's residence in R., her mere bodily removal while she was unable to exercise any will of her own was no break of the residence.—*R. v. Pauper was settled in the parish of R., & was removed from the parish of L., where she had resided more than five years, to a lunatic asylum in the parish of D., under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 126, ss. 58, 62. Two justices subsequently made orders of settlement & maintenance on the parish of R., under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 126, ss. 38, 62:—Held: such orders were not prohibited by Poor Removal Act, 1846 (s. 66), s. 1.—*R. v. 1729. By whom made—Justices inquiring into settlement.]—An order of two justices for the repayment of the costs of removal & maintenance of an insane pauper, under 9 Geo. 4, c. 40, s. 42, can only be made by those justices who have made inquiry into & ascertained the last legal settlement of such pauper. Where therefore an order recited that A., a lunatic, was removed to the lunatic asylum under an order of two justices, whose legal settlement, after due inquiry made & satisfactory evidence obtained, is at D., & adjudicated her settlement to be at D., & ordered the costs of maintenance, etc., to be repaid:—Held: (1) the order was bad, as the ct. could not intend that the justices who made the order had themselves taken the evidence & inquired into the place of settlement. (2) where a parish, in which the pauper was not settled, had maintained & removed the pauper to the lunatic asylum, an order of repayment to this parish could not be made under 9 Geo. 4, c. 40, s. 42, the payment having been made in its own wrong, & the act providing only for repayment to the county treasurer.—*R. v. 1731. — — —.]—On appeal against an order for maintenance of a lunatic pauper, under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 126, s. 62, by a parish adjudged to be the last place of legal settlement, the grounds of appeal stated a settlement by reason of the pauper's mother being entitled to & in possession of a freehold tenement situate in resp. parish, & having resided there for forty days up to & at the time of the order, the pauper being unemancipated. It was not stated whether the estate was purchased, or how acquired:—Held: (1) upon grounds so generally stated, applts. could not prove that the mother had purchased a freehold estate in the parish, & resided thereon. (2) On such an appeal, it is not a good objection to the order, that the lunatic pauper was not brought before the justice by warrant from him after notice from the relieving officer, according to 8 & 9 Vict. c. 126, s. 48, the enactments in that respect being directory only, & the justice having jurisdiction, in whatever way such lunatic pauper is brought before him.—R. v. RHYDDLAN (INHABITANTS) (1850), 14 Q. B. 327; 4 New Mag. Cas. 51; 4 New Sess. Cas. 97; 19 L. J. M. C. 110; 14 L. T. O. S. 464; 14 J. P. 368; 14 Jur. 269; 117 E. R. 129.

1732. Sufficiency of contents.]—When a pauper lunatic has been removed to an asylum by an order under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 100, s. 48, justices may adjudicate upon the settlement, under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 126, s. 58, & an order may be made upon the parish of the settlement, under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 126, s. 62, for payment of expenses. Such order of removal cannot be brought up by certiorari. If it be so brought up, the objection to the certiorari may be taken on the return. It is no valid objection, that the order for payment of expenses sets forth the order of removal, & the adjudication of the settlement, by way of recital, without finding that the statements in such order & adjudication are true. The order may be for payment of a sum specified as reasonable at the time of the order, "or such other weekly sum as the proprietor of the said house shall hereafter, & from time to time, reasonably charge." The order for payment being brought up by certiorari, it is no valid objection, that the order of removal appears by affidavit to have been given by a clergyman who was not the officiating clergyman of the parish from which the removal was made. Nor that it does not appear by the order of adjudication that, before adjudication, any notice was given to the parish in which it is adjudged that the pauper is settled. Nor that the order for payment recites an adjudication that, the parish "was the place of the last legal settlement" of the lunatic, without further stating the time of the settlement. Nor that such order does not state the pauper to have been chargeable to the parish from which he was removed. Nor that the

by poor removal. By poor removal. came into operation on Mar. 25, 1862, paupers are made chargeable upon the common fund of the Union:—Held: whatever might be the effect of sect. 6 with regard to the apportionment of part & future costs, the order being made before the coming into operation of the new Act, was good in form.—*DROITWICH UNION GUARDIANS & CLAINES PARISH OVERSEERS v. 1738. An order adjudging the settlement of a lunatic pauper to be in B. & ordering B. to pay the costs of his maintenance, founded on a settlement acquired in B. by the lunatic in 1831, was made in Oct. 1852, at the instance of the parish of I. It appeared, however, that an order removing the lunatic from I. to B. founded on a birth settlement in 1804, was made on Feb. 7, 1852, & was, on Sept. 27, 1852, on appeal quashed on the merits:—Held: the decision of Sept. 1852, estopped I. from obtaining the order of Oct. 1852.—*HESTON OVERSEERS v. In Sept. 1851 orders were made adjudicating the settlement of the pauper to be in I., & directing I. to pay the expenses of maintenance. After the passing of 16 & 17 Vict. c. 97, I. refused to pay, & the justices issued a distress warrant on the former order:—Held: the warrant of distress was illegal, the order of maintenance on I. was annulled by the statute in question, & it was not necessary for I. to take any steps to get rid of the order of maintenance, or to fix the liability on M.—*KNOWLES v. 1742. By action in county court—Effect of previous adjudication of settlement.—In 1891 the guardians of the poor of the Stow Union obtained an order in petty sessions adjudicating the settlement of a pauper lunatic to be N. & ordering the guardians of the N. Union to pay the S. C. Asylum a certain sum for the maintenance & expenses of the lunatic. On appeal to the quarter sessions this order was affirmed, & the appeal was dismissed. The order of quarter sessions was brought up to the High Ct. on certiorari & quashed on the ground that one of the magistrates who adjudicated was interested, being a guardian. In Dec. 1896, two justices of the county of S. made an order under Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), s. 287, whereby they adjudged the lunatic to be settled in the Stow Union. A claim was then brought by the S. C. Asylum to recover from the Stow Union the expense of maintenance of the pauper lunatic. The county ct. judge held that he could not go behind the order of Dec. 1896, for although it was merely a provisional order, yet it was good on the face of it, & he therefore gave judgment for pl'ts. Defts. appealed:—Held: (1) the county ct. judge was bound to take judicial notice of the order adjudicating the settlement of the pauper lunatic, which was made in June, 1891; that order made in petty sessions was not affected by the quashing on certiorari of the affirming order by quarter sessions; (2) the order under Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), s. 287, was merely ministerial, & the judge could go behind it & take judicial notice of the order of settlement which was still in force.—SUFFOLK COUNTY LUNATIC ASYLUM v. About nine months after, justices made an order adjudicating the settlement of the pauper to be in S. in the union of H., in the county of Y., & ordering the union to pay the expenses of the conveyance to the asylum, & of the lodging, etc., there, under 16 & 17 Vict.

c. 97, s. 99. On appeal against the order for payment, it was objected that such order was bad, inasmuch as by sect. 102 such expenses, in the case of a pauper lunatic who would at the time of the conveyance to the asylum have been exempt from removal to the parish of his settlement by reason of Poor Removal Act, 1846 (c. 66), are to be paid by the parish where the exemption has been acquired, & not by the parish of settlement; & that, under Poor Removal Act, 1846 (c. 66), s. 4, no warrant could be granted for removal of any person becoming chargeable in respect of relief made necessary by sickness, unless it was stated in the warrant that the justices granting it were satisfied that the sickness would produce permanent disability; & that it appeared in this case that the lunacy was not such a sickness:—Held: Poor Removal Act, 1846 (c. 66), s. 4, was inapplicable, & the order for payment good.

(2) Under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 97, s. 107, three guardians of M. sent to the union of H. a copy of the order for payment, with the place of confinement, the grounds of adjudication, & the particulars of settlement relied upon. They signed their names to this, adding "guardians of the poor of the said township of M.": but to one of the three names no other address was added:—Held: the statement, if not good under sect. 107, was amendable under sect. 112.—*R. v. 1749. ———.]—A person who had acquired exemption from removal by residence in a certain union, became insane & was sent to a pauper lunatic asylum. Some months afterwards she was released on trial & resided for about seven weeks with her relations in another union, when she got worse & was again received into the asylum. At the time of her release her mental capacity was such that she was incapable of exercising any independent choice as to her residence. A magistrate's order was obtained ex parte, under Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), ss. 287, 294, directing payment by the union in which the lunatic had acquired exemption from removal of the expenses of her removal to the asylum & her maintenance there after she had been received into the asylum a second time. Subsequently they gave notice to the asylum that they would cease paying for her maintenance as a private patient. The clerk to the asylum thereupon gave notice to the guardians of the Macclesfield Union that the lunatic had been transferred to the list of pauper patients chargeable to their union. The guardians accordingly paid a sum for her maintenance:—Held: none of the provisions of 16 & 17 Vict. c. 97, applied to the circumstances of the case; the lunatic was not chargeable to the Macclesfield Union; the payment by that union was made under a mistake; & consequently an order upon the Ipswich Union to repay the sum was bad.—IPSWICH UNION GUARDIANS v. lunatic, & the bringing him before a justice, & the conveying him to the asylum, & the costs of maintenance for the last twelve months preceding, etc.:—Held: it is not competent for the justice making such last-named order of maintenance to inquire into the validity of the order of admission to the asylum, & the existence of such an order gives jurisdiction to make the order of maintenance.

(2) The jurisdiction of justices under sect. 97 of that Act to adjudge the settlement of a pauper lunatic & make an order for his maintenance, attaches where he is de facto confined in an asylum; & their order is not invalidated by the fact that he was sent there by a justice who had no jurisdiction.—FAVERSHAM (CHURCHWARDENS, ETC.) v. 1759. Right of parish to recover from union—Refusal of auditor to re-open accounts.]—In 1854 a pauper lunatic was sent to an asylum at the charge of the parish of C., in which she had acquired the status of irremovability; her maintenance was charged to C., & allowed in the half yearly audits until Michaelmas, 1860, when the overseer of C. objected that they ought to be charged to the common fund of the Union to which C. belonged. The auditor disallowed the costs for the six months ending Michaelmas, 1860, against the parish, & transferred them to the common union fund account, but refused to re-open the accounts previously audited. On motion to vary the allowance, brought up by certiorari under Poor Law Amendment Act, 1844 (c. 101), s. 35, by crediting the parish of C. with the sums paid in previous years & debiting the common fund of the union with those sums:—Held: the auditor did right in not re-opening the accounts previously audited.—R. v. 1760. Right of authority to time for examination of accounts.]—The accounts of the guardians for the year ending Sept. 30, 1909, showing a sum to be due from the council to the guardians in respect of the cost of maintenance of pauper lunatics during that year, were lodged with the county council on Dec. 1, 1909. The next meeting of the council after Dec. 1, 1909, was on Feb. 16, 1910, & that was followed by a meeting on Mar. 16. There were in the county nineteen poor law unions whose accounts had to be examined by the council, & the examination would take some weeks. The finance committee at a meeting on Feb. 22, 1910, passed the accounts, & the council at their meeting in Mar. made an order for payment of the amount due, & the amount was paid. The guardians in the meantime brought an action on Jan. 31, 1910, against the council to recover the amount appearing on the accounts to be due:—Held: the amount did not become payable until the necessary time had elapsed to make the payment by the county council lawful, that is to say, until the council had a reasonable time to examine the accounts & until after the meetings of the finance committee & the councils, & therefore no cause of action had arisen when the action was commenced.—CALNE UNION v.
